DANGER OF WAR HANGS LIKE CLOUD SAYS RED CHIEF

700 Military Planes Fly Over Red Square at Ceremonies

'RED ARMY READY'

Every Type of Airplane is Paraded Above Lenin Tomb

(By John Lloyd)

MOSCOW, May 1—(AP)—Ninety 700 military planes roared over Red Square today in the most imposing demonstration the Soviet has ever given of its aerial power while the Red Army passed in review in the annual May Day ceremonies.

The demonstration was followed by an address by Kliment Voroshiloff, Commissar for Defence, in which he said the danger of war "hangs like a heavy cloud over humanity."

"If war is imposed upon us, the enemy will get acquainted with our Red Army," he said. "There must not reproach themselves if that acquaintance is distasteful."

Every type of airplane from multi-motored bombers to one - manned and swift pursuit craft parsaded above the tomb of Lenin from which Joseph Stalin, dictator, reviewed the military display. Hundreds of tanks rumbled, meanwhile, over the cobbled pavement of the square.

Spectators counted 135 heavy bombing planes, alone during the impressive aerial demonstration. The air parade was led by the "Maxim Gorky", known as the world's largest land plane.

Voroshiloff, addressing the throng, said:

"Our country is doing everything possible to prevent war, and our strong army appears to be the best argument to this end. If war is imposed upon us the enemy will find there is a difference between the Czar's Army and our Red Army."

Miss Mystery Shopper Slips Thru Crowds, Escapes Recognition

Tells Reporter Interesting Stories of Her Experiences in Shops And on Streets—While She Recognizes People, They Do Not Recognize Her

Miss Mystery Shopper, one of the most enthusiastic features of the Belleville Retier Days Shopping Carnival arranged by the city's leading merchants, has been busy and has slipped through the crowded stores and along the streets of the business section of the city yesterday with the greatest of ease.

No sharp-eyed clerk or out-of-town shopper has yet recognized her. So far no one has confronted her with a section of the Daily Intelligencer, bearing a large printed advertisement, and some one of the merchants taking part in the Belleville Retier Days merchandising festival and asking her: "Pardon me, but, are You Miss Mystery Shopper?" And up to now no one has been awarded the cash prize of ten dollars for finding those simple rules.

"Although," added this 5 foot 7 inch, 120-pound blonde, mystery shopper, "I'm pleasant and instructive, don't always tell of the leading features of the city. "I was almost caught, if that will be known local housewife bearing down on me in the Metropolitan Stores, with a piece of paper in her hand and a gleam of recognition in her eye only lacer turned to the west. And if that young man in the Canadian Department Store only had a little more courage—"

Despite the fact that there is a price of ten dollars on her head for discovery and capture by the one who follows the simple rules, Miss Mystery Shopper is frankly enjoying her experiences in the stores and shops.

"It's exciting," she confided "It's lots of fun. I've been looking at everything from wash tubs in the Walker Hardware Company to chiffon hose in the Walker store, Mclean's Shoe Store, as well as Lipson's stores, and from electric light lamps in the Hydro Electric Shop to pictures of that beautiful cutlery and kitchen appliances in Sprouls, to radios in the Big "A" Company.

"Mrs. M—of Charles Street was in Woodley's the Furriers, when I tried on that gorgeous coat in the afternoon. But she was so engrossed in the child that was being fitted with that she didn't even notice me. And I was in Bowen and Delaney's a little later in the afternoon I saw Mrs. McK— trying on one of those beautiful ankle-trimmed coats. I didn't blame her for coveting it, and envy her too, because I know myself that furs look good on her dark, rich hair next winter. And Mrs. McK— is one of those women who is always well dressed.

"Haberdashery clerks are losing some of that self-consciousness I used to notice when it wasn't quite the style for women to parade into a mens wear store and look at the flowing ties and robes. Yesterday I watched Gordon and Robertson's, J. G. Shaw's and Symons' Men's Store and not one of the clerks so much as batted an eye. They merely smiled and bowed a little. If I'm not mistaken they have been tempted to splurge. But almost called it that will known local housewife bearing down on me in the Metropolitan Stores, with a piece of paper in her hand and a gleam of recognition in her eye only lacer turned to the west. And if that young man in the Canadian Department Store only had a little more courage—

Mystery Jar Full of Money Keeps Relief Parents Trembling

Springfield, Mo., May 1.—(AP)—Willis Bridges' family was on relief rolls all winter, his "seven kids crying for something to eat" —while Bridges tremblingly guarded $6,000.

Today Bridges, a 50-year-old farmer told his story, refreshed by three nights of good sleep, the first he has enjoyed since he with his wife but bunting last fall. Seeking meat for the family table, he found in an abandoned cellar on his farm near Stockton, a fruit jar full of money.

An agreement reached with his landlord to divide the bills relieved a terrific strain which began with his hunting discovery.

"I told my wife about it and we didn't know what to do," Bridges said. "I heard them talking down town that the gold notes wasn't legal, or something, so I was afraid to try to spend it.

"It hid it way out in a plowed field. But I couldn't sleep nights. I was thinkin' what if it was to get plowed up, or something."

Indian authorities of the State quickly agreed with Smithsonian authorities and historians who reported finding the chieftains were not "big shots."

Said old-timers who ought to know:

The chief's power was limited, their following was voluntary and their duties were different quite from the same tribe for different jobs.

In fact, Indians were downright socialists when it came to recognizing authority, preferring to follow their own ideas rather than those of erstwhile "leader", Grant Foreman, noted authority on Northern Indians implied here.

"The Cherokees, for example, had a war chief as distinguished from a civil chief who presided over peace councils," he said. "The war chief might collect men for an expedition, but follow them into battle."

Expert Denies Story

Washington, May 1 (CP)—Young Canada and the youth of the United States may chase Indian chiefs from their minds and hearts secure in the knowledge its query into Indian lore and not many text book creatures. For the leading United States authority on the Iroquois says, the Smithsonian Institution to the contrary notwithstanding, that there were Indian chiefs.

Dr. Arthur C. Parker of Rochester, formerly State Archaeologist and recognized successor to the late Dr. William Beauchamp of Syracuse, as revered United States authority on the history and folklore of the Six Nations—is a statement to the Washington Press today set Smithsonian authorities right on their declaration there were no real Indian chiefs."

"The Iroquois and many other groups," said Dr. Parker, "certainly had civil and military leaders with authority within their fields was not disputed save for failure to perform expected functions."

Referring to the protest of Brant-ford, Ont., Indians, Smithsonian to the Smithsonian bulletin, Dr. Parker said:

"The Canadian authority who refutes that the Six Nations of the Iroquois had civil chiefs is correct. Iroquois civil sachems constituted a council specially organized by ancient regulations as definite as those of the United States Senate and with even greater decorum.

"Washington, Bureau may mean to the Indian, Indian government there was no executive function capable of acting in emergencies.

"With the Indians, however, social pressure took care of that. With the Indian a council decision was binding on the group as an entity and was not broken from within. They would have arisen the statement that there were no chiefs resting quietly in fact is only mincing definitions".

CAR CRASHES TREE TWO ARE INJURED

Miss Bernice Davison of City and Ernest Smith Occupants

Miss Bernice Davison, of this city, and Mr. Ernest Smith, at the R.C.A.F., Trenton, were both seriously injured when the automobile which the former was driving, crashed into a tree on a curve just west of Belleville at 2.30 a.m. today. Miss Davison, still unconscious at the side of the road for a period of over one hour, the two injured persons were brought to the Belleville General Hospital in separate ambulances.

The reports from the hospital at 5 p.m. today were to the effect that Miss Davison's condition was "critical" while Mr. Smith was said to be "seriously injured."

The accident happened about one-half mile west of Riley's Corners, when the motor car skidded on the slippery pavement and failed to make a left hand turn on the road. The vehicle crashed against an elm tree, driving the engine back into the front seat, where the two occupants of the car were seated. Miss Davison sustained a fracture of right ankle, severe internal injuries and possible skull fracture, while Mr. Smith sustained a broken hip and injuries to his left shoulder.

Miss Davison was removed to the Belleville General Hospital in the city ambulance, while Mr. Smith was taken to that institution in the Bell ambulance. The car, a two-toned persons lay unconscious along the road for a while until passing motorists or other motor cars passed without stopping. Courageously Mr. Smith pulled himself to the side of the road and summoned the assistance of a passing motorist, who in turn notified the local and provincial police, who investigated and provided the ambulance service.

SCRIBBLED NOTE FROM YOUNG SON ARRIVES AT 2 P.M.

Young Than's Letter Last Condemned Man May Read

NO LAST REQUESTS

A fortorn, little message scribbled in pencil on a piece of plain paper from his only son, 14-year-old Than and addressed from San Bernardino, California was one of the last letters Harold Worden Vermilyea will read on this earth. The message, the contents of which were not divulged was received with a small batch of other mail for the condemned man at the county court house shortly before two o'clock this afternoon. Beside his elbow as he read the letter from his son stood a small stack of letters written in Vermilyea's own flowing hand, and addressed to friends and relatives throughout this country and the United States. In the letters Arthur Vermilyea, doomed to die on the gallows in the jail yard this morning tonight, spending his last hours in the condemned cell.

Vermilyea was early this morning after a restful night. One of the jail guards was first to rise and a hair cut. This was done by one of the jail guards in the cell block shortly before two o'clock and watched on. Following the hair cut, and shave his second request was for a stock of writing paper and a pencil. This he got and seated on the blanket on the floor he spent hours engaged in this task.

Spends Day Writing

Vermilyea ate a simple breakfast, cakes, grape fruit and oranges, but the evening meal the night before was a hearty one, and after midnight he ate nothing. Shortly after two o'clock and spend an hour or so with the condemned man. Up to the present no reference has been made by Vermilyea to his brother or other relatives of the hanging even though the date of the hanging is only hours away.

The condemned man will walk unassisted to the scaffold, with the same determination that has been exhibited by him ever since the sentence of death was pronounced. This is evident by the fact that he appears to worry little over his fate and has apparently accepted the inevitable with a cool appraisal of what lays before. Some time this afternoon he asked if he could get a razor.

Hour of Execution Secret

When the actual hanging will take place in the jail yard is a closely guarded secret. It is only known to a few of the officials and it is generally understood that it will be carried out at any hour after midnight tonight, but before daylight. Only a select few officials at the county jail were singularly mum when an effort was made to get from them the secret. Vermilyea will be executed to be sure.

No Frost in May? Don't be Too Sure

"Frost in May? Don't be too sure that we won't get it," warned a well known gardener today in commenting on the unseasonable weather ushered in on the first day of the present month.

"I haven't commenced setting out my garden yet, and I'd advise you not to be in too much of a hurry," he added. We had a frost a March as far as warm weather goes, and we just might have to pay for it later on."

Last night temperatures descended to a dangerously low level for the cold weather, riding through the district on a breeze from the north stopped just above the freezing point. Lowest mark registered during the night was just one point above freezing, but no frost damage was reported in the growing shoots now several inches above ground.

The two lads, Charles Copeland age 15 and Frank Archard age 14, failed to return to their respective homes following dismissal from school yesterday afternoon. Trenton police were of the opinion that the two lads had left in search of youthful excitement.

Activities in and around local police circles were at a very low ebb during the past 24 hours not even a motor accident being reported in the city limits. Fifteen transients were admitted to the police cells last night and slumbered peacefully in warm quarters. Another of police court was necessary in Belleville today.

KAYLA MITZEL GIVES RECITAL

Performance by Young Toronto Violinist Brilliant

Breathing the very spirit of music and with a magic of expression which makes the most difficult compositions a delight for her to play and for her audiences to hear, Kayla Mitzel, of Toronto, a young Toronto girl, who has made her way in music through sheer genius with the violin, pleased more than five hundred Belleville and district music lovers at the Collegiate auditorium on Tuesday evening. Miss Mitzel was the last artist to appear in the season's series of three concerts under the auspices of the Belleville Concert Association.

Kayla Mitzel, who is twenty, has been to the fore in musical ranks for some years. Years ago she played in Toronto with the Symphony Orchestra at a twilight recital and then gave promise of that future in her chosen art which is already reality being, furthermore Today she stands as the polished and experienced artist with an exquisite sense of every phase of music, a charm of personality which delights hearers, an emotional grasp of the different numbers she plays and an excellency of technique, together with inspiration and fire which always go with the outstanding artist. Only a few years as she is, her musical age is far advanced. There is a complete absence of the methodic and painstaking, all seems pure art and sheer inspiration as her bow crosses the strings.

Miss Mitzel opened the program with the old Italian "La Folia" of Corelli, and followed with Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" in the three movements Allegro moderato, andante and rondo in the second group.

In the third series, she played such outstanding number for the violin, as Paganini's "Caprice No. 20", the Brahms-Joachim "Hungarian Dance No. 7", Bloch's "Nigun" and the Paganini-Kreisler arrangement "Flight of the Humble Bee", which the artistry of the young virtuoso was clearly marked and her grasp of musical color was revealed in all it richness.

Her fourth group was composed of the Tschaikowsky selections, "Variations on a theme by Corelli", the Stransky-Dushkin "Serenade" and Da Falla's "Danse Espagnole".

Miss Mitzel's art charms, and sings its way into the heart of the audience. She brings to her work the dash and enthusiasm of youth together with the dignity and experience which might be expected only of an older player of a perfection of tone and of technique. Even her extremely modern number "Berceuse" by Stravinsky while catching the modern mood brought with it a wealth of beautiful tone and modern interpretation, which could not fail to please. She entirely avoids the sensational in her work and possesses emotionless and beauty of phrasing. She has the poise of the real artist.

Gwendolyn Williams, who has been heard in Belleville on previous occasions was the talented accompanist. Her work at the piano was at all times of the highest order. During the evening a very large number of persons subscribed for next season's series of concerts which will be arranged.

Travel Letters

No. 1
By G. M. JAMES
Travelling Representative of
THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

Hello! Toronto!

For the third time in three years the writer begins a series of articles for The Ontario Intelligencer for the following reasons:

1. Throughout our extensive travels we have failed to find a newspaper which equals yours for the quality of The Ontario Intelligencer for general and local news. It is a very credit to all concerned and a distinct asset for Belleville and eastern Ontario.

2. The writer greatly admires the man who has had sufficient courage and faith to invest a freighter in a complete, modern, printing plant in a small city of thirteen thousand people like Belleville and he feels it both a pleasure and a duty to assist that enterprise in every way possible both by word and deed. Belleville is undoubtedly there are many others who feel and act similarly.

3. For over a score of years the writer has been treated like a prince by the people of Belleville and surrounding district. They have been very generous and kind to the writer from time to time, hence these humble lines try to express the feelings of a grateful heart.

The writer will be now on their way for fair flung distant shores with tickets and diversified details arranged. The many friends of Mrs. James will be pleased to learn that she will dictate from time to time here and chat regularly for the visitor eyes and ears.

We have been in Toronto for a whole week and not a single young man has asked us for a dime "for a cup of coffee". Belleville has not been so fortunate for a long time.

Excellent meals are served everywhere in Toronto at new low prices. The twenty-five cent breakfast is worthy of another look from those who before had anything so excellent for twice the money. Other meals are correspondingly cheap. This is one reason why so many people like to visit or live in Toronto.

BIG BUSINESS

The writer always visits a Toronto department store every time he comes to Toronto because he personally knew its founder and also because he has followed its wonderful growth throughout half a century. Having known his late career in a small store down the village where the writer was born about thirty miles west of Toronto. Five hundred dollars would have bought him an interest in that small store. The writer as a chubby little lad spent his pennies in that store for candies and this small selling man always filled his eager, open hands to the limit. Then this boy became a man and married a girl from the same business in a small way, but it grew within a generation to be one of the largest departmental stores in the world. Its motto was and is "cheaper than others; satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded". Until recently placards throughout the store announced, "Smoking prohibited on account of insurance regulations". Now they read, "Please smoke elsewhere" and smoking is general wherever food is served, but that great founder is dead. Some will be glad to learn that he died rich from promote or retard prosperity. This brief history of Big Business should be of interest to young people because anything that has been done once can be done again.

HIGHLY FLAVORED KISSES

The street car service in Toronto is far more satisfying than a year ago. During the rush hours in the morning and evening when people are going to work or returning, the conditions are so disgraceful that Toronto the "Good" should be ashamed of itself. Well dressed men, women and young girls stand in densely packed cars to work, stand all day as they toil, and stand again squeezed like sardines in the evening. Some people have only the breath of life remains to these exhausted mortals. They feel so nearly dead that their smoke and body odor drinks remain sure that they are really still alive! And these passengers are packed like sardines in a can, packed up their hands in holy horror and scream, "Our youth are going to perdition". Some have had their clothes ripped and decency destroyed and drink until they are old, jaded, white as a corpse when they should be as lovely and sweet as a rosebud. Then they grow up their licentiousness and debauchery with rouge and powder but the sparkle, hatred and youthful glee of the eye is gone; young men no longer crave their highly flavored kisses. That does explain and account for the many times the width of honestly, is it not a fact that our young people are more sinned against than sinning? Are we sinful nations? Belleville, Toronto and Toronto University once said in my hearing, "We are only half civilized". Often the writer ponders on these words during our modern days and wonders if we are civilized. Some day the Christian Science people will play the game fully and fair if they are given a reasonable chance.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

We found larger crowds than usual engaged in Easter shopping and this prompted us to visit the boardwalk at Sunnyside on the afternoon of this Good Friday. This boardwalk is about three times the width of our widest sidewalks at Belleville, about two miles long and closely follows the shore of Lake Ontario. Sunnyside is about five miles from the centre of Toronto and reminds one of Coney Island, Brighton Beach or the Atlantic City. Several thousand young men and women were on parade in high glee and unconscious enjoyment. Many were the admirers sat on benches which bordered the entire course. Thousands of cars were parked along the two mile course. Although ever colour in the rainbow (and then some more) was in the main becomingly worn yet there were some favorites. Mrs. James was impressed with the predominance of green, grays and browns, particularly the former. Green was worn by a little shorter, about half way between the knee and the ankle. Two pieces dresses were extremely popular. Large hats in rough straw were favorites, also round sailor hats, and hats turned off the face. The sailor hats were tipped jauntily on one side as usual. Mrs. James reports that the summer girl could not be more charming in her sheer check gingham and plenty of linen dresses.

Our gentlemen readers may be interested to learn that not one girl in a hundred in that immense Easter parade possessed the charm of a beautiful face though each would get by as to figure. The chief defects were large nose, small chin, small features, swollen eyes and Belleville still has more beautiful women of all ages to the square foot than any other place we know. Of course the obvious moral is for you to go to Belleville to get married and after that have a real honeymoon once a year.

CURE FOR DIVORCE

There would never be a divorce if married people would use a little common sense. What actually happens? A young man and a young woman love each other devotedly each regards each for the other. They are married and have a wonderful honeymoon. Then life begins in earnest; she strives for a happy home and he tries to lay the wealth of the whole world at her feet because she is a queen. He becomes more and more concerned in his work or business until sooner or later they are seemingly worlds apart and strangers. Then she says, "John, I married you because I loved you and because I wanted to help you and make you happy. (Picture—A flood of tears and a pretty face disfigured by awful agony). Now just what was happened? I am your cook, I mend your socks and bring up your children but you are a stranger to me and my home; you are married to your business, you never give me the slightest consideration any more."

"Now Clara," meekly replies the guilty husband, "you know I love you and that my only thought is to give everything you need so that your friends will respect and like you."

"I don't want things and respect, I want your company and love as it once was. I prefer that to everything else in the world, because I am lo[illegible]

Take her away [illegible] and [illegible] and her sweetness and say pretty things and [illegible] but above all make her happy in her own way at least once a year. The results are easier imagined than described. The late Lord Strathcona began life as plain Donald Smith but he practiced the annual honeymoon plan with great material success and matrimonial happiness. When his wife died he piled a mountain of flowers upon her coffin in the good old use of my millions, when she is not here to share it with me?"

THE LITTLE THEATRES

Per half a century the writer has attended more or less frequently a famous church in Toronto, and it is a great pleasure to record that the Easter Sunday morning service in that church was the most inspiring in all his experience. Every seat (about fifteen hundred) was occupied and two out of every three were under the age of thirty. We were much delighted because we had not seen such an audience for several years. The congregation sang so well that the gigantic organ had to use full power to be heard. The sermon, "Evidences of Immortality", was splendidly delivered in a new setting with fresh illustrations, although the essential points were as old as The Sermon on the Mount. The minister was a Scotchman under forty and his interest with the interest young people. He spoke slowly and simply with frequent pause, and used not a single un-

A person's age doesn't necessarily indicate that glasses should or should not be used. Neither does a person's vision. necessary word. The young people were able to absorb and digest every thought. But the service was exceptional from another point of view, the appeal for funds. A workman has a tender conscience and he knows how to turn it to good account.

The collection will now be taken up to carry on the Lord's work in this church. To whom much is given much will be required."

We were amazed at the simplicity of this appeal but we soon had good reason to be startled at its effectiveness. Large brass plates, highly polished, were passed to and fro and every coin sounded like a gong as it came to rest on them. The larger the coin, the louder the claims of generosity. A blind man could tell how contributions were progressing around him. We sat about the centre of the church and by the time a plate reached us, the sound was deafening to pass it in safety. No person could doubt the effectiveness of that Scotch appeal to conscience. The writer's last tour we heard two other appeals which form a striking contrast.

1. One minister at the evening service scolded his congregation as follows: "The ushers are about to take up the collection; we need larger offerings badly. I am told that not a few people refrain from depositing even a nickle with which to pay for the light that illuminates their hymn books."

2. Another minister: "The ushers tell me that the collection plate often reminds them of a buffalo national park: brethren, let us be more generous." (The reference was to the head of a buffalo on so many American nickles).

ONTARIO EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

For seventy-four years this parliament of teachers has assembled once a year to discuss educational problems and to devise ways and means of educating youth. Changes in matter and method have been continuous because conditions of life are ever changing.

This year is famous for many reasons which will soon become apparent. The convention was divided into twenty-five sections with a secretary and chairman for each. Many resolutions were passed, perhaps a high record in more ways than one.

Each of the twenty-five sections summarized the high lights of the various meetings. As follows:

1. The public school course is to be turned upside down and ready for action by September 1936. Then the secondary school will be much scrapped and revised.

2. Extra marks and tests are expected to be ready for the opening of the schools after the summer holidays including Middle School Geometry and Chemistry, as well as Public School Civics and the elementary science.

3. The teacher is to become the mainspring and dominant force in education. Freedom and fitness (mental and physical) will become the watchwords.

4. Teachers will be allowed greater freedom in the choice and use of texts.

5. Latin and Geometry will become optional subjects and under such conditions they are likely to pass into oblivion.

6. The system of recommendations by teachers will be gradually extended to replace examinations in public schools, secondary schools and colleges.

All the changes proposed and contemplated are due to changed conditions and to a great extent to lessen the enormous expenditures for education. The writer has been attending the meetings of the Education Association for over half a century and he can find no better words to describe what is transpiring than a "bloodless but beneficent revolution". Methods and studies which are loved by the traditions of two thousand years are ever on the defensive as were the Caesars.

"The big shots have only themselves to blame. They would not tolerate translations or keys to make certain subjects more palatable. They proudly clung to senseless traditions and actually urged that to publish or sell a translation or key to a classic was a criminal act. Now they have to pay royalty to their folly in the bread line."

These are only a few of the laments poured into the writer's ears during the past few days.

"But Mr. James, you have done your part nobly for over ten years to avert the avalanche which now overwhelms us. Nevertheless I am proud to be among (the few behind the throne) have preferred to break rather than bend. Your help have been appreciated in almost every section of the land and will now come into your own. Most of the teachers and all the students praise your publications to the skies." Modesty prevents the writer from repeating more cordial words.

In a few days we will be in New York and until then "best wishes to all".

Mr. G. A. Hodgson Addresses Scholars on Safety Measures

Between eleven and twelve hundred scholars of the Centre Victoria and Queen Alexandra Public Schools heard Mr. G. A. Hodgson, Chief Examiner of Drivers, Motor Vehicle Branch, Department of Public Highways on Tuesday afternoon as he visited these institutions to address the scholars on safety measures.

Summoned into the assembly rooms the pupils gave a fine demonstration of the value of drill exercises. The precision and the speed with which they could clear their rooms was amazing. said the examiner that if all motorists could but see the value of such training there would be no collisions, so effective would be the object lesson to them.

The talk was made such that the youngest child could understand that it was for his and her benefit that so much danger from accidents to have Mr. Hodgson speak to the children.

The examiner expressed his appreciation of the privilege of addressing the young scholars.

Time did not permit visits to all the schools.

SOCIETY HOLDS FINAL MEETING

St. Andrew's Young People' Guild Hear Fine Program

Stirling, May 1—On Monday evening April 29th, St. Andrew's Young People's Guild held their last meeting before closing for the summer recess. The meeting was held in the Sunday school room, where, in spite of the rainy weather a large attendance representing both St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, and St. Andrew's, West Huntingdon who joined them on this occasion, listened with great interest to the splendid musical program supplied by a large group of musicians from the Belleville barracks of the Salvation Army. Giving a very complete program of instrumental and vocal numbers, they delighted their audience and responded willingly to their applause with numerous encores.

The meeting was opened by Rev. J. A. Kofferd with the singing of that old favorite hymn "Stand Up Stand Up For Jesus" and prayer. The minister then read the Scripture lesson for the evening found in the Gospel of St. John the twelfth chapter, verses twelve to twenty-one. The usual business of the meeting was omitted from this program, and this time Rev. J. A. Kofferd gave a short address of welcome to the visitors to whom he said the guild was very grateful bringing what he knew would be an unusually fine program. He then called on Sgt. Maj. Hart to act as chairman for the balance of the evening.

Before announcing the first number Mr. Hart expressed the wish that the program which was almost entirely musical would be helpful as well as entertaining to the audience. These men love good music and considered it a service to God to bring enjoyment to others with the aid of their instruments. Without any further delay he introduced the following numbers which were offered by Carlo respective order:

March: "Gladstone Melody"; By the entire group.

Vocal Selection: "Comrades in Arms"; Male chorus.

Cornet Duet: "Captain and Lieutenant"; Deputy Bandmaster and Band Secretary.

Vocal Selection: "Sweet and Low"; Male chorus.

Hymn Tune: "Deep Harmony"; Instrumental group.

Saxophone Solo: "Rocked In The Cradle of the Deep"; Bandsman F. Wardle.

Recitation: "The Twins"; Deputy Bandmaster J. Green.

Vocal Selection: "The Soldier's Chorus"; Male voices.

Cornet Solo: "Silver Threads"; Deputy Bandmaster J. Green.

Selection: "For You I Am Praying"; The Band.

March: "Montreal Citadel"; The entire group.

God Save The King.

This was an excellent musical evening heartily enjoyed by everyone present and the various members were so splendidly given that nearly every presentation called for an encore. Throughout the evening at several intervals the audience were called upon to join in the singing of many inspiring marches by which words of old favorite hymns were used.

Words of praise were offered by Mr. Arthur Duncan in moving a vote of thanks on behalf of the Guild to these visitors who had journeyed from Belleville through the rain, had no doubt given up other engagements to be present at Stirling. They had given a program that required a great deal of preparation and the Guild was truly grateful for this brotherly gesture. Mr. Charlie Allen organist, in seconding the motion also offered congratulation for the manner in which the programme was given.

Rev. J. A. Kofferd closed this part of the meeting with prayer after which the young ladies of the organization served a delicious lunch and a very pleasant social hour was enjoyed by all. There will be no more meetings of the association until fall when it is expected that a reorganization meeting will be called and the good work of the past season will go forward in the same successful manner as it has throughout the winter months.

St. Paul's Y.P.S.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Society was held in the church parlours on Monday evening April 29th with a good number of the members present. The program for the evening was provided by the khaki division.

Mr. Harry Hulin, President, was in charge of the devotional portion of the meeting which was opened with a song service, Mr. Fred Eagle left in prayer and Miss Ruth Martin read the Scripture lesson for the evening. Mrs. Nora Westcott, Secretary gave a report of the last meeting. Rev. R. W. Rowland at the time spoke of the illness of little Bobbie Kofferd, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kofferd and requested those present to observe a two minute silent prayer for his safety. At the end of the two minutes Rev. Mr. Rowland offered prayer for the son.

An interesting feature on the program was the passing around of slips of paper on which was written some helpful notation. As the holder of each slip read aloud the words found upon it Mr. Rowland carefully explained its significance and meaning. Mrs. Fannie Lansing then offered a very pleasing solo entitled "Trees" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. W. Rowland.

The next number was an instrumental duet by Misses Pearl and Ruby Stapley, accompanied by Mrs. Rowland at the piano, entitled "Forget Me Not."

The very instructive topic was dealt with in a fine manner by Mrs. John Holmes, who spoke on the subject "The Little Things of Life," after listening to her fine discussion on the subject which was well planned and delivered in a manner that was entertaining as well as promoting a great deal of sound thinking on the part of her listeners. Many present felt that sufficient thought was not given to the little things in life. We forget that success is based upon the manner in which we attend to all our duties large or small and to look at the smaller things of life is to grow careless of the more important things.

Miss Marion Jones was responsible for the very interesting contest which was heartily entered into by everyone present. The color scheme was taken and the blue section gained the honors for the meeting, which was closed with the repeating of the Mispah Benediction.

Personals

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kofferd will be sorry to learn of the illness of their son Bobbie who is suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis; all his friends wish him a speedy recovery and hope to see him at play again soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Flavelle of Toronto, were week end guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kofferd.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Francis spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Emerson in Tweed.

The King and the Army

WHILE the King's first love has always been the navy, he has also taken an active part in military matters.

As well as being Admiral of the Fleet, he is also a Field Marshal in the army and is General-in-Chief of the Royal Air Force. But his activity does not cease there for he is honorary Colonel-in-Chief or General-in-Chief of practically every British military unit.

Though these positions are largely honorary, King George makes use of them to keep in close touch with British military affairs.

An expert on naval strategy, he is often consulted on army manoeuvres as well. His capacity of sovereign makes it paramount that the officials surrounding him are members of military and naval orders, which is why the King appears so often in uniform at official functions. Our picture to-day shows the King in uniform of Field Marshall, reviewing his troops.

During the war, the King did not interfere with his officers, although he had every authority, to do so. He relied entirely upon the experienced judgment of his army and navy leaders, but was often consulted and just as often advised.

During the Silver Jubilee celebrations this year, there will be a gigantic military and naval review. In his royal yacht, the King and Queen will review the Grand Fleet; Aldershot will again be the scene of mimic wars, and the air will be filled with flying daredevils of the Royal Air Force.

CHAIN LETTERS

A chain letter has made its appearance in Canada after having been worked in the United States. This one does not carry the threat of dire calamity for disregard of the injunction to pass it on to a stated number of others for the purpose of bringing good fortune, as used to be the way with some of the old nuisance chains which offered a blessing or trouble.

The new chain letter offers reward in its own way, by the promise of ten cents to be sent to the original sender. Big rewards are dangled before the innocent. But of course that does not work. It must run out. No one ever ran a business on that line and any letter to be worthwhile must be on a business basis and chain letters are not of that kind or at least a worthwhile letter of this kind has not yet been invented.

Authorities will pounce upon any writer [of a chain letter asking for money] who can be found and convicted. Most people are not silly enough to put 10 cents in a letter to the sender and then hope to make money by receiving coin in response to [letters of the same kind.

In the old style letter which threatens calamity for disregard of the notice there is the danger that some weak minds might fear to refuse to carry out the commands to pass on the letter. These should also be punished if there is any law to get them. Fortunately this type of letter, which is usually the work of people unbalanced in some respect, is becoming more rare.

"A PLEA TO THE BRITISH PRESS"

Premier Ramsay MacDonald has thought the time ripe for an outspoken statement on the question of the ethics of journalism, especially of the sensational kind, whose aim is huge circulations. Even staid Britain has its sensational newspapers as other lands have. He finds that the most ordinary event must be made "astounding", a monstrous scandal" or "sensational", that rumor is made to take its place on the same footing as fact and the necessary hysteria is supplied by invention, which has not even the foundation of rumor.

Truth and the whole truth and nothing but the truth must be the ideal of the newspaper, no matter of the witness in question, whether it is published in a metropolitan city or in the smallest village. There is no excuse for distortion and falsification.

At the basis of affairs as he is in Britain, Mr. MacDonald knows what dangers can be created by the fictions and scandal-mongering of irresponsible journals. The appetite of the people for the type of journalism grows by feeding on half-truth or whole untruth or rumor. Never has the power of the press headline, even to the risk of causing international crisis through the manner of presenting the news which comes from the various capitals of Europe and the rest of the world as regards policies, wars and preparations for war.

A mighty weapon is in the hands of the press, if it can be used as a gentleman should use it, it is a source of danger.

The Premier Ramsay MacDonald's plea for cleaner work and better presentation of news will lead to improvement is the hope of every lover of his country.

TREES FOR THE GATHERING

In a fortnight or thereabouts thousands of bushels of elm seeds will be blowing about the streets of Winnipeg and in the parks—just a nuisance under foot.

Those elm seeds will produce trees, trees that will grow rapidly under favorable conditions.

Planted this spring, if they have normal moisture they will be a foot tall by autumn and grow rapidly next year.

They will not grow on the open prairie in a drought year. They will in a year of normal rainfall. But in any sort of year, they will grow on the banks of sloughs and lakes and streams.

They require very little work to plant, and once under way they will look after themselves—though the better, of course, for a little cultivation.

Here is an opportunity for service for the Boy Scouts or school children. A million elm seeds could be gathered in short order, and sent out to Boy Scout troops or schools in prairie centers for planting.

Carried out steadily for a few years, the reforestation of the prairie areas would be accomplished to a degree that the most ambitious plans today can hardly visualize.

Here is another idea: The Russian willow is an exceedingly hardy and fast growing tree. Cut off a branch, stick it in the ground, and in two or three years it becomes a bushy and vigorous tree. One Russian willow, growing in the Winnipeg area, can supply enough cuttings or branches to make a thick windbreak around a big garden plot on some prairie homestead, or around school grounds.

By these and other means the transformation of the prairie country can be accomplished easily and quickly and with little expense. It requires organization and work rather than a great sum of money.—Winnipeg Tribune.

JOHN BULL DRINKING LESS

In 1920 Great Britain's drink bill was the substantial one of $2,000,000,000. Last year, according to figures published in the London Times, it was $1,145,000,000. In 14 years there was a drop of more than $800,000,000.

Old John Bull, quite clearly, is drinking a lot less. Whether he has taken to new forms of relaxation, or of amusement, or is just tightening his belt in the matter of drink as in other things, the fact remains that the old "public house" is rapidly dying out, has become, in some centres, almost non-existent.

Perhaps the real reason is found in public education, in a campaign for temperance. The British, slow to go to extremes, have never troubled with prohibition, but they have built up a system of control and regulation, have made drinking more supervised and more respectable. This, with a steady pressure of temperance propaganda, with the propaganda ensing upon national efficiency rather than upon morals, appears to be making headway. It is the typical British way of doing things—and of doing them successfully. — Ottawa Journal.

FLOWER MARKETING IN ENGLAND

Few people are hardy enough to stay up till half-past six in the morning, but an invited company of about that entrance were rewarded at Covent Garden market by seeing a wonderful display of spring flowers grown in this country, the best of its kind we have yet produced. Nearly £15,000,000 a year is spent in Great Britain on cut flowers, and the Covent Garden flower market has doubled its trade in the last ten years. Mr. H. Miles, president of the British Flower Marketing Association, at the breakfast afterwards said that not only did the British flowergrowers now supply the bulk of the market but they were producing better flowers, and, of course, fresher, as they had a shorter distance to travel.

Years ago the flower-lover had to consider four flower seasons—daffodils and narcissi, tulips, roses and ornations, and chrysanthemums. Now we saw them all together, as well as orchids, South African marguerites, with their lovely pastel shades, sweet peas from Sussex, glorious pot plants. Carnations we were told are now second only to roses as the national favorites.

Someone said today that only Mayfair could afford the retail price of carnations. Mr. Miles said that was not so. The East End, he said, buy more and often more expensive flowers than the West End. The East End Jew would rather think of taking cheap flowers to a sick friend, and moreover at Jewish weddings there was always a great floral display. Greetings to the Ministry of Agriculture, more flowers are bought and sold in Great Britain than in any other country in the world.

It was argued that the more influence the people who sell them, and that flower porters are more polite than Smithfield porters who have a bovine outlook and disposition, Mr. Billingsgate porters, who suffer from a perpetual pain in the neck through carrying such heavy loads on their heads. Flower salesmen and porters, it was declared, live happy lives, and go to bed in the afternoon so as to be able to begin at three in the morning. — Manchester Guardian.

ENJOYING SUNSHINE

At Easter time, Britain takes a real holiday—in many communities extending from Thursday night to the following Tuesday. The silver jubilee celebrations next month will be followed by Whitsuntide in June, another great holiday time in the British isles.

Canada could well take a leaf out of the British holiday book. In the desperate pursuit of business on this continent, Whitsuntide has been almost completely forgotten. It is one of the most beautiful times of the year in this country. It should be made a great national occasion of excursions to the hills, lakes, woods and seashores, but the Canadian workers are kept with noses to the grindstone, bowed in a state of worship before the sign of the dollar.

Canada could be just as prosperous without so much of this devoted adherence to the gospel of hard work. It is true that a day off is taken about once a month in summer, beginning with May 24, on to Labor Day. With the harnessing of hydro-electric power to do more of the heavy work, however, some of the benefits should be distributed to the Canadian people in the form of more opportunities to enjoy sunshine and fresh air. Doubtless it will come in another generation.—Ottawa Citizen.

Real goodness does not attach itself merely to this life—it points to another world. Political or professional reputation cannot last forever, but a conscience void of offence before God and man is an inheritance for eternity.—Daniel Webster.

By desiring what is perfectly good, even when we do not quite know what it is, and cannot do what we would, we are part of the divine power against evil, widening the skirts of light and making the struggle with darkness narrower.—George Eliot.

SHADOWS

Every shadow ever shows
Something of the sun,
As, how long ago it rose,
Or how far it has run.
Even faulty human dense
This glad truth divines:
Shadows are but evidence
Light behind them shines!
Night is just a shadow cast
As the swift Earth turns
From the glory, golden, vast,
Where the white sun burns.
Only for a little time
Fall the veils of night,
The Earth swings to the sublime,
Never-failing light!

BELLEVILLE MEN'S CHORUS, one of the finest musical organizations in Canada, one that any community might well be proud of, presents a high class recital for the home folks, assisted by Frank Oldfield, Canada's leading baritone, and an entertainer of rare talent. The recital is given to wipe out a deficit. What happens? Fifty dollars is added to the deficit. Is it any wonder these musicians are discouraged. They give up one night a week in practice to perfect their art, spend money for music and other incidentals—give concerts for charity and other worthy purposes—once in a while they give a concert in an outside community for some worthy object. The people are amazed and jealous of the good fortune of Belleville in being the home town of such an organization. How poud they must be of it, those Belleville folks, say the outsiders. How eager they must be to support it generously..... Oh, Yeah! Fifty dollars deficit. Back to your radio!

"THERE OUGHT TO BE ROOM in the new Mark Twain Museum at Hannibal for a sketch of the humorist, together with George Cable and his manager, Major Pond, sitting down to luncheon in the old Revere House, Brockville, with that other genial soul, the late Dan Derbyshire, as they did fifty years ago." So says the Brockville Recorder, harking back to the memorable occasion half a century ago when Mark Twain and George Cable under the management of that famous collector of celebrities for the lecture stage, Major Pond, toured Canada and gave a lecture in Brockville. Whether they appeared in Belleville during their journey lives, a record for the oldest lecture attender extant does not remember this particular visitation, if and when. It will be remembered by admirers of Clemens (remember, Mark Twain) that this lecture tour was part of a program to pay his debts and recoup his fortunes after a disastrous venture into the publishing business which swept away the accumulated savings of years. It is gratifying to report that Mark Twain came back strong, after taking his way around the world and writing another book or two—all accomplished by dint of much heavy work, burning the midnight oil, and all that kind of thing. Now the hundredth anniversary of his birth is being celebrated in a nation-wide manner, but particularly in Hannibal, Mo., where he spent his boyhood days, and where Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, Becky Thatcher and other Mark Twain characters were born into the lives of millions of boys and girls all over the world.

TO LIVE TWENTY YEARS in the loneliest spot in the world and then to suddenly come face to face with the world of today in all of its wonderful phases, is the good fortune of Donald Glass, twenty years old, born on the island of Tristan da Cunha in the South Atlantic, twenty years ago, and now for the first time getting a glimpse of the greater world outside his lonely island home, having just arrived in New York City. Donald Glass is a descendant of one of the soldiers sent to Tristan a hundred years ago by Great Britain to prevent Napoleon from using the island as a stop-off point in his plot to escape from St. Helena where he was in banishment. He intends to continue on to England "where he will seek his fortune." Who would not give all that they possessed for the thrills in store for this young viking of the sea just awakened to the fact that he has interesting neighbors? Millions and millions of them. Tristan da Cunha? What romantic fancies often the name awakes, swinging memory back to those stirring incidents of other isles of the sea as related in "The Mutiny of the Bounty," "Men Against the Sea," "Pitcairn Island."

CANADA'S JUBILEE GIFT TO THEIR MAJESTIES

Perhaps the most precious single shipment that ever left Canada for Britain, is now in the strong room of Inner Aquitania. This is none other than Canada's gift box to King George V. It is a gold box measuring 18 x 14 x 3 inches elaborately decorated with hand-engraved crests of the nine Canadian provinces and the Dominion coat-of-arms, with maple leaf and crown borders. The box was designed and made by Henry Birks & Sons, and its inscription reads: "To His Most Excellent Majesty King George V humble address of the Senate and the House of Commons of Canada on the occasion of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee, 1935". The box will be presented to His Majesty on May 8.

For the past two months dust storms have swept over the drought stricken bowl" resulting in discomfort, distress and illness. Rain would settle the dust and enable farmers to start planting spring crops.

Turns Back on Cities

Former Racer Finds New Life Digging Gold

By Central Press Canadian

Vancouver, May 1—"Those of us who live in the hills wouldn't come back to the city for any consideration," declared a bronzed, lithe man wearing a plaid lumberjack and with fur collar.

The speaker was Harry Hooper, known as Vancouver's "Barney Oldfield" in the early days of automobile racing. He is now a placer miner operating in the Williams Lake district and he has found that life in the open air is much preferable to that in town.

When he is not working with his small hydraulic outfit, Hooper cultivates several acres of ground at his diggings in the Cariboo. As a result he raises all the cantaloupes, melons, potatoes, cabbage and other kitchen vegetables he needs. "We're independent of the city now" he says with pride.

No Fear of Depression

Although placer miners are not making fortunes, the depression holds no fears for them, Hooper declares. He has been working his present leases for four years.

Placer miners have one serious complaint to make, however. The regulation which prevents the mint receiving less than two ounces of gold, even in a distinct hardship on the small miner. Hooper registered a vigorous complaint about this to Mr. Frank E. Woodside, manager of the B. C. Chamber of Mines, and that institution will probably take action on the subject again.

The gold is worth more than two ounces of gold in his poke finds it necessary at times to sell some of his precious metal for what he can get. The miners always provide situations which will require banks in mining areas to accept raw quantity of gold, making an advance payment on the ultimate price which the mint will pay when it.

Per instance, on two ounces the bank will pay at present $50, and the balance when the mint has made its return on the fluctuating price which is around $35 an ounce. The general run of gold found in the Cariboo is approximately 750 fine as compared with the pure metal which is 1,000 fine.

Were miners able to sell their gold in this way, and not be put to the necessity of trading small amounts for what they can get when the weight is less than two ounces, Hooper asserts the miner's lot would be much happier.

MAY DAY QUIET IN EAST, WEST

Police However Watch Today's Parade Closely

(By The Canadian Press)

Unless striking relief workers make a surprise move at points where causes of disputes seem to have been settled, this May Day will be quiet in the east and tense in the west. If Communists celebrate riotously police authorities were satisfied they would do it in the west.

Two thousand relief camp strikers are gathered in Vancouver and they will parade. They paraded a week ago yesterday and when it was over a department store interior had been damaged and Mayor Gerald McGeer had read the riot act. There was street fighting between police and workers.

The strikers have been quiet since but police will watch today's parade closely. Other western points where authorities are fearful of disturbances are Edmonton and the mining town of Corbin, B.C., just over the Alberta border.

Reports that 3,000 miners from the nearby Crow's Nest Pass mining fields would congregate in Corbin stirred police to prepare for possible trouble. More than 100 Royal Canadian Mounted Police and British Columbia Provincial Police are stationed at Corbin and neighboring towns.

Two hundred striking coal miners in Corbin are awaiting outside support in their demands for recognition of the Mine Workers Union of Canada.

Mayor J. A. Clarke of Edmonton regards the relief strike situation in Alberta capital as serious. City council has refused demands of the jobless for a 15-per cent increase in food, clothing and rental allowance. There has been no trouble.

Parades are scheduled for Edmonton, Calgary, Blairmore, Alta., and Winnipeg.

CASEY BALDWIN BEATS GAR WOOD

Toronto Native's Hydrodrome Coasts on Waters

Halifax, May 1 (CP)—By two months F. W. Baldwin, first man to fly an aeroplane in the British Empire beat Gar Wood to the public visualization of a wireless-controlled speedboat as a wartime "surface torpedo."

He was a bit ahead of the Detroit speedboat driver and manufacturer, too, in the speed of their weapon. Wood looked to 100 miles an hour as its rate; "Casey" Baldwin saw an eventual speed of 125 miles an hour developed from the "hydrodrome" which he helped Dr. Alexander Graham Bell invent.

The hydrodrome is a motorboat built on the principle of the aeroplane—driven by an air screw and coasting over the water on "aerofoils." The nautical equivalent of wings, these foils are useful of late as 13 years ago, one of Baldwin's dromes was clipping off 72 knots on Nova Scotia's Bras D'Or Lake and he's developed it considerably since then.

Baldwin, native of Toronto, but now living in Nova Scotia and representing Victoria in the Province's Legislature, contends the hydrodrome is away ahead of the speedboat and aeroplane. He says he looks to. It can "turn on a dime," carry a heavy load with stability, and ride a choppy sea as though it were a millpond.

Hand Beauty Is Possible for All Women

Finger Nail Polish Does Not Come Under Fads, Says Expert

(The Beauty Box)

Marion Davies

Her pretty hands receive daily attention.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hand beauty is possible to every woman.

Painting the bleeding heart lacquer onto the finger nails does not complete the job as some of our rush-and-hustle beauty seekers may imagine. It calls attention to defects. Hands should be velvet smooth, nice and shiny. They should that way unless they have daily attention.

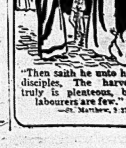
After the facial creaming is done at night, give the cosmetic leavings to your hands. They will be grateful. Frequent washing and household chores remove all the natural oil, so they need lubricating. Don't overlook the value of the hand brush which not only makes the scouring more thorough, but acts as a massage agent.

All the bone beautifier has to remember is that the flesh must not be folded. That happens when the rotary motion is used. The complexion can be tapped and slapped, even spanked a bit, and results will be gratifying. Use a heavy emollient, follow along with an ice rub and an astringent.

Have you found the SUNNY PACKAGE on your grocer's shelf?

It's a delicious ready-to-eat cereal. Millions of Canadians have found Kellogg's All-Bran a safe, effective means of correcting common constipation—the kind caused by lack of "bulk" in the menu.

Laboratory measurements show that All-Bran provides "bulk" to aid elimination. All-Bran also supplies vitamin B and iron.



The "bulk" in this tempting cereal is more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables—because it resists digestion better. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this cleans out the intestinal waste.

Isn't this natural food better than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of All-Bran daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases with each meal. If this fails to give relief, see your doctor.

Enjoy All-Bran as a cereal, or cook into appetizing recipes. Kellogg's All-Bran contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Are Beauty Chores Tiring?

Make Them a Game, and Remember The Future, Advises Expert

Bette Davis

She retains her attractiveness by performing her beauty chores daily

By HELEN FOLLETT

Beauty chores are terrible only if you think they are. Many a girl finds them a pleasant form of relaxation, loves to mess around with the flavorful creams and lotions. She who is bored with rituals that lead to pulchritude had better have a change of mind and heart.

Let her instill into her plastic mentality the fact that she is working for the future, piling up good looks wealth, so she won't be good looks poor when she gets older. Yes, we're scaring her. Getting scared is good for her. It starts circulation a-dancing, puts anger lights in the cheeks, and nice mad glitters in the eye. And when she gets mad, she gets active. Women are like that, dear, funny little things.

Every day gives attention to complexion, neck, hair, hands, neck and finger nails. It can be done in 20 minutes, profitable investment. Go slack for a single week, and the mirror will register an unfavorable report.

Complexions that kick up a rosy protest when they come in contact with soap suds will oftimes prove amiable and good natured if given a light application of one of those semi-liquid, quickly-drying hand lotions that are so popular.

Should you desire to compound your own, soak 60 grains of gum tragacanth in 14 ounces of rosewater for three days, add one ounce of glycerine and one ounce of alcohol. Perfume to suit.

When plying the rouge pad—if you're indulging in that diversion, don't forget to give a bit of color to the chin and the ear lobes.

If eye shadows aren't your style, touch the lids lightly with rouge, and paint high on the temples.

How Child Selects a Friend

By LISA GRENELLE

Isabel's friend, Dorothy, didn't make much of a hit with the rest of the family. Her manners were poor, she was far from beautiful and she looked dirty. As for Dorothy's parents, they were, nice enough, but hardly in a class with Isabel's family. It was not an intimacy to be encouraged, Isabel's mother felt.

Isabel, however, was not easily swayed. She preferred Dorothy to any of her other classmates, and showed it. The girls were as inseparable as a pair of lovers.

As for Mary Winters, model child of a friend of Isabel's mother, Isabel would have none of her. "She's stuck-up and a tattle tale," Isabel said when her mother spoke of Mary.

"I don't believe it," mother responded. "I've known Mary's mother since we were your age, and she's a charming child and has beautiful manners. More your kind, I should think, Isabel than that—"

Defends Dorothy

"I won't have you insult Dorothy," Isabel said furiously, her loyalty up in arms. "You don't know her, you don't understand her."

Isabel's mother felt she understood only too well and said so.

But did she? What did Isabel's mother know of Dorothy except that she was superficially not possessing. What did she know of Mary Winters, for that matter, except that she had a nice mother, and agreeable manners?

Unless an adult lives in the house with a child, and not always then, can he be a judge of the child's personalities. A child hides himself from grown-up eyes. Unless an adult has unusual understanding, uncommon tact, he sees only the surface of a child's nature. He must judge him by superficialities alone, as the child in turn must judge his elders.

Isabel was right, Mary Winters was a tattle tale, a sneak, and selfish besides, while the unprepossessing Dorothy was making Isabel a loyal, generous and understanding.

Not Wise to Interfere

If Isabel's mother had been able to divert Isabel's friendship from Dorothy to Mary Winters it would have been to the detriment of Isabel's character. For Mary Winters, despite her beautiful manners and her charming mother, would have been a bad influence, as bad as Dorothy was good.

It is not wise for a mother to attempt to interfere in her daughter's friendships. So often, as in Isabel's case, she knows not what she thinks she does.

If she has reared her daughter wisely she need not worry. A well-adjusted child is not apt to be led under a bad influence. The balanced child picks his intimates wisely and needs no guidance. If he makes a mistake he soon finds it out himself, and discards his unwise choice for a more congenial companion.

It is only the child who entirely lacks self-confidence, or who has an aggrandized idea of his own importance, who is in danger of picking a real inferior for an intimate.

FOUR VIENNESE HURT BY BOMB

Vienna, May 1.—Four persons are injured last night by a bomb which exploded in front of a precinct police station.

Dr. Thanhofer, Secretary of the Federal Chancellery, who happened to be nearby, had his legs torn off by the bomb.

GUDSON BAY RATE CUT

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Reduction of 25 per cent. on the extra premium payable on vessels to be insured into the Hudson Bay route will be effective during the 1935 season under a report of the Imperial Shipping Committee on Hudson Bay marine insurance rates. The report was made public last night simultaneously in London and Ottawa.

How do You tell the Difference?

■ Solid silver and silver plate may look very much alike. Pure soap and impure soap may also look very much alike.

■ Yet it's easy to tell the difference if you look for the "sterling" mark on silver and the "purity" mark on the soap. But this "purity" mark is not on every soap. Sunlight is the only soap which is so carefully made from the purest ingredients that it is stamped: "Guaranteed Pure."

■ Being all pure soap, Sunlight dissolves readily. It forms plenty of suds so quickly . . . lasting suds which cleanse most economically. They wash more clothes beautifully clean without harm to fabric or colours . . . and Sunlight's pure, gentle suds never could roughen or hurt your hands.

■ To the women who have once used Sunlight, other soaps are never really satisfactory. Look for the $5,000 Sunlight Guarantee of Purity on every carton. It means real economy—longer life to your clothes—protection to your hands.

AGED MOTHER CALLS CONVICT SON'S DEATH BLESSING IN DISGUISE

Winnipeg, May 1.—The white-haired mother of George Forsythe, Stony Mountain Penitentiary convict shot by a guard during Saturday's riot, termed the shooting a "blessing in disguise".

Mrs. Mabel Forsythe expressed gladness the prison guard had been freed of blame by a Coroner's jury, adding "It was not his fault." She added her appreciation of the kind treatment she always received on visiting her son at the penitentiary, and spoke kindly of former Warden William Meighen, and the recently appointed Warden, Colonel G. W. MacLeod.

Of her 28-year-old son, who allegedly was attacking an unarmed guard with a fook-long knife when he was shot, Mrs. Forsythe said: "There was no hope for George, a hardened, unrepentant criminal. I have lived in constant dread of the time when George would come out. (Forsythe was serving a twelve-years-and-ten-lashes-sentence for robbery with violence and had previously served a five-year term for robbery.)

"He was not bad at heart,' continued Mrs. Forsythe, 'but a man without a will, who as a child was led astray by bad companions. As a child he had a mania for stealing things, and when 9 years old was sent to a juvenile home to be corrected. But when he came out he made bad associations."

Man, 28, is in Hurry For Amnesty Sentence

Orillia, May 1—George Hill, 28 years old, has a deadline to catch. He wants to be taken to Barrie immediately and plead guilty to auto theft, so he can be sentenced before May 3.

Convicted and sentenced to six months here yesterday, on one charge of auto theft, Hill was in a hurry to get to Barrie and face a second charge that awaits him.

He told the Court he had read in a newspaper that, in celebration of the King's Jubilee, six days was being clipped from each month of sentences imposed before May 3, and he wanted to get in on the cut rates.

Crown Attorney F. C. Evans laughingly assured Hill he would be rushed to Barrie with all possible haste. Hill thanked him profusely.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"The Good Fairy"

Margaret Sullavan in a Glamorous Mysterious Triumph which will Thrill You from Start to Finish.

When Lu, the movie usherette herself a Good Fairy, coming Thursday to the Capitol Theatre, embarked on her career of doing good deeds for others, she little thought that she would be forced to the extremity of picking a husband for herself out of the telephone book!

But when she introduced herself to an amorously inclined wealthy gentleman, from whose golden hords she fondly hoped to scatter riches, honors and happiness about the world, she soon discovered that, for her own protection, it would be necessary to provide herself with a husband to present to the inquisitive audience. So she passed herself off as a married woman of the fashionable world as a defense against his advances. She has no husband, but she rightly tells her admirer that her husband is a lawyer. To further his suit the millionaire offers to give this lawyer all of his legal business.

It became necessary, therefore for Lu to find someone to be benefitted in this way. She picks a name at random from the telephone book. The next day a poor lawyer is astonished when she tells him of the luck which she has directed to his office. Although harassed by debt and his collectors, he is averse to succeeding at the price of a woman's honor, but Lu persuades him at last to accept a valuable contract from a man who thinks he is dealing with a betrayed husband.

The poor lawyer fits out his office sumptuously but another complication arises when the fairy's part shatters his dreams. In the end, however, he wins both the good fairy and a real fortune. Margaret Sullavan plays Lu, while Herbert Marshall is the struggling lawyer and Frank Morgan the "big" man. Others in the cast are Reginald Owen, Alan Hale, Beulah Bondi, Oscar Apfel, Edgar Norton and Matt McHugh and Anne Darling.

Bombay, May 1.—(CP-Havas)—If the British succeed in the practice of roasting oxen during the forthcoming jubilee celebrations the 2,000,000 members of Jainism in India will cooperate in the celebrations, a telegram sent to the Earl of Willingdon, the Viceroy, by leaders of this Hindu sect declared today. CITY WILL MARK ROYAL JUBILEE WITH CEREMONIES

Special Jubilee Medals Will be Presented on May 6th

CIVIC PARADE

Scholars Will Receive Board of Education Jubilee Medals

Thousands of school children, returned soldiers, members of the local Militia, members of the Belleville city council, the Board of Education and other civic units will combine in this city on May 6 next in one of the most impressive celebrations on the occasion of the Silver Jubilee of Their Majesties accession to the Throne.

Following the proclamation by Mayor Tice asking the citizens of Belleville to observe May 6 as a public holiday, final arrangements have been completed for the observance of the day.

At ten o'clock in the morning, school children of the four public schools, St. Michael's Academy and the Collegiate and Vocational Institute will assemble on the cleared lawn ready for the march to the Collegiate campus.

On the campus, Mayor Tice, chairman, will open the day's ceremony at 10.30 o'clock with a brief address. This will be followed by the singing "Rule Britannia" by the combined voices of the school children who have been carefully rehearsing this and other appropriate anthems. The voices of the children will be accompanied by the Argyll Light Infantry Band.

Silver Medals Presented

Following a brief address by Col. W. N. Ponton, V.D., and the singing of "God Save the Children," Major the Reverend A. B. Payne will offer the Prayer of Thanksgiving. Lastly will follow the presentation of the special Silver Jubilee medals to prominent officials of civil and military bodies. The presentation of the special Silver Jubilee, R.A. and V.D. The military salute to Their Majesties, King George and Queen Mary will consist of a "fen-de-joie" by the Argyll Light Infantry whose rifles will rattle in waves of musketry fire up and down the lines while the band slowly breaks into the bars of "God Save the King."

Leaving the Collegiate campus after the ceremony is over, the march by the regimental units, the school cadets, returned soldiers and others will be made down Church to Station and along Front Street through the downtown section to East Bridge Street where the parade will again enter the Armouries lawn, previous to dismissal.

Special medals purchased by the Board of Education will be provided school children of the city and will be presented them in the class rooms previous to the assembly on the Collegiate campus. The medals, striking and distinctive in design will be in the form of a badge that may be worn pinned to the clothing.

6 Pelts Found Not Wolf Pelts

In a communication received from the Belleville office of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries today, Mr. James Haggarty, Hastings County clerk, has been notified that the pelts of six pups which were forwarded through the local office to Toronto by the owner as wolf pups after careful examination by competent officials of the Department were declared to be a species of the wolf dog, and in any case not of the wolf species. Bounty has thus been refused and the pelts are being returned".

The six whelps which were said to have been dug out of a wolf den in the side of a hill in Tyendinaga Township some time ago, have grown on the head and skinned, were sent to Toronto by a Marysville man. During the past year or so bounty has been refused on several pelts thus shipped on the claim that the animals were not wolf. It is believed that some of the animals are a cross-bred police dog and wolf.

Catch of Trout Reported Light

Anglers cast silken lines in the swollen and turbid waters of creeks and streams, swollen by recent rains, throughout the northern parts of Hastings and adjoining counties today on the first day of the official opening of speckled trout season, but reports reaching the city during the morning indicated that conditions were light and discomfort of numbed fingers hardly made up for the sport hoped to be enjoyed. One local resident arrived back in the city late this morning with a catch of two fish hooked in North Hastings County. It was reported by him that this was the average catch, owing to the fact that the muddied streams were against the fishermen.

"Don't Maida me. I'll call Fanchon. She will say that you leave the house —without being seen. There's a hall that leads to the servants' entrance."

"But, Maida—" Anne's brain was refusing to function. She was dazed. "I've no place to go— no one—"

"I suppose you want money. I'll get you what I have in my purse." Maida managed to close the door, still trembling, toward the dressing table.

"No, no! I didn't come for money. I came to tell you how sorry I am—"

"Cease! I'm not interested. Not in the least. You are a stranger to me, a total stranger. I'm glad I have enough of decency left not to be begging, Fanchon's!"

Fanchon appeared from the inner chamber.

"Show Miss Austin out. She'd prefer not to be seen. I'd advise the hall at the end of the rear stairway." Maida went to the dressing table and began to pat powder on her flushed cheeks, furiously.

Anne stood for a moment regarding Maida's back and then walked slowly against a pauper blue velvet evening gown. Then she turned and followed Fanchon into the twilight of the back stairs.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Somewhere a clock struck two. Anne stood waiting for a house somehow familiar. She had been here before. Only it seemed such a long way, such a long time ago. Her feet. They were unsteady, heavy. Should she try dragging them along the walk between the clipped shrubs? How dare you enter this house, straight from prison— from a common jail?" Just like Maida. No, she would stand still.

She heard footsteps pound her. She'd have to move. Stairs! She lowered herself, slowly, painfully to the bottom step.

How long she sat there Anne did not know but suddenly, inexplicably, she seemed to emerge from stupor into a cool, clear-star-spattered night. She stood up. Had she been dreaming? No, timestairs were no dream. There was to be a penn concrete house, Phoebe Prime's home! Phoebe, who had befriended her when she first went to the agency looking for work. Prim and peaceful and homely. Anne had called twice—or was it three times—to have tea and some talk. Phoebe! Just how had she come here now? She must have walked—miles. Ten cents in the palm of her hand and she'd spent that for bus fare—going to Maida's.

Maida! Anne shuddered. Phoebe would understand.

Anne climbed the stairs and pressed the bell. A brief wait and Phoebe Prime herself opened the door. She showed no surprise when she saw a white-faced girl, bedraggled, before.

"Why it's Anne," she said cheerfully. "Come in, Anne. I knew I heard that bell jingling. This way— to my den. There's an open grate there and I'll light a fire. Coolish down here in the morning."

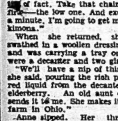
Anne followed, watched Phoebe touch a match to pine logs. The flames cracking and dancing, chasing away the chill.

"I came to you for help," Anne said. "I'm sorry to disturb you at this hour—there seemed nothing else for me to do."

"No disturbance to me. That's my business—help. I'm glad you came. It's of fact. Take that chair by the fire—the low one. And excuse me a minute, I'm going to get my warm kimona."

When she returned, she was swathed in a woolen dressing gown and was carrying a tray which were a decanter and two glasses.

"We'll have a nip this time," she said, pouring the rich purplish-red liquid from the decanter. "It's elderberry. An old secret wine I send it to me. She makes it on her farm in Ohio."



Anne sipped. Her throat was parched, her mouth was tinder. The wine was ambrosia.

"I feel better," she said, relaxing in the chair.

Phoebe put a fresh log on the fire. "Good," she said. "And now, if you feel up to it, tell me what's happened. Has Madame Hoag run amock again, and driven you out into the night?"

"No. It's not Madame. She has been kind. She was in Miami and her pearls disappeared. They suspected me of taking them."

"Who suspected you?" Phoebe flashed.

"The police. They searched my room. They took me to the police station and questioned me. I was there all night and yesterday. The pearls and they let me go."

"Where did she find them—the pearls?"

"In the cabinet in her boudoir, just where she often sreps them. Safe—that's the other maid—said she'd searched that cabinet over and over again."

"Did this—Safe— did she hint that you might have taken the pearls?"

"No. She insisted to the officer who searched the room that I could not possibly have taken them."

"Could the pearls have been in that cabinet when she was looking for them—that is, maybe she got excited and didn't see them?"

"I don't see how they could have overlooked them. She knows exactly where Madame is in the habit of leaving them. Yet they were there when Madame came to find them."

"I wouldn't be so sure of it—of their being there all the time. I think that will bear looking into. And Madame, what does she say about all this hubbub?"

"I—I don't know. I haven't seen Madame."

"You mean you haven't been back to Bob Jolly?"

"No, I couldn't go back. I could not." Anne's protest became a plea. "Although the matron and her headquarters said Madame had sent word I might come back to work.'

"There was more to this than Anne was willing to confess, Phoebe thought. The girl had spirit. If she had lacked spirit she would never have struck out for herself. She would have bone on being a pandere and a parasite. There were reasons other than pearls that Anne feared and then popped up again—other reasons why the girl would not return to Bob Jolly. Whatever them reasons were they must be good and sufficient. Anne Brent was no cry-baby.

"Do you want to go on—working, I mean?" Phoebe asked.

"I must," Anne said, simply. "I've got to go on. I have nothing—not a single cent, even."

"Maida Hoag owes you wages —up to the time you left."

"But I'd rather not ask for them—I've caused all this trouble"

"You don't have to ask her. I'll take care of that. What you need now is a good rest. In the morning you'll leave you here, while I go to the office and look over my lists. Places are scarce but I'll find something. Come now, let's turn in. Tomorrow's another day and it's almost tomorrow already."

* * * *

When Phoebe Prime returned to the concrete house shortly before noon, she found a different Anne from the girl who had arrived, in cold shower, collars and cuffs laundered in Phoebe's kitchen, clothes pressed. Remarkable what a psychical going over will do to refurbish morale.

"Fine; Phoebe greeted her. "You look fit for work or for food or for bed—whichever comes along. And I have some vacancies this morning."

"Vacancies? Oh Phoebe—can I— do you think I might be able to fill one of them?"

"I don't know," Phoebe was taking off her hat and coat and turning back, in her willingness, her eagerness to help Anne. "Let's hear 'em over. There's a Mrs. Theo Williams who wants a combination maid and secretary. She's a writer evidently. Keeps open house for the more exclusive set. How does that strike you?"

Mrs. Theo Williams. Anne's heart sank again The Theo Williams who had known her always. She had known her in the days when every town house once—after the debacle. The Theo Williams who had known Bobby, Mrs. Theo did not urged Anne to remain—as she always had done. Mrs. Theo insisted on what was the future—Nella.

Phoebe's quick eyes noted the confusion in Anne's face. The girl knew Mrs. Theo Williams and for reasons of her own felt herself inadequate. Then on to the next.

"Young pan, a bachelor, is setting up an establishment of his own. He'll need a dozen or more in help—several of them women. He wants a hostess to look after his women guests. That might be just the thing for you."

Hope rose again in Anne. "I could manage that; that is, I'd try my best and I ought to manage it after my experience with Madame Hoag."

"I'm sure you could—" Phoebe brought out the inevitable scratch pad she carried. "The young man is very wealthy and something of a gay dog, I hear. His name is Craig Braden."

"Craig. Craig Braden!" Anne's hands gripped Phoebe's shoulders so that the older woman winced. "Phoebe it isn't possible! It just isn't possible for such a thing to happen! I tell you it couldn't happen." She was laughing raucously, mirthlessly.

"What couldn't happen?" Phoebe demanded. Was this girl queer, after all? Had she, Phoebe Prime, student of human beings, made a mistake. But no. She was right. And so was the girl.

"Phoebe—Craig Braden asked me to marry him. He is the reason I am here—I ran away—away from him, from everything. Shall I tell you about it—how I married to come to your office, why I am here? I'd like to, Phoebe."

Phoebe waved a wise head. "Not now. Later, maybe," she said. "You are Anna Brent to me and you stay Anna Brent for the present. If you can away from a man with all the position and wealth of that young fellow, he must be a bad lot. I have one other vacancy. Would you leave Palm Beach, go out in the country a while?"

"Would I? Oh, Phoebe, it would be heavenly. To walk out into the open without fear of meeting anyone—"

"Fear?"

"Yes, without fear of meeting my past. Without fear of being heckled or snubbed or saying—anyone—I've rather not see." Carl—she must not see Carl. Not for a long time. Until the need for him she wound he had placed in her heart was no longer an active pain but a healed scar.

"Then I believe we can get down to business," Phoebe said. "A man and his wife have a place twenty or so miles out. The man's a scientist. He's carrying on some kind of experiments and he's built this place for solitude and for his work. Professor Gardiner—that's his name, wants a young woman who can take notes on his experiments now and then, but I gathered that mostly he wanted some one to keep his wife company. It's pretty lonely out there."

"Not lonely for me," Anne assured Phoebe, "Will you trust me with the job?"

Phoebe laughed. "I trust you with the job," she said, "but I'm not quite sure I trust the wife you. However, its there to be filled, if you want to try it."

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Anne flung open the door of the Phoebe Prime Employment Agency briskly that Phoebe Prime looked up quickly from the papers she was scanning.

Phoebe noted Anne's bright eyes, her head held high, her firm, her upthrust chin. Could talk be the beginning of another Maida Hoag? Who had come, knocking on the door of her home by night, only a few hours before? Something exciting. Something pleasant—if Phoebe was any judge of human reactions.

"Where's the fire?" Phoebe asked, dryly.

"Fire?" Anne was puzzled. Then, with a quick little laugh, she said, "Oh, you mean the Fire. It's inside, Phoebe. I'm very gorgeous. But so please, Phoebe, don't try to put it out."

"I wouldn't think of trying," Phoebe said. "You fire a blaze. It's already been in your eyes. What's it all about?"

"Phoebe," the bright eyes were dancing defiance. "I'm going back to work at Bob Jolly's."

"Good." Phoebe reached for a file, extracted a memorandum from between its leaves. "Been covers. Madame Hoag telephoned not more than an hour ago. She wants you back. Said you and try to persuade you to come back. That's another status. Those disappearing pearls have proved you a promotion. Madame wants you to act as her secretary. In addition you are to supervise the selection and purchase of her wardrobe. She will pay sixty dollars a month and your expenses."

"Expenses," Phoebe," Anne said eagerly, "Tell her you've found me she might have changed her mind."

"I don't think so. She's made up her mind she wants you, and you know Madame. When she gets that what she wants she'll have nothing. Call back, Anne. Here's your chance. We'll do nothing until tomorrow. I'll assume that you are to serve on more or less of a family basis—secretary—companion."

"Suppose she refuses."

"Then I advise you to stay away from Bob Jolly. Madame has other jewels besides that string of pearls. You know—and then might diminish appear, and fail to notice it."

"Phoebe," Anne lowered her voice to a whisper, "I think Madame might have arranged to have the pearls disappear. Then she can score with me? Hoag's nephew re-accused having me around, I'm sure after his visit. He knows him down for trying to make love to me in Madame's boudoir."

"A likely solution," Phoebe said. "I've considered it, am still considering it." Then, looking straight into Anne's eyes: "Tell me, Anna, what made you change your mind about returning to Madame Hoag?"

A crimson tide crept up from under Anne's collar, mounted to her temples. She could not be crafty. She could not say that she was not being herself to confess that the girl had a pocket snake into a smart appearing skirt. Sizes 10 to 16 years. Reg. $2.95. Clearing

City Softball Group Will Have Total of Seven Teams

Tweed and Redneersville Will Form Part of League

Three new entries were accepted into the Belleville City Softball League last night to elevate the roster of the league to seven teams with two outside clubs being brought into the fold for the first time in the history of softball locally. The Tweed and Redneersville entry were accepted while another local entry, the Tip Top Tailors, joined forces with the local softball loop to swell forces, the previous teams to composed the league being—South Rod A.C.; College Hill Cubs; Asjmaa Club and the Alemites. The election to the office of secretary saw Charlie Tebworth the unanimous choice of the meeting while a new executive position was established when Harry Rollins, ex-president of the league was chosen as the treasurer, with power to vote. The executive of the league now is composed of—President, Ken Hargadon; Vice-President, Maurice Callaghan; Secretary, Chas. Tebworth and Treasurer, Harry Rollins. The admission of the Tweed and Redneersville Clubs met with the favour of the meeting, those Clubs being well represented and duly accepted.

One of the first questions presented to the group was the question of category of softball to be played by the newly accepted clubs, they entering the league merely as clubs to inter-look and eventually return back to their own standing. Both Redneersville and Tweed will affiliate with the O.A.S.A. in the Intermediate "B" series, while the Belleville City Softball League is rated as an "A" group. Home and home games, with a double schedule, were adopted with the Alemite and the Cubs only going to Tweed once, while the latter team will play in Belleville with these two clubs three times, instead of twice as in all other cases. The games with Redneersville will be home and home contests, providing the two outside town finish in first or second position in the local city league, they will not participate in the league play-offs, only Belleville clubs being eligible to enter these play-downs.

In the matter of gate receipts it was deemed advisable to split all receipts on the 50-50 basis while each team will be called upon to supply one umpire and pay the same, with the "visiting club" being asked to supply the "home club". The league will operate on the point system with two clubs to be awarded for a win and one for a tie. An affiliation fee of three dollars was set and the league voted to enter the O.A.S.A. All games to be played in Belleville will be played on either the Central Park, Alexandra or Dufferin Hill diamonds.

The various clubs represented and their executives were—Redneersville—Frank Walkom, R. Russell, R. Wannamaker; Tweed — J. Quinn, A. Simpson, W. Cowdell; Alemite—W. Flagler; Cubs—G. Barriage; Asjmaa—C. Boyce, S.E.A. Cook; Jeffs and Tip Tops—Gerald Vance.

It was decided to open the season on Victoria Day, May 24th with games at Tweed, Redneersville and Belleville.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Yesterday's announcement regarding the passing of Daylight Saving for the summer months will naturally be gratefully received by all local sportsmen. That extra hour of sunlight in June, July and August will add much to the enjoyment of local sports throughout the summer season. Golfers, tennis players, softballers, baseball players as well as anglers and other sports inclinded citizens all welcome the announcement and the change will make the best of that added hour of sunlight during their various activities.

Something new, something different is being introduced in Belleville next Saturday in connection with the C. O. D. meeting when a talking picture entitled "Play Ball" will be flashed on the screen at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening. Yesterday Secretary Nevt Thompson received a telegram notification from Oshawa Club stating that this important baseball talking picture was available and would be shown in Belleville, providing a suitable auditorium could be secured and a goodly audience assembled. Invitations have been sent to all baseball clubs within a radius of over 50 miles, inviting players, fans and interested citizens to attend the "Play Ball," a motion picture made last winter by the General Motors of Canada. The entire show is free and open to the public.

The picture, "Play Ball" should prove highly educational and valuable to teen-age players as well as more mature aged ballists. The picture shows the correct manner in which to slide bases, run bases, bat, bunt, field position, throw to base runners, etc., and shows major league stars in action. Some of the players to appear in this picture are Lou Gehrig, Lou Fonseca, Pepper Martin, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, Mickey Cochrane, Rogers Hornsby, Tuck Stainback, Charlie Grimm and many other major league stars. Truly, "Play Ball" is a masterpiece and should be enjoyed by every amateur baseball player and fan within a radius of Belleville and Belleville. Ted Husing, star sports announcer of the air-lines, is also the announcer of "Play Ball" and explains each vital step in the picture. Secretary Thompson expects to have more information for relationship to this picture before the end of the week, however.

The above mentioned picture will be shown through the courtesy of the General Motors and by consent of the Oshawa Club. Incidentally, we heard recently that the Oshawa Club were to appear on the field with brand new "purple" uniforms. Why, my Gawsh, what's going to supply the hair ribbons? And then, is it true the "Brewers" are going to have floral designs on their bloomers?" (Baby-blue ribbon also makes a natty trimming). Ain't gee.

A recent sport note from Peterboro suggests that President Swanston may have an application from Al Heckman for a position on his umpiring staff. From what we know of Al, he might not be the most flashy official in the loop, but 'tis safe in wagering that his decisions would be impartial and pretty nearly right the most of the time. Al Heckman won for himself the respect of all players and fans with whom he came in contact during his glamorous reign on the mound and should meet with equal success as an arbiter. President Swanston could not do a better stroke of business than sign the ex-Prescott hurler to an umpire's contract, or whatever is the umpired have to do to qualify for a position.

Boxing Promoter Clem Allen announced today he was negotiating to bring a string of Toronto boxers to Belleville about May 15th, including Joe Genovese, the boy who was awarded the questionable decision over Howard "Dynamite" Wheeler during the Golden Gloves finals at Toronto. In preparation for this card Promoter Allen is taking Wheeler to Kingston or the King's Jubilee where he meets Mel Gilenas, ex-Dominion featherweight champion, whom he defeated in Toronto in the Golden Glove preliminaries. This bout is to be one of the feature attractions on Ollie Oleen's card in the Limestone City.

Ralph Morden announced today that all intermediate races and finals in the city swimming championships will be staged on Thursday night, first night of racing for the eliminations on Thursday and the city championships on Friday. "We have just enough entries to make up a splendid one night programme in all groups of both girls and young men swimmers," stated Mr. Morden this morning. The city swimming championships will be decided at the meet in the Alyda College pool. The meet is open to all and will naturally attract a large attendance of spectators, especially following the success of the recent inter-city meet held here.

Another excellent card has been prepared for the Kiwanis Club wrestling show to be held on Friday night at the Arena. There will be two main bouts with high-class grunting anticipating. The last card was thoroughly enjoyed and the profit although small has been used by the Kiwanis Club to help an underprivileged child. All the money derived from this source will be used in the same way. Dunlop and Dallas should provide a fast action in the first main go, while Dallas also played on the last show to pitted against Jack Pearl, Frank Slovak and Jim Wilkins will tangle in the preliminary bout.

The set-up for local softball look a decided turn for the better last night when five local teams, Redneersville and Tweed linked together to form a strong, well-balanced league schedule. O. A. S. A. officials thought the two outside clubs are only inter-lacking with the local clubs, the amalgamation naturally tends to elevate the game in this community. All games played in the league will be "fives and fours" contests, but the Tweed and Redneersville clubs will not participate in the league play-offs, due to the fact these two clubs will subsequently join into the "B" series of intermediate O. A. S. A. play-downs. Secretary Charlie Tebworth, local softball maestro and Harry Rollins were added to the league executive as second President and Edgecombe and Vice-President Maurice Callaghan. In the hands of these four men lies the destiny of local softball activities for the coming season, which opens with six teams seeing action on May 24th.

BAHRAM WINS CLASSIC RACE

The Aga Khan's Stable Takes First And Second

Newmarket, England, May 1—(CP Cable)—The Favorite Bahram won the two thousand guinnea first of the season's great classics for three-year-olds, over the mile course today with Theft second and Sea Bequest third.

It was the 127th running of the Classic. Bahram and Theft both run in the Silks of the Aga Khan, noted turfman who won the race only once before, eleven years ago.

Bahram will be confirmed favorite for the Derby, second of the open classics, as a result of today's win although the Derby distance is half a mile longer.

The winner is a half-brother of Windsor Lad, last year's Derby winner. He won all his five starts as a two-year-old. Today he started as one of the warmest favorites in the Guinness' history, 7 to 2, while Theft was 11 to 2 and Sea Bequest 100 to 7.

Bahram had a length and a half margin at the finish and theft was another two lengths in front of Sea Bequest. Sixteen ran.

FIFTY ENTRIES IN FOR SWIM MEET

All Events Will Be Run Off in One Evening

Although close to fifty entries for the City Swimming Championship meet have been received by Ralph Morden at the Y.M.C.A. there are spread out over six divisions and it has been decided to run off the events on one night rather than spread them out over two evenings. Thursday night the events will begin sharply at 8 p.m. and will be run off in quick order. The junior division of the boys is all be necessary to run off most of the events in heats as there is quite a large entry in this section but almost all the other divisions can be run off in straight races without repeats. With thirty-two events to be run off, exclusive of the extra necessary heats in the junior boys' events, it will mean a long night for the officials in charge not to mention plenty of action for the spectators who attend the meet.

The management at Albert College are finalizing after the accommodation for spectators are making special arrangements for the handling of a large crowd. With admission charges much below the ordinary price asked for similar programmes, the spectators will probably share in the breaking of records.

'JIMMY THE RAT' HELPS RESEARCH

Runs "Live Boarding House" For Typhus Fleas In Laboratory

By F. B. COLTON
Associated Press Science Writer

Washington, May 1—(AP)—Jimmy The Rat" believed to be the world's only professional living "boarding house" for fleas, today completed one year as a unique servant of medical science.

Despite his gangster-sounding name, Jimmy's life is dedicated 100 per cent. to suffering humanity. He lives in the Typhus Laboratory of the National Institute of Health of the Public Health Service. His job is being escaped, typhus-infected fleas live on him, so they won't bite scientists working in the laboratory.

Thousands of fleas are kept in the typhus work-shop by Dr. R. E. Dyer. It is through their bite typhus is spread, and many of them purposely are infected with typhus for use in experiments seeking a method of controlling the disease.

Despite all precautions, an infected flea escapes occasionally from the containers. Any self-respecting flea, however, prefers a rat to a man any time, so the fugitive fleas go straight to Jimmy. He doesn't mind so much because he's had typhus, recovered and so is immune. He's tickled to death, anyway, to carry around a few fleas in return for tasty tid-bits that the white-coated scientists feed him from their own lunches.

But Jimmy is a bit spoiled. lunch isn't forthcoming promptly, tugs gently with his teeth at the doctor's trousers until they remember him. Sleek, white and pink-eyed, he squeaks them a happy greeting each morning, for Jimmy leads a lonely life with only fleas for company.

But he has no desire to escape, especially since a sad encounter with the door, trying to follow a doctor out one day. Jimmy's tail got caught. Since then nothing will tempt him to approach that door again.

Breeding Grounds Of Hoppers Attacked

Lethbridge, Alta., May 1 (CP) — A new offensive against grasshoppers that would take attackers to the insects' permanent breeding grounds and prevent recurring plagues by destroying the insects before they assumed outbreak proportions was favored in a statement issued today by eminent entomologists of Canada and United States.

NAZI KIDNAPPING CHARGE IS MADE

Swiss Newspaper Accuses German Reich of Activities

Basle, May 1—(CP-Havas)—Nazi agents have perpetrated a new kidnapping from Swiss territory, the Communist newspaper Vorwaerts charged, adding that Swiss Federal authorities were investigating, and already had incriminating evidence against the Reich government in the recent Berthold Jacob kidnapping, "which is a crushing indictment of secret Nazi activity."

The newspaper said it had learned that Switzerland would file the Jacob case with the World Court at The Hague, if the Swiss and German Governments do not agree within two months on arbitration of the affair, as provided by treaty.

The latest incident had as its victim a young Swiss who allegedly was lured across the border near Kreuslingen and jailed at Constance.

The Hague, May 1—(CP-Havas)—Investigation of the kidnapping of a German laborer named Gutzeit from Dutch territory was pressed by police, as public opinion connected the case with the deportation of Major White, also a German, for carrying on Nazi propaganda in the Netherlands.

Dominions' Part In Case of War

London, May 1—(CP-Havas) — Canada and the Union of South Africa have served notice to the government here, their Dominions will not come automatically to Great Britain's aid in case of war, the Labortie Daily Herald stated today.

The Times declares there might be a "split in imperial sentiment" as regards Dominion military aid in a new conflict.

Notice that the Union of South Africa and Canada would not automatically range themselves on Britain's side in a new war has been served on the London government by Prime Ministers Gen. Jan.ke B. Hertzog and Richard B. Bennett, both here to attend the Jubilee celebrations beginning next week in King George's honor, the Herald claims.

"The Dominion representatives made it unmistakably clear," the Herald continues recalling that the two Prime Ministers confirmed here yesterday with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, "that they were unable to give any undertakings—to support Great Britain in a European conflict—without important reservations."

Daily Short Story

"Palm Beach"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Palm Beach!" Bob sighed longingly as he glanced through a Pacific time table. It was exactly five years since he had been sent there by his newspaper to cover baseball and, although he had also handled a murder story quite expertly, he had never again been given an out-of-town assignment.

Now it all came back to him: The beautiful girl who sang in the hotel where her had stayed. The way she had smiled at him when he took a table near her each night in the restaurant. How he had tried to summon enough courage to speak to her. Then the morning when he had learned that a wealthy widow had been robbed and murdered in the hotel during the night. And finally the lovely singer, who, having been accused of the crime, had been put on trial for her life. The people versus Lillian Abbott!

"The jury must have come soft on that smile of hers, too!" Bob thought. He recalled the verdict of guilty, based solely upon circumstantial evidence, that had brought a sentence of twenty years in prison.

It was only four o'clock, but Bob had been given 'God-night' by the city editor and, wandering through the Pennsylvania Station before going home, had picked up a time table.

"Those were the days of prohibition," he thought, reliving again what had been the most exciting adventure of his life, being only twenty-three at the time, and in love with the town singer. But of course made it all seem more like a personal experience than just another story to report for his paper.

Suddenly Bob remembered that his fountain pen was broken and decided that it would be a good time to have it mended. The store where he had bought it happened to be near by, and he knew they had a repair department.

On-Inspiration

As he was waiting for the job to be finished, Bob looked around the shop. The only other customer was a flashily dressed man who was buying a new pen and trying out various points. Bob picked up a pen and began writing also.

"Palm Beach ... Palm Beach .... Palm Beach," he scribbled all over the little tablet placed conveniently on the counter.

The flashy looking man moved on to another counter and Bob took his place. Suddenly his attention was riveted to the writing before him, was the paper on which the other man had been scribbling, and what he had written was the name, "Lillian Abbott."

Bob managed to get his pen back from the repair department just as the other man made his purchase. They walked out of the store together and Bob paused to light a cigarette. Then he followed at a safe distance.

Up Fifth Avenue the man walked pausing occasionally to glance in a window displaying men's fashions. At Forty-second Street he turned towards Broadway, finally entering a theatrical hotel.

Bob lounged at the yews stand but took care to refrain from asking for the room-clerk's key. He also overheard the name, "Harris," and instantly recalled the first name that went with it. Fred Harris! That was the attorney fellow he had noticed trying to flirt with Lillian when she was sitting in the hotel at Palm Beach though she had made it quite plain that she disliked him intensely.

"Funny the way that gang of bootleggers cleared out the day before the murder!" Bob reflected toying again with an angle of the case which had apparently accused no one's suspicions but his own. Harris, he remembered, had been one of the gang.

"Have you a room on the seventh floor?" Bob asked, stepping up to the desk.

Three were available and, after inspecting them all, Bob chose Number 722, mainly because Fred Harris occupied Number 723.

Nothing of any importance happened for hours. The man went out to dinner. So did Bob. He returned to the hotel at eight-thirty. Bob did also.

Four Together

At ten o'clock, three men called on Harris. It appeared that they were settling down for a long session at poker, and Bob braced himself in a chair against the wall. What he expected to hear, if anything, he did not know. But he vowed that he would not let Fred Harris out of his sight. If necessary, he would move into the hall permanently. For something told him that it was not undying devotion that had prompted Harris to write Lillian's name, but more likely the pricking of a guilty conscience. After all what he himself had written spontaneously? "Palm Beach," the scene of the most exciting adventure of his life and the biggest story for his paper!

The players were discouragingly silent until at two a.m. there seemed some agitation. Bob awoke with a start.

Half an hour later, there were sounds of moving about in the next room. The voices, tense and low, betrayed a disagreement of some sort. Then quite distinctly, Bob heard a voice hiss, "Well, what can you expect from Fred Harris, a guy who would let a dame take the rap for him?"

Before dawn, Bob crept out of his room and left the hotel. He had his story all prepared and went directly to the office to type it. Poor Lillian! But, at least, thanks to her breathtaking smile, she was alive.

As soon as possible Bob notified the District Attorney of his discovery.

"We knew that Fellow, Harris," said the D. A. "Tried to get some real gossip on him. Play the story up as much as you like, and we'll spring it on him."

So, that afternoon, they confronted Fred Harris with his own writing of the name, Lillian Abbott. And also with the front page of Bob's paper proclaiming her innocence and describing the true story of how she had suspected a robbery in progress to warn the rich widow, only to discover that she was too late. Someone, having seen the widow's diamonds in her room, naturally assumed that she was guilty.

And this story, soon richocheted of the thinnest of alibis, was at last accepted for the truth it really was.

Little Benny's Note Book

It was around at the firehouse talking to Mr. Riley the hookin ladder driver, and I said, How about lightning, Mr. Riley, have you had many fires in your out on account of lightning?

The Firemen had what you mite call a electrical family reunion, Mr. Riley said. Their last was jan fall of electricity. Lite just brushed it the sparks flew out like a fireworks exhibition, and naturally everything headed in among flimsy and started a blaze. The Cop-time was all the because could watch out what they was doing and they had little fire extinguishers in every room. It was during the nite when they made all the noise, Mr. Riley concluded.

Then I was reason when they was asleep? I said and Mr. Riley said, Absolutely. If they'd been boys we could of got them to share their beads, but they was all girls, 7 or 8 of them, each prettier than the other and every one with hair long enough to sit on or maybe even stand on. So we had to comb it and brush it every nite before they went to bed and I wonder if you ever tried to comb and brush 7 or 8 long heads of curly hair every nite for a month, you'd know what I used to fry out in the fire line the streets. I was the one who finely solved the problem, Mr. Riley said.

Oh, here's a card, and he said, I got them to get a little lightning rod over the house and the electricity would travel up these rods and into little storage batteries, and later on, I know a use for storage batteries saved the family a small fortune in electric bills. I'll see you again some time, Mr. Riley said.

Meaning the end of the subject.

Trenton Adopts D.S.T. from June 1st Until September 15th

Rotarians Enjoy Speaker Sent From U. S. Club

Trenton, May 1.—(Special)—The regular council meeting for the month of May was held in the municipal office and much business was transacted. Mayor Harry Cory and Councillors Hugh O'Rourke, Charles R. York, E. J. Wilkins, George LaBrash, Ernie Hill and E. E. Westfall were all present.

Daylight saving was passed, effective from June 1, until Sept. 15. This decision was reached after the workings of the various Trenton factories and the Royal Canadian Air Force had worked for the extra hour of daylight during the summer months.

Another matter, that has caused much discussion in the past was finally settled, when council passed a by-law permitting games such as 'pinballs' and others similar to one in Trenton providing a $300 fee be paid on each machine. This does not include slot machines. Whilst a year ago all these machines and slot machines were allowed to operate without fee until they were stopped by the police.

Employees of the town office wrote the council asking for an early closing on Saturday afternoons. This request was granted and from now on the offices will close at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The tax rate for 1935 was struck at $3 mills, the same as in 1934. The council had planned on a two mill reduction but the government would not stand for the reduction and the rate will remain at $3 mills.

It was decided to again furnish the garden plots and seed to the unemployed. It was found that $9 per cent. of the gardens were unemployed married men. Coun-cillor Hugh O'Rourke suggested, that trees be planted along Trenton streets to beautify thoroughfares, where necessary. This suggestion was accepted with Councillor O'Rourke being put in charge. Trees will be planted providing that the property owners will assume the responsibility of caring for the trees. A proclamation will be given the local press proclaiming May 4 a public holiday in honor of the Silver Jubilee of the reign of our Majesties The King and Queen. Local accounts were also passed.

Swimming Season Opens

The chilly waters of Lake Ontario at Old Orchard Beach did not hinder Mrs. Russel Haines from enjoying a swim on Saturday last. Mrs. Haines is always one of the first to dip in the waters of the lake. Speaking to one of the shivering onlookers he told us that Mrs. Haines had not just taken a dip but had enjoyed a real swim into the lake.

W. S. Speaker at Rotary

The Trenton Rotary Club and the club from Carleton, New York, enjoyed into a combined attendance and the local club were the visitors. The loser had to supply a speaker for the winner and last night the agreement was fulfilled when Rev. Harry Somers, President of the Carleton Rotary Club addressed the local club with visitors present from Cobourg and Campbellford. Members from other centres such as Bowmanville and Belleville were expected but they did not show up and sent no reason for their not being on hand. Those who did not attend missed hearing the finest speaker that ever spoke before the Trenton Rotarians.

Behind the chair of President Tom Jarrett a large Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were hung. The President Ken Cooch introduced the speaker. Canada was not new to Rev. Somers, he said, as he first saw the light of day in the Province of New Brunswick. He was educated in the public and high schools of his native province and later attended the University of New Brunswick before going to the United States where he entered Princeton University.

Rev. Somers, when arising to speak, was greeted with rounds of applause. He said, that he felt at home in the land of his birth. He took the audience in tip of laughter with his witty stories and his unusual sense of humor. He said that he had made a study before entering Rotary and emphatically remarked, that he was sold on Rotary. He said it had a saving influence in bringing men of different nations together in friendship where they learn to know each other better. He forsaw that it would be Rotary and that would bring the leaders of nations of today. "Twenty years ago," he said "he would not have even thought of the idea of coming to Canada and greeting the editor of the newspaper, whom he had never seen before, as Tom"—such as he greeted President Tom Jarrett today." Rotary is going out into the world and bringing the bring of the nations together. He asked: "Who knows the mighty flood of influence that the Rotary will bring forth in the time to come, as it was not a very old organization in America we can see the fine spirit of the International meetings as in the Rotary district, where both clubs are situated. Beneath it all lies humanity," he said in closing, and it all boils down to "Love thy neighbors as ourself."

President Tom Jarrett said, before he called upon Past President Ed. Simmons and Chester Lott to extend a vote of thanks to the speaker, that he had never seen such an occasion where so much merriment prevailed.

Dr. Bruce Longmore of the Campbellford club, expressed on behalf of his club, the gratitude of their members in being present to hear such a fine address. Clarence Young of Campbellford and Alex. Young of Cobourg, congratulated the local club on winning the attendance prize and after asking them to attend such a fine meeting. Members of the Trenton Club and their wives will attend Ladies' Night in Cobourg on May 9th. President Tom Jarrett told the local club members that there would be no regular meeting next Monday on account of the holiday.

Rev. Harry Somers left this morning for Carleton, accompanied by Rotarian F. B. Williams, who made the trip to Trenton with him on Monday.

MADOC INSTITUTE HOLDS MEETING

Mrs. G. Wallbridge Presents Paper on 'Etiquette For Sick-Rooms'

Madoc—Madoc Women's Institute held their April meeting at the home of Mrs. W. A. Hunter with an attendance of thirty-five. Mrs. R. Bridgford opened the Institute Ode and a short sing song opened the meeting. Minutes were approved and signed and correspondence read. Roll Call was answered by Garden Hints and was responded to. Owing to unavoidable absence of the Convenor of Canadian Industries, a substitute programme was used and much enjoyed.

Mrs. Gavin Wallbridge gave a well prepared and interesting paper on Etiquette for the Sick Room. Besides a lengthy list of "Don'ts" and "Never's" to be remembered. She stressed many qualities necessary in those who wait on the sick ones. Among others were conscientiousness, Good Memory, Orderliness, Observation, Tact, Courtesy, Sympathy, Self Control, Unselfishness, Good Judgment and Cleanliness.

Mrs. George White then gave a very able review of the current events of the month.

Mrs. R. Wickham was then called upon and introduced her subject, "Current Events in the Home" and gave a very interesting demonstration and talk on Party Articles made from scraps of ribbon, silk, wool, chintz and sugar bags. Mrs. W. Howell followed this up by a talk on "Fancy dishes for tea-time and Dainty Sweets."

A Nomination Committee of Mesdames G. W. Wrytzell, W. J. Connor and W. Rupert was appointed to present for consideration at the annual meeting in May. A complete slate for Executive, Directors and Chairmen of Committees.

The National Anthem closed the meeting and tea was served by the hostess assisted by Mesdames Rutherford, Gordon, Caskey, Hanson and Aylesworth and a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

On Sunday evening April the twenty-eight the Rt. Rev. J. Farrar, M. A., Bishop of Ontario celebrated the Holy Rite of Confirmation at St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, when candidates were presented for Confirmation by the Rector, the Rev. Canon Swayze. Also assisting in the service was Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne of Rossmay.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion. The Processional Hymn "The Church's One Foundation" was used, followed by "My God, Accept My Heart This Day", "Come Holy Ghost Our Souls Inspire and the Recessional "Thine Forever, Thine Forever."

His Lordship, the Bishop, chose the text "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see the thing which has come to pass" Luke 2. 15, giving an inspiring and heart searching message as he emphasized the same qualities which brought results in those days would if well exercised by the church members in these days, bring tremendous and cheering results to the world and humanity in the world today.

The qualities he stressed as (1) not slighting, but making the required effort, using energy and moving ourselves. (2) faith and (3) the resultant happiness which must share its joy with others.

In the charge to the candidates, the Bishop charged them to be mindful of the fact that they are not assuming new responsibilities but taking on themselves vows already binding them by their Baptism and urged them to use to their full ability the means of grace offered them by the church for their growth in grace.

Following the "laying on of hands" the Choir sang the beautiful anthem "He Lives" (J. Lincoln Hill) very effectively. Miss Eleanor Aylesworth presiding at the organ.

A capacity congregation assembled for this solemn service, among those were visitors from other congregations in Madoc and several from Tweed.

SCHOLARS TAUGHT BY WAY OF RADIO

City School Classes Listen in on First Lesson of Series

School children of the city assembled in auditoriums and classrooms yesterday to hear the first radio lesson in music broadcast under the auspices of the Department of Education. This initial lesson, of the series of eight, proved a real success and was received with enthusiasm by the teachers and pupils.

At Queen Victoria School three radios brought the lesson to the pupils, and although the lesson was for junior classes all were privileged to hear it. The reception was splendid and the whole school enjoyed the program which lasted well over half an hour. In commenting on the lesson, the principal, Mr. A. J. Wilkins, said it was so well arranged that the children were able to sing the songs perfectly at the conclusion. He added he felt that radio lessons can certainly be used to great advantage.

Junior Classes

Junior classes in the King George School heard the lesson yesterday, while on Thursday the senior classes will hear Under secretary Dr. Misener. Mr. L. A. Kells, principal of the school, said the reception was very good and that in the opinion of all the teachers the lesson was excellent. Some of the classes took active part in the program which made a deep impression on the children.

Primary classes at Queen Mary School enjoyed the program which came in clearly and just before the concluding number when local instructions made perfection difficult the Mr. G. I. Frederick, principal told The Ontario Intelligencer.

Pupils at St. Michael's Academy were unable to hear the lesson because of radio interference. All had assembled in the Academy of the Auditorium but it was impossible to hear any part of the lesson. At Queen Alexandra School, the pupils were also disappointed. The principal, Mr. W. G. Anderson had arranged to have a radio installed but it did not arrive for the program.

NAVY GOES BACK—There still are sailors in the navy. It is proved by this navy sailing race on Los Angeles harbor.

Johnny Walker is Dead, Trainer of Champions

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—The man who made George Young a swimming champion, who developed Margaret Ravior of Philadelphia and Marvin Nelson of Fort Dodge, Ia., into world-beating competitors, is dead here. He was Johnny Walker, 56-year-old Scot, himself an international polo star in his youth.

Walker, celebrated trainer of marathon champions, died here last night from a heart attack. He was taken ill last Saturday shortly after the day's work of coaching young swimmers at the Granite Club.

The pudgy Young, whom the hardy Scot picked out of a big Y.M.C.A. swimming class and elected to make into a champion, brought Walker an international reputation. He trained Young for the $20,000 Catalina Channel swim in 1927, although he did not go to California to watch George win.

After Young's sensational triumph, marathon swimming went on a prolonged boom here. The Canadian National Exhibition put up a $25,000 prize for a 31-mile grind in Lake Ontario. Swimming under auspices other than Walker, Young swam only a few miles in 1928 and was taken from the water.

Not until 1931, with Walker rowing a boat beside him, did Young score in the big Toronto event. Meanwhile, now Young's wife, captured the rich women's 10-mile event three times under the direction of Walker.

When the marathon boom arrived Walker opened a camp for contestants and a big percentage of money-winners were turned out of his bathing grounds. Nelson, the plant lawyer, attributed most of his success to the handling of Walker.

Under Walker he won the swim in 1930, 1933 and 1934. Johnny's son, Tommy Walker, was one of his most successful pupils, winning amateur races in Canada and the United States. He captured the United States pentathlon championship in 1925.

Before coming to Canada 22 years ago, Walker played water polo on the Scottish National team for seven years and was a highly-regarded swimmer at all distances.

Dodger - Giant Feud Ensues When Terrymen Cross Brooklyn Bridge

Stengel and Terry Bury Hatchet, Fans Refuse to Forget Insult

New York, May 1—(AP)—The Hatfields and McCoys of baseball, Memphis Bill Terry and Gowanus Casey Stengel, may have settled their feud to their own personal satisfaction but there is no calling off the frenzied faithful of Brooklyn.

It looks as if the boys who buy the pasteboards never are going to forget or forgive the fact in an unguarded moment over a year ago when Terry referred to the Giants as "the Dodgers still in the league".

Even belting the Giants out of last year's pennant hasn't salved the outraged Brooklyn pride.

The Giants crossed the Brooklyn bridge and the Gowanus canal yesterday for the first time since the 1934 debacle, and the greeting Terry and his men got from the 17,000 Flatbushers would have warmed the hearts of survivors of the old Giants' feuds with Chicago Cubs. There must be something to it, because the Dodgers won a ball game as wild as the setting, 12 to 5.

The boys heaved cannon crackers out of the stands, bowing with delight as the cardboard horns burst abaft Giant trousers. They call them Brooklyn greeting cards. One, as the festivities opened, nearly blew staid Tom Clark off the first base coaching lines.

Terry, principal target, shook hands with Stengel for photographers by home plate yesterday, and the 17,000 stood and roared in outraged unison:

"Don't shake hands with that bum."

But it was all music to the ears of Terry and Stengel, who can hear through the turmoil of baseball's most rabid fandom the sweet clink of the overhauled turnstiles.

GOLF FACTS

by

Alex J. Morrison

Two of my pupils have dropped from the shooting around 100 to scoring in the middle 80's. I mention them because they should be playing in the 70's.

They hit the ball well and far enough to be putting for a par on every hole. After going out in something like 38 or 39 they'll take 46 or 47 for the second time.

In their cases the let down is due to the fact that they insist on playing with duffers who shoot around 120. They get to whacking around like the duffers. Players of distinctly different classes cannot keep in step with one another.

You never see pros preparing for a big tournament by playing with duffers. They seek good players during their practice. You'll profit by following their

WILL INVESTIGATION REVEAL SCENES LIKE THESE IN CANADIAN PENITENTIARIES?

In view of the probability of royal commission investigating Canadian penal institutions, the above pictures of Sing Sing, one of outlaw's most famous prisons, are interesting. The candid camera records some of events in a day's life of the inmates and officials of the "Big House" on the banks of the Hudson at Ossining, N. Y., in which more than two thousand of New York's law breakers are serving terms of from one year to life. Seventeen others, including a woman, Mrs. Eva Coo, wait in the condemned cells for either commutation or death in the "hot seat." Despite drama and tragedy, Sing Sing is a comparatively happy institution. Inmates work in the shops, enjoy radio music in their cells, are well fed, play baseball and basketball, and in general enjoy life as much as is possible behind prison walls. Sing Sings military band, latest innovation in the "Big House" sponsored by Warden Lawes, draws frequently to inmates' band, of pieces. Rehabilitation rather than punishment is the objective.

'Stick by Aurelia, Than,' Says Pathetic Letter Of Vermilyea to Son

Than Besought by Parent to Join Church And Lodge

DO NOT GAMBLE

Vermilyea on Eve of Death Tells of Love For Son And Daughter

Written on the eve of his execution, a letter of Harold W. Vermilyea to his fourteen-year-old son Than, with the request that it be given to the press, is the pathetic utterance of a man in bidding farewell to his son on life has not yet reached the age when he shall decide on his life calling and whose success the father cannot direct except in a fervent letter. Here and there through it pass life threads reference to his own fate.

The letter is in the quaint, terse and clear style of Vermilyea's hand. It is in pencil on letter paper of the penitentiary. There was not an erased word nor an interlineation.

In the advice to his boy, Vermilyea revealed the philosophy of life which has been remarked in utterances since he was incarcerated. He has not evidently given to musing.

He wrote a somewhat similar but longer letter to the daughter, Aurelia bidding her farewell and making reference to family matters.

The letter to Than follows:

The Letter

"May 1st, 1935,

"My dear Son,

"I have heard about your attempted trip to visit me, darling boy, I appreciate the love in your heart that prompted you to undertake such a long trip without money and with insufficient clothing. The love you the more for it and the wish it expiries you for your courage and love. Under ordinary conditions I know you would not break your promise to Mrs. Scherr and Estella never to run away from the Delenseville Home. I believe you have been a good boy there. That is all more evidence that you are not a bad boy but because you are fourteen years of age and tell you that the right to choose your own guardian who would be good and kind to you. Personally I am very sorry because of the fact that I was not the right person for you with a home and a daddy's love. I sympathize with you and am blaming you in no way, but we will skip that.

"I am not going to be with you, I am sorry to say. I have tried to be a good daddy. I did the best for you that I could. You are a good son and having you with us the last few years was one of the greatest pleasures of my life. Mrs. Aurelia and me the honour and you kick-Kid as long as there was anything to stick to. I want you to continue sticking by Aurelia. In the long run she will prove to be your best friend left on earth.

"You will be sent to a good school and you will have a good start in life. You can reasonably expect and depend on him. If you love me as I have loved you, you will be obedient to those entrusted with your upbringing and education. Apply yourself to your studies. A boy who attempts to fool others in this respect is fooling no one but himself. Both your obedience and application to your study will furnish a foundation for your later life. Do your very best Than.

"As you grow up I desire that you join a church, attend church regularly, and enter into the life of the church freely.

"Get a good trade or profession. Don't figure on being a job or position. Get a training that will be useful to you all through life. Don't be afraid to specialize in the account of money they pay you when you are starting. Think mainly of its permanency. This is very important.

"Don't gamble. Don't entertain the thought that you can get something for nothing. It don't pay.

"When you are a man, join a good lodge preferably the Masonic. Take an active part in the lodge. It will always be a help to you.

"Don't be discouraged if the net result of my experience. I need never tell you that nothing is a failure but honest is a failure before he ever starts.

"Remember you are undecided what is the right thing to do, always take plenty of time to think it over and talk it over thoroughly with Aurelia.

"Mrs. Schorr has been awfully good. She has fought like a Tartan to get you out of the detention. Appreciate what she has done for you. Help her always all you can. Don't do anything to displease her. She will always love you.

"I shall not explain to you why I am where I am or how my end will come. Mrs. Schorr will explain everything to you in the best way. I have been met by you and Aurelia. I shall continue doing this to the end.

"Be a good boy, dear daddy. Than, read over very carefully the things I have written and then follow them to the best of your ability. I love you.

"Goodbye,

"Daddy."

Mystery Girl Still at Large Mingles Freely With People

Miss Mystery Shopper 'Gets Great Kick' Out of Experiences

NARROW ESCAPES

Well! Well! Well! the mystery girl is still at large, Miss Mystery Shopper, who, with a price on her head, has mingled freely with the shoppers in the stores and on the streets and listened to comments upon her own adventures and surmises as to her probable identity. She is getting a great kick out of it and the thrill of narrow escapes as she comes under the scrutiny of suspicion and senses a capture from the crowd. Then she has her best guile, and escape if possible the net closing round her, throw that in the face of her pursuer, as it were. This is done principally by the assistance of Sergeant Hicks of juvenile attention from the hunt for the mystery thing. Those who have experienced it would know what is meant.

However, ten dollars is worth having.

It's easy.

All you have to do is spot Miss Mystery Shopper.

COMMEMORATING 118 YEARS OF CANADA-U.S. PEACE

One hundred and eighteen years of friendly relationship with 3,000 miles of unarmed border between two nations was signalized as this tablet, commemorating the peace of the Rush-Bagot agreement, between the United States and Canada, was unveiled at Washington. The tablet is located on the spot where the British legation, at which the famous international agreement was signed, formerly stood. The treaty got its name from Sir Charles Bagot, then Minister from Britain, and Richard Rush, at that time acting U.S. secretary of state who signed the treaty in 1817. This memorial was prepared by the International Rivanis of America, Inc.

Miss Margaret Maxfield, representing Columbia, and Miss Nancy Jones, representing Canada, unveil the tablet. In the rear are: Hon. Hume Wrong, Canadian minister; Hon. William Phillips, under secretary of state for the United States and D. William J. Carrington, of Atlanta City, president of Rivanis International.

Whirlwind Finish Predicted For Belleville Better Days

Belleville stores never looked better, brighter, or more generally attractive, with goods of the highest quality in the very latest styles, than now.

The volume of shopping which lagged a bit Monday, quickened somewhat Tuesday, gained strength Wednesday, and Thursday got fairly into its stride with indications of the biggest weekend shopping carnival seen in Belleville for a long time.

Every incentive for brisk buying is here, the best of goods and the biggest of values, together with the chance of winning valuable prizes.

BUSY WEEK-END PREDICTED.

Look for a bang-up busy week-end with a Saturday which will revive memories of the night before Christmas.

Women for miles around are anticipating buying needs for months to come and will descend upon Belleville in buy and buy battalions which will demonstrate that "Happy Days Are Here Again", with the long-looked for return of prosperity.

BOYS AND GIRLS AND BALLOONS.

This afternoon in the business section the boys and girls made whoopee chasing balloons which carried prize coupons, and there sure was fun for everybody.

BOY'S BICYCLE FEATURE.

When the coupons deposited Friday are drawn at one o'clock Saturday, the second number drawn will carry a prize of a thirty-dollar boy's bicycle, and the boy who holds that coupon will be made happy. Here's a chance for the boys of Belleville to exercise a prosperous influence on Friday shopping. See that Ma and Pa and Big Sister get prize coupons and hand them over to you.

MISS MYSTERY SHOPPER.

Miss Mystery Shopper is having a thrilling time and the pursuers are getting closer all the time. Soon she will have to surrender. Read her story in today's paper, and what will probably be the big climax in tomorrow's paper, with her experiences involving some well known citizens.

WHIRLWIND FINISH.

So now the buying battalions are getting busy on plans for the final attack on the City of Better Values, and there should be two big happy days with pleasure and profit to all concerned.

MAY EXTRADITE MARTIN INSULL

U. S. Government For Second Time Will Try Magnate

Orillia, Ont., May 2 (CP)—Martin Insull, when told today the United States government had moved to extradite him to Chicago a second time to face trial growing out of the collapse of the Insull industries, broke the news calmly.

"I have nothing whatever to say," was his only reply to questioners.

SAFETY PIN IN LUNG

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—Because she laughed 15 years ago, a Belleville woman, whose name doctors would not divulge, has entered hospital here for removal of a safety pin she inhaled into her left lung. Incull, extradited last year, returned to his Orillia home where he had lived since 1932, after his acquittal a few weeks ago in Chicago. He planned to live quietly as he had done previously and said his return has found enjoyment in fishing trips.

Insull fought the first extradition proceedings in Ontario courts for months.

Insull today refused to say whether another fight would follow or whether he would waive extradition.

Night Spent With Salvation Army Advisors And in Rest

PUTS SELF ON TRAP

Leaves Letter For Son, Telling Him to Join Church, Not Gamble

Calmly, exhibiting the same indifference towards death that he has displayed since the final sentence was passed, Harold Worden Vermilyea went to his death at 12.10 this morning.

With the same unconscious manner that has characterized him since his incarceration in the local jail, Vermilyea ascended the twelve steps to the scaffold, accepted the black hood and the hempen slip knot over his head, and without question, also almost silently to his death. Only the dull rumble of the trap door as it slid on well oiled hinges marked his departure.

Complete Resignation.

"He took it as I expected he would, with good grace, and a complete resignation to the inevitable," stated Governor of the Jail, D. O. Flynn, after the execution was performed.

"Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us and deliver us . . ." at the moment of the last word the condemned man fell to his death.

Prayer Chanted.

Vermilyea was crossing the few feet of the grass sward in the execution yard as his spiritual advisers, Adjutant A. W. Martin of the local Salvation Army Corps, Col. Simms and Major Hunton of the Provincial Army Corps chanted the prayer as he walked along.

From the corridor of the cell in which he has been confined since February 18 under close guard, etc., ready for regular periods of exercise in the narrow enclosure, Vermilyea walked firmly, and as believed to be his regular night's sleep, was taken to the scaffold.

He dressed without visible emotion or excitement and stood ready to proceed with the special officers detailed.

Lights Fixed.

Electric light bulbs fixed during the afternoon by a local electrician, and hung in the execution yard, floodlighted the tiny enclosure.

It was shortly after 12:00 a.m. that Joseph Sasnain, turnkey of the jail, approached the cell door, and the cell corridor and nodded at the special guards. He was accompanied by Inspector Charles Gardiner, the local district inspector of the Provincial police.

Received.

"Time's up, Harold," conveyed the guard nearest the cell.

"Just wait a minute," requested Vermilyea from the death cell. "Wait a minute until I get dressed."

Turnkeys, accompanied by guards questioned later, took his time dressing with the support of clothing that was available. The long, white nightgown that he has worn continually during nights in the death cell was exchanged for a pair of dark grey pants; a light grey sweater coat and a grey shirt. He retained the pair of soft brown roscoe slippers he has worn since close confinement.

"Ready, Harold?" questioned Inspector Gardiner, of the Provincial Police Gardiner.

"Sure, just a minute," answered Vermilyea as he stooped to adjust a blanket on the cell floor.

Handcuffs Used.

A shiny pair of handcuffs were produced by the inspector. One link was strapped on Vermilyea's wrist. "What's this for?" demanded the prisoner, "I don't need these things."

"Say," added Vermilyea as his attention was attracted by an envelope on the floor of his cell, "you forgot this letter to mother, you'll be asked the turnkey.

"You can take it," murmured one in attendance as he accepted the proffered envelope and snapped the second link of the cuffs on the bearer's wrist at the same time.

Vermilyea made no comment as he accepted the shackles in the same philosophical fashion.

"What are these things for?" asked the condemned man as he tested the steel circlets binding his arms behind his back. "I don't need these; I can walk down there without these."

"Here you can," soothed the police officers.

March Begins.

Through the narrow hardwood-floored corridor where for the past three months the condemned man has exercised daily, the slow march to the gallows was begun. Earlier in the evening Adjutant A. W. Martin of the local Salvation Army Corps, Major Hunton and Col. Simms of the Provincial Army Corps had held a last conference with Vermilyea. They now accompanied him on the grim march down the seventeen steps from the cell corridor to the execution yard.

Down through the narrow staircase Vermilyea listened silently to the passages of the Lord's prayer. Planking the prisoner was Inspector Gardiner and Turnkey Joseph Sasnain. Behind them the trap door awaited man's spiritual advisers, slowly repeating the Lord's prayer and Psalm 23.

Approaching the small door on his "last mile", the D. O. Flynn and Governor C. H. French joined the entourage and mounted to the scaffold.

Adjustments Made.

Deftly Hangman Samuel Edwards adjusted the black cap, coiled the hanging noose over the condemned man's head. The knot was slipped under the left ear, and the lever

Smartly and Resolutely Condemned Man Walks From His Cell to Gallows

Peace and Quiet After 'May Day'

By The Canadian Press

The Soviet of Canada's May Days contained another entry of "peace and quiet" today. Disorders were expected, particularly in some western strike centres yesterday, but nothing disturbing happened.

Only a strike of 2,000 longshoremen, the universal water-front broke the peaceful spell and the walkout of men unloading and loading vessels in nine Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports of any kind. Nevertheless, harbor officials described the situation as "very grave" and shipowners appealed to local unions and longshoremen's Association Department of Labor for help in settling the strike.

Traffic in Vancouver Vancouver was held up an hour during a parade of 5,000, but there was no repetition of last week's riotous events which left about by strikers from British Columbia relief camps. Special police stood by during the parade.

Demonstrations in support of striking Seattle, L.A. coal miners and not materialize although thousands of miners and their families assembled at Edmonton, Calgary, Alta., and staged a lively sports program. Seven thousand paraded at Winnipeg last night. Parades and meetings were held in various parts of the country but no disorders of trouble arise. It was estimated 10,000 marched in Montreal's "peace" parade where Tim Buck, Communist, received a big cheer. He didn't speak.

Vermilyea Hanging is First In 44 Years in Hastings

First Execution Took Place Here 81 Years Ago

5 OTHER HANGINGS

The execution of Harold W. Vermilyea in this city after midnight marked the sixth execution in the history of Hastings County. The last previous man to pay with his life James Kane who was hanged in the fall part of the county jail on the morning of May 31st, 1901 for the murder of his wife in the March previous.

The first execution which took place here was that of George Barnhard who was hanged in the summer of 1854. Barnhard came to this county from Cornwall when there were but comparatively few settlers in Hastings, and located upon a piece of land in the Township of Tyendinaga, which he partly cleared and then, claimed for his own. Barnhard lived alone and was regarded as an exceptionally quiet resident, with a mildew disposition.

First Hanging

A man named Dafoe, father of Daniel Dafoe, of Deseronto, purchased the piece of land upon which Barnhard was living, and through the legal process attempted to oust Barnhard. The latter, however, refused to leave the premises and the sale of the land he claimed was his, and threatened to kill the purchaser if he were ejected. Mr. Dafoe then got the law to aid or the sheriff of the county and attempted one day to take possession of the land.

Barnhard, however, was on hand, in which Barnhard lived, the latter shot them in the door. The bullet he carried an old-fashioned rifle. "Get out or here," he ordered, "and never dare to set foot on the place and the sheriff continued to advance towards the little house. Again they were ordered off the land but continuing to advance, Barnhard fired. The bullet from the gun penetrated the chest of Mr. Dafoe and he fell dead. Immediately the sheriff wrested the gun from Barnhard and placed him under arrest. He was tried before Judge McLean, and although the defence set up his counsel, C. B. Pardee, Q.C., was insanity, he was found guilty and sentenced to death.

Rock Execution

The next person hanged was Samuel Peter Rock, who suffered the penalty for the murder of a man named Robert Dickie, a settler on the Hastings Road in Monteagle Township on the 12th day of January, 1850. The execution took place on the morning of June 28th the same year.

The murder by Rock was a shocking cold-blooded one, done without heat or excitement, according to the evidence which elicited in the trial after he had been caught rifling the home of Dickie. It was in the absence of the murder, Mr. Dickie entered his house after a short absence and found Rock in the act of abstracting money to the amount of $120, before he discovered that the door was open. The papers and other articles were strewn throughout the interior of the home. Dickie then had been accompanied into his house by a lad named Barbeau who testified on the theft and immediately commenced a struggle with the man. He opened a door leading into an adjoining room and there found Rock standing in the corner of the room, gun in hand and looking at him.

Without warning Rock fired. The heavy ball struck Dickie in the head, killing him instantly. Swerving after the first shot the murderer, it was said, attempted to shoot the boy also, but the terrified lad managed to escape by running through the open door. Rock took to the woods, but armed with the description, which was given them by Barbeau, police soon captured him and brought him to Belleville where he was soon tried, convicted and executed.

Double Execution Public

Monday, December 3, 1862 was a morbidly memorable day in the history of Belleville and Hastings County for on that day a scene was enacted that had few parallels in the history of the county. On that day two persons, husband and wife suffered the supreme penalty of the law, after conviction for the murder on the 19th day of May, 1863 in the same Township of Monteagle. These names were Richard and Mary Aylward. The victim was Wm. Munro, a neighbor with whom the two had frequently quarrelled.

Religious differences were claimed to be the chief cause of the discord, but hilling which was committed followed a simple but heated dispute over some hens owned by Mr. Munro which had strayed onto the Aylward premises.

On that fatal morning, after some heated words over the hens, Aylward, evidence showed, disappeared into his house, and reappeared with a gun. Taking careful aim at Munro, Aylward, it was told at the trial, wounded his victim, whereupon Mrs. Aylward rushed at the injured man with a large axe in the hand and inflicted further wounds. Death of Munro followed. At the same time of the wounding of Munro, a son of the latter was also shot, but he quickly recovered from his wounds.

The couple charged with the slaying of the unfortunate man were quickly tried and on the 3rd day of October of the same year they faced trial, were both found guilty and were sentenced to death. The execution was a public one and thousands of spectators were present from all parts of this and adjoining counties. The day was a bitterly cold one, but the morbid crowd waited for hours to see the execution performed. All executions at this time were public in accordance with the law of the land.

Davis Hanging

After an interval of nearly twenty-eight years another execution took place when Peter Davis was hanged on the morning of Friday, June 20th, 1890, Davis suffered the extreme penalty for the murder of Wm. Emory.

Some years previous to the murder of Emory, Davis had been engaged by the farmer as a farm hand.

On Thursday morning September 19th of that year, Wm. Emory left his home and went to cut hay on a meadow about a mile from his farm house. This was the last he was seen alive.

Failing to return home that night, on the following morning David McEwery, a brother-in-law, Emory, in company with others, went to the place for which Emory had left the day before. They found the lifeless body with a gaping bullet hole in the breast, near which stood his rifle, empty. The muzzle had been driven into the ground and the gun stood unsupported.

Suspicion pointed to Davis who had made threats against Emory's life. On the 20th day of the same month, Davis was arrested at Canemore, charged with the crime. A week later Mrs. Emory was arrested on the charge of aiding and accomplice. On Monday, April 14, 1890, the trial of the two prisoners was commenced before Chief Justice Armour and lasted for only two days. Davis was found guilty, but Mrs. Emory was acquitted. On Friday, June 20th, Davis was taken out to the scaffold and the execution was carried out.

Hanging In 1891

The last hanging in Hastings County was that of James Kane on the morning of May 31st, 1891 for the murder of his wife. Kane who was fatally stabbed with a large butcher knife by her estranged husband after a brief quarrel in a Pinnacle, Sydney home. She died almost instantly.

James Kane was 52 years of age when the capital sentence was carried out. He was born in Dublin and while in Ireland had been active and permanent service in the army. He had been in Canada a number of years previous to the stirring which had been married to his wife for some six years before the fatal quarrel. Kane was described as a rather friendly fellow but was said to have been given to drink. What the crime was committed he had been a boarder in a local hotel.

For a week or so before the murder Kane and his wife had not been living together. On the afternoon of Monday, March 23 shortly before five o'clock Kane went to the home on Pinnacle Street where his wife had been living and by himself a relative move. He entered the kitchen of the home by the back door, and found his wife there.

Shortly after there issued from the house unnerved cries for help. Active hearing them called to her husband, who was in the sitting room of the house, and seeing Kane near the wife, struck him and knocked him to the floor. As Kane fell, badly wounded, staggered towards him, but collapsed and fell dead. Found in Kane's possession was a large butcher knife which was covered with blood, with which he had first stabbed his wife near the heart. He uttered words of regret without saying a word.

Kane surrendered quietly to Sergeant of Police McGrudden. On Thursday, April 16, the trial commenced before Judge Armour and continued all day, a number of witnesses being heard. The defence was insanity. When the evidence was all in the jury retired for half an hour, after which they returned with the verdict of guilty.

When asked by Justice Rose if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced and without hesitation, "Nothing to say, Your Honor."

Kane went to his death unflinchingly on the morning of Thursday, May 31st on the scaffold. Shortly with Kane as he mounted the steps of the scaffold in the jail yard were the Rev. Fathers Jones, Davis and O'Brien. Kane repeated the Litany of the church as he walked slowly to his doom.

Just before the black cap was adjusted, Kane faced the crowd present and in a low voice said "I am thankful to the jury for bringing in their many acts of kindness shown me while I have been in prison, especially Mr. Appleby. I hope all present will pray for me for the crime I have committed and for which I hope to be forgiven."

The trap was sprung and in a few moments the victim was pronounced dead by the jail physician.

Obituary

LATE CHARLES O. HESS

The funeral of Charles Osborne Hess took place Tuesday afternoon, April 30th, from his late residence in the 3rd Con. Sidney. A large number of many friends were present to pay their last tribute of respect and convince their sympathy with the family in their bereavement. An impressive service was conducted in the home and at the graveside in Wallbridge cemetery by the Rev. G. Campbell, pastor of Grace United Church, Trenton.

The bearers were nephews of the late Mr. Hess and were Messrs. Harry Hess, Roy Hess, William Hardy, Carl Hardy, Frank Hamilton and Percy Hamilton.

Although the late Mr. Hess had been in ill health for a number of years, his death which occurred early Sunday morning, April 28th, came as a great shock to his family and relatives. By his many fine qualities of character and friendly disposition he had endeared himself to his family and relatives, and had endeared and throughout all his life, many staunch friends in the district and county. He will be sincerely missed by many persons.

About 76 years ago the late Mr. Hess was born in the 3rd concession of Sidney and he resided there all his life with the exception of three years during which time he made his home in Belleville. His parents were the late James Hess and his wife Matilda Parks. He took an active interest in the affairs of the township and was prominent in the cheese industry, being for several years President of the Sidney Cheese Board as well as at one time President of the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade. He carried on his farm most efficiently and to the entire satisfaction of his many neighbours. By all who knew him he was held in the highest esteem. In religion he was a member of the United Church and in politics he was a Liberal-Conservative.

Surviving to mourn his loss are the widow, whose maiden name was Sarah Beals, and one sister, Mrs. William Blair, Trenton; one brother, Mr. John Hess of the Front of Sidney; these are the only members left of a family of eight.

LATE DONALD McARTHUR

The funeral of Donald McArthur, 11 year old son of the Children's Shelter, took place Wednesday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home. Service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Ferguson of Bridge Street United Church. Interment was made in Belleville cemetery.

SAMUEL J. DANFORD

Madoc, May 2 (Special)—Samuel J. Danford, an aged resident of Madoc, passed away at an early hour this morning. Mr. Danford was ninety years of age on March 8th, and he and his wife (who survives him) celebrated their seventy-first wedding anniversary on the first of September, 1934.

The late Mr. Danford was born in Thurlow Township, near Belleville. He moved to Rosseau and later took up residence just south of Madoc village, where he lived for the past forty years. Mr. Danford was a devoted member of the Standard Church, Madoc.

Left to mourn his loss are his widow and four children, Mrs. Frank Ketcheson, Harold; Joseph Danford, Madoc, and the Misses Tillery and Florence Danford at home. Two sons, James and John, predeceased him. Funeral services for the late Mr. Danford will be held on Saturday afternoon at the Standard Church, Madoc.

A Tribute to a Local Hostelry

When first Belleville became a settlement, there appeared in the little community a place to lodge those who came but temporarily to the village. As time took the great growth of the little village, brought more and more people to Belleville, it was necessary to build newer and finer establishments to lodge the newcomers. So today in Belleville we have these places that have kept pace with the city for the progression of accommodation, and the hospitality that this city has so long prided on our greatest virtue.

Of those of our community who have friends visiting them should always endeavour to have them stay in a place where service is in accordance with the best of home and hospitable accommodations, and have made our hotels worthy of Belleville. No greater service can be rendered "under cover" than that of giving its visitors the best that the city affords. Due to most able management, an atmosphere of great achievement permeates the New Queen's Hotel. If you lodge your friends in this hotel you may be assured that they will receive an accommodation that is unusual, unsurpassed in the effort they put forth is made to satisfy every desire in ideal hotel service.

Located at 158 Front Street, the New Queen's Hotel provides excellent accommodation for permanent guests who are given special weekly rates.

Another feature of the New Queen's Hotel, is their dining room, which is one of the most popular and attractively furnished, and here they offer the discriminating delicious cuisine.

How different is this age than that of the past. Only a few centuries ad Inns gave the only welcome that the passing friends might have. The New Queen's Hotel is one of the outstanding features of this city. Their unique service, the prominent part it plays in the life of this city. Their telephone number is 3370.

the head of Vermilyea and shook mugly tight.

Slowly the spiritual advisers responded. An almost indistinguishable motion by the crown representative, a dull grating sound, Vermilyea swung silently, almost unbelievably through the suddenly opened pit.

Some minutes elapsed before the jail physician entered under the platform of the scaffold to officially announce the man dead. Later, the dead man was removed from his position and placed in a casket. Until was provided by the family, who previously had claimed the body from the government. The casket was taken into the county building, under cover of darkness sometime before the execution took place. At six o'clock this morning the jury composed of J. W. Barlow, foreman, Thomas H. Marshall, Wesley Emmerson, A. R. Schryver, Harry B. Day, E. D. Pinkle, C. R. Clapp, T. D. Bonnell, W. M. Noble, Thomas Ellis, Bennett and G. C. Barrager convened under the direction of Coroner Dr. F. G. Walbridge in the county building and rendered a verdict that the late old Wooler Vermilyea came to his death by hanging in accordance with the sentence of the court."

The body was immediately released to the family and the funeral cortege formed and shortly slipped through the city streets to the Belleville crematory, where in a specially prepared plot, the deceased was interred. Major Herbert Symon, Col. Simms of Toronto Salvation Army headquarters, Major A. W. Martin of the local corps and others interested were present. Simple committal rites were recited at the graveside and the final chapter in the earthly life of Harold W. Vermilyea was written.

Trailed across the continent and brought here to stand trial, Vermilyea, 50-year-old fruit grower of Ontario, Cal., was on Feb. 25 convicted of murder of his mother-in-law Aurelia Vermilyea, 73, widow of Nathaniel Vermilyea, connected with a family well known in Belleville and district for many years.

Mrs. Vermilyea was attacked by a man with a hatchet in front of the home of her daughter here Oct. 4 last. She died the next day. The police decided the attacker must have known Mrs. Vermilyea. A man called at her home the night of the murder and had a conversation with her. Two passers-by who saw a man running away from the scene of the crime declared he appeared to be small of stature.

The police obtained a letter received by Mrs. Vermilyea from her son Harold, in which he spoke of his financial difficulties and asked for a loan of money. Other correspondence had letters from Harold giving his opinion that Mrs. Vermilyea should divide her estate among her children immediately, when testamentary would be appreciated, rather than wait till she died.

Thomas E. Gardner of the Provincial Police and Chief Alex Kidd of Belleville checked Harold Vermilyea's movements and wired Los Angeles asking his arrest. Evidence was he had made a supposedly secret journey east to Toronto and to Belleville, leaving his homekeeper and writing to relatives he was going directly on a trip into Northern California. It was ascertained that subsequent to the murder he proceeded by train to Chicago and by aeroplane to California.

Chain of Evidence

A taxi driver said he remembered driving Vermilyea from the Grand Central Airport at Glendale, Cal., immediately after the arrival of the regular passenger plane from Chicago. The pilot of the plane was located, Ila, too, recognized Vermilyea. A porter on the train between Toronto and Chicago identified him. Clothes and other articles found in Vermilyea on his arrest were Canadian made. But he said he had not been out of California since 1931.

Vermilyea was extradited and went on trial at the Assizes here before Mr. Justice Hoid Jeffery. Throughout the humanity evidence was entered. Crown attention testified that Vermilyea was a paranoic type and was of competent to stand trial.

The jury decided the trial should go on. Vermilyea's 18-year-old daughter, a California University student, made a deposition read to the court her father's financial circumstances seemed to have aggravated his "queerness." Family history produced in court by the defense counsel, R. H. Greer, told of cases of mental illness among the prisoner's connections. Verdict of guilty was brought in by the jury after a deliberation of 4 hours and 21 minutes. The trial had lasted ten days.

Two weeks after Vermilyea's conviction and sentence he was visited at his cell by Mrs. Jack Gale of California woman, whose name was brought into the trial in the evidence given by the prisoner's daughter, who said she would not disapprove of Mrs. Schorr as a stepmother.

Prostate of the will of Mrs. Aurelia Vermilyea, indicated her son Harold would be entitled to about $10,000 as his share of the estate.

Story by S. A. Officers

Major Wallace Bunton, prison secretary of the Salvation Army, after the execution made the following statement to The Ontario Intelligencer. "Adjutant Martin of the local corps, who has been advisor to Vermilyea ever since he came to the jail and I went to his cell at ten o'clock last night and stayed with him until the end. We found him reading and he said he was thinking hard. He expressed himself that it would be all over by the morning.

"Lead Kindly Light"

"We asked him if he would like us to sing to him and he said 'Yes'. We asked him his favorite hymn, he said, "Lead Kindly Light" and we sang the first verse. In the second verse, "I was not ever thus, nor prayed that Thou shouldst lead me on", he joined in and helped us to sing.

"Then we prayed with him and while the adjutant and I stood there with him we asked him how it was in all reality. "Your soul has to meet God", and he said 'O.K.' We sang another hymn, "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour', and then had a further talk on spiritual lines and we finished by singing "O Beulah Land'. Then he said he would like to rest for a few moments.

Appreciation of Officials

"We were in the cell all this time and he was thinking hard it was very clear. He told us his favorite Scripture was the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel of St. John: 'Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In My Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. . . . . .

"He was very anxious to have the people to know the kindness and courtesy of the Gaol Governor Mr. French, Sheriff O'Flynn and all the officials and guards—for all they had done for him. He said that they did everything that was possible for his comfort. For Adjutant and Mrs. Martin of the Salvation Army for the manner in which they had interested themselves in his welfare. He had remarked: 'Their kindness will not be forgotten'."

Informed of Early Execution

"After his rest he referred to the execution in the morning as taking place about five o'clock, but I informed him that the last word I had had from the officials was that it would take place shortly after midnight. He said 'I thought it would be morning, but however, it is all right.' It was then about eleven o'clock.

"We had a little conversation about the prison meals. I said I was afraid that the reason for the depression was that the people had been drifting away from God and righteousness and forgetting to put first things first and he said, if the world would follow after the life of Jesus Christ, they would be so much happier in the day and especially he referred to the younger generation.

Advice to Son

"He left a note written to be sent to his boy with the advice that no matter what he did in life to 'Pick good company, to choose his church and attend to it, never to gamble because he said 'you are back before you start'.

"Shortly the time came at midnight the sheriff and governor and those connected with it. He only saying they came for him. He was still resting at the time on his little bed and he arose and said 'All right'.

Never Faltered

"When asked if he had anything further to say, 'No, I'm ready', he replied. He then kissed himself and came out of the cell like a soldier marching. He never faltered along the way down the corridor and stairway and on the way to the gallows. He stepped quickly and just as he was turning to ascend the steps prior to the trap he turned his head to me with a smile on his face and said 'Goodbye Wallace', I said 'Goodbye old man'. He went to the trap, stood on it, and put himself in position without a murmur.

"As we were walking from the cell to the scaffold, we began the service. Reading, the twelfth chapter of Isaiah, beginning at the second verse 'Behold God is my salvation, I will trust and not be afraid, for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song: He also is become my salvation.' Then the ninety first psalm was recited "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High" and the 46th Psalm 'God is my refuge and strength.' As the procession came to the scaffold the Lord's prayer was recited. During this time he was ready with the service closed with the benediction.

Service Not Hurried

"There was no hurry in the service and in the last act. It was calm. Vermilyea did not take any stimulant, as he said he did not need it.

"He was a very brave man, as brave as you would wish to see."

Recently he had told Adjutant Martin how appreciative he was of the attentiveness and faithfulness to his duty in visiting him.

Major Bunton first saw the man in March. The major remarked "He was very much the gentleman to the treatment of us when we went to see him, and appreciated our visits and was glad to see the Salvation Army.

Vermilyea at no time referred to the crime on October 4th last of which he stood condemned, said the Salvation Army officers when questioned.

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—"Two words from Shakespeare's King Henry IV, printed above a graduate's biography in the University of Toronto year-book 26 years ago, held a tragic significance today.

Beneath the picture of a bespectacled youth were the words: "Oh, my sweet Harry, how many hast thou slain today?"

The youth was Harold W. Vermilyea.

Why this particular quotation was chosen may never be known. In the play, after Prince Hal imitated the Braggart Bolgour he voiced an imaginary question by Holspur's wife, and that question was the selected question.

Of Vermilyea, the now-forgotten biographer chronicled in the 1907 "Torontonensis" or Varsity tradition:

"One day four miles out of Belleville his nurse looked into the blue eyes of baby Harold and remarked that he was a 'draw laddie'. This set a pace for his ambitions, and when in 1903 he came to Varsity he proceeded at once to the gymnasium and the track. A good student at the proper time, and of sport when occasion demanded, he was never an easy man with whom to become familiar. His friends will remember him as a good fellow, who was always willing to extend the helping hand. He is reliable and persevering in his studies, and will become one of the strong men of our great west, to the building up of which he intends to devote his life."

EXPECT UNEXPECTED WHEN DRIVING

Even the most casual observer as he travels along the highways may see plenty of evidences of the errors in judgment and hasty decisions on the part of drivers which are the fundamental causes of the majority of accidents. The actions and behaviour of such motorists seem to indicate that the safety of themselves and others is of small consequence in comparison with the possibility of saving a few minutes, or even a few seconds.

The statistics of accidents also point to this lack of a proper judgment of values. For example, a comparison of accident data over several years shows an almost constant similarity in the proportion of the various types of accident; whereas there is considerable variation in the occurrence of these types of accident from month to month, because of the failure of many drivers and pedestrians to adjust their behaviour to offset the extra hazards produced by varying conditions of traffic, weather, light and road surface conditions. As an example of this, we find that December, about the least favourable month for pedestrian travel—is the second worst month from the standpoint of pedestrian accidents. Also, the non-collision type, which includes mishaps in which vehicles run off the roadway or overturn, might be expected to be most frequent during the winter when road surface conditions and poor visibility make proper control difficult. Yet, actually, the peak in July during the past four years was 145 per month, greater than the total for December. The explanation would seem to be that drivers generally will reduce their speed on roads that are obviously unsafe, but cannot resist the temptation to travel at speeds beyond reasonable control when road conditions are good.

In other words, allowance is usually made for obvious dangers but a clear road breeds a false sense of security which too often leads to accident. This is especially true when children are at play. Apparently many drivers assume that the child on the sidewalk will stay there until the car has passed. Thus, all through the spring and summer months accidents are reported in which the driver states, "the child darted from the sidewalk into my path. I didn't have a chance to stop." In almost every case this is the truth, but what such drivers fail to realize is that the child on the sidewalk is a danger signal which must be passed with caution and reduced speed if safety is to be assured. The great increase in accidents involving children during the late spring and summer months, an increase which is to be observed in accident statistics year after year, is conclusive evidence that drivers still place too much reliance on the judgment of the child in such circumstances. Trust your own good judgment, not the whim of a child', is an excellent rule at all times and especially during the sunny days of spring and summer when the number of children on the street is much larger than at other times.

THE SUPER-RACE MYTH

Chicago University's Department of Anthropology wants the League of Nations to call an international conference of scientists to enlighten the world on the question of race.

The League of Nations, we imagine, has on hand more pressing things. Nevertheless, a lot of the world could do with an authoritative pronouncement putting an end to much nonsense talked about race.

Even on this continent, where we have much less of racialism than Europe, we hear occasionally about "Nordics" and "Aryans." Actually, there are no such races. According to the best scientific findings, the Nordic race has been so diluted that even in the Scandinavian countries not 50 percent. are pure Nordic. And there is no German race; Hitler is as much Alpine as Nordic. Neither is there an Aryan race. Aryan is a linguistic term, and is used to designate those people who speak an Aryan language, such as the Hindoos. Finally, the Jews are just as good Caucasians as the Germans.

These things are known to science; to all scholars. The trouble is that a lot of racial agitators are ignorant of them, keep telling the world that their own particular race is superior to some other, or to all others. It is the source of a lot of the world's trouble.—Ottawa Journal.

SIR MALCOLM CAUGHT SPEEDING

In the Eastleigh police court Sir Malcolm Campbell paid a fine of one pound for exceeding the speed limit. He pleaded guilty of having done between 40 and 45 miles an hour over a stretch of Hampshire road near Southampton.

England has lately set out to cut down the casualty list due to motor traffic. A strict limit of 30 miles an hour has been imposed on the roads outside of cities or whenever the district may be regarded as built up. This drastic limitation on speed has been decided upon only after several years of experiment without any speed limit.

Motor cars have been allowed to drive in the United Kingdom at any speed, but with the responsibility upon the driver to keep within the limits of safety. Experience has demonstrated that even where regard for pedestrian rights is highly developed, the motorist cannot be left to decide whether the speed is beyond the margin of safety. So the authorities have set 30 miles as the limit within specified areas, and they are strictly enforcing the law. The fining of Sir Malcolm Campbell will help to advertise this fact.—Ottawa Citizen.

TOO ZEALOUS EXPERTS

New York Times comments on the aircraft base sensation of a few days ago in these words:—

"Proposals to build hidden bases for aircraft along the Canadian border were included in the plans of our military experts agreed on before the Congressional committee. It is not clear whether a formal or informal inquiry about this came from Ottawa to Washington. In any case, President Roosevelt spoke out sharply against any program of this kind in a letter addressed to the Military Committee. This was said to be an unprecedented communication coming from a President to Congress. But Mr. Roosevelt delivered his opinion not only as head of the Administration which has urged disarmament, but as Commander-in-Chief of the army. In this latter guise he is certainly entitled to have and express opinions on military questions, and he did so in this Canadian instance with a vigor and effect. No war in which Canada would be involved with the United States can be imagined. Why, then, prepare for an impossible eventuality? The President went further and affirmed that there is no justification for fear that our friendly relations with any foreign Government could or would be broken. It must now be plain that though Mr. Roosevelt has gone along with planning national defense, and has his own military advisers, he does not propose to be bound hand and foot by them.

The technical position in this matter is easily understood. The experts want their plans to be complete and perfect. They wish to be ready to defend themselves against any possible attack and at the same time to be prepared to strike deadly blows at any conceivable foe. Lord Salisbury once said that, if he were to follow the advice of his military experts he would begin fortifying England against an army from the planet Mars. It is not wholly in this mood that the American officers favor bases for planes along the Great Lakes. They have no thought of making a hostile gesture toward Canada, but their conception is of a comprehensive series of airplane patrols, and it is now fairly certain that they will be dropped out of it, in accordance with the President's strong protests and statement of American policy."

WHAT IS GLORY?

A despatch from Madrid records the fact that the coffin of Rudolf Valentino, once the demigod of all movie enthusiasts and the idol of many female America, has been displaced from its former niche in the mausoleum of the Mathis family, where it had reposed since his death some years ago.

It seems that the coffin was placed in the vault as a last favour to the popular film star from his famous patroness, Jane Mathis. But the lady herself, her relatives found they could not make room for her coffin without displacing some other, so they decided to dump the remains of Valentino—not being one of the family—in the cellar of the cemetery caretaker's house. The caretaker made a public appeal for funds to enable him to bury the coffin, but none were forthcoming. So in the cellar Valentino lies today,—forgotten.

Such is film fame, and in this respect it bears a very distinct resemblance to several other sorts of fame, particularly the brand that has been made so popular by some papers of late who apply the word to anybody and everybody who happens to be in the public eye at the moment. True fame, however, does not fade. Witness Shakespeare, Milton, and a mighty host.—Montreal Star.

There's a divinity which shapes our ends, roughhew them how we will.—Shakespeare.

It is the law of our humanity, that man must know good through evil.—No great principle ever triumphed but through much evil.—No man ever progressed to greatness and goodness but through great mistakes.—Frederick W. Robertson.

Let a man be never so ungrateful or inhuman, he shall never destroy the satisfaction of my having done a good office.—Seneca.

The good are heaven's peculiar care.—Ovid.

The man without a purpose is like a ship without a rudder—a waif, a nothing, a no man. Have a purpose in life, and having it, throw such strength of mind and muscle into your work as God has given you.—Carlyle.

THE HEART YOU LOVE

O, never hurt the heart you love
Last some time, greater grown,
The scar you set upon that heart,
Be found within your own?

For it is thus that time brings back
The cruel deed you do;
It leaves a stamp upon your life.
Though none may know say you.

O, never let the heart you love
Be shadowed by a doubt
Which on your own may fall some day
To drive the sunlight out.

O, never hurt the heart you love;
Who know how very far
The wound may penetrate at last
Or who may bear the scar?

WHEN THE STORK TRIED TO CROWD

five girl babies into one cradle and gave the village of Corbeil, Northern Ontario, world-wide quintuplet fame, the "blessed event" became a Front Page news story all over the world, and the daily doings of the quints have been live news ever since.

Of course the parents were poor, very poor, as only poor people could afford to have twins let alone quints.

But while the stork brought a burden he also brought a blessing for never were poor parents so relieved of all care and expense of caring for their infants as were the Dionnes of Corbeil. Comfortable quarters, doctors, nurses, even a special hospital was provided to guard the health of the young Dionnes.

x

Hence folks wondered when the Dionne parents came articulate and demanded return of custody of their famous offspring. Nor did they lack backers, kind friends who wished to help them bring up the youngsters.

x

Seemed strange until the report of the guardians appeared showing that the estate of the Dionne Quintuplets has now reached the sum of $151,187.29.

x

This is surprising but reveals good management on the part of the guardians.

x

Cash in the bank for the infants totals $15,728.27; contracts are held valued at $144,772.45, for medical fees, legal fees, $9,412.77; a Province of Ontario bond for $10,000 and gifts valued at $1,596.25.

x

A Toronto newspaper paid $1,598 for the monopoly of still picture rights for an eight-months' period.

x

Contracts with firms using the names and pictures of the infants for advertising purposes total a large sum; Pathe News, New York, contributed $90,000, and the Alexander Doll Company, New York, $2,500. Cash receipts in the period from July 26, 1934 to March 31, 1935, totalled $30,500.00 for advertising, still and motion picture rights, and donations.

x

Cash disbursements aggregated $14,672.45, for medical fees, legal fees, light and power, coal, food supplies, repairs, drilling a well, petty cash, etc.

x

For his services covering the period from the babies' birth until the end of April, Dr. A. R. Dafoe was paid $2,200.

x

So you see the care and keep of the Dionne quintupiets is a business enterprise, a going concern, and remarkably well managed.

x

That there are people on the outside looking in who would gladly shoulder all responsibility of the intake and even hippodrome it into a bigger stake is only natural. Sugar do attract flies.

COBALT CLOUDS HAVE a Roosevelt silver lining these days.

x

A man at a recent dog show noticed a pretty girl gazing around as if puzzled. He went over to her and said: "Pardon me, but can't you find the kennel you wish? If not, I shall be glad to assist you."

"Oh, thank you," she replied. "Would you mind showing me where they are exhibiting the ocean greyhounds?"

QLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

MAY 2ND, 1915.

This morning a load of hay to be delivered to Mr. F. Smith of this city upset at the corner of Pinnacle and Hill Streets. The horses, belonging to Mr. Fred Westcott of Huntingdon Township, swerved suddenly and upset the hay and started running down the street. They were stopped before any damage was done.

This morning a collision occurred on Front Street between two vehicles. The result was that one of the wheels of Mr. Pringle's vehicle was considerably damaged.

The following references to Belleville boys are contained in a letter received from Light R. D. Fenton from overseas: "I saw the two Yeomans boys this morning. They are both looking splendid, and all the officers say that they both are real energetic and good soldiers, and are Well thought of. I saw Harry Wiseman, too, of the Canadian Field Artillery, also of Porter & Carney's office, last night. He is looking fine and is a right good soldier all through. Charlie Gilmore is a sort of "father" to the rest of the boys and would take the shirt off his back for any of us."

MORE PEOPLE RIDE ON GOODYEAR TIRES THAN ON ANY OTHER KIND —of course you do!
Your modern car is lively, throbbing with power! At a touch of the "gas" it leaps ahead!
But what does that do to tires? These split-second starts, grinding stops and sustained high speeds punish tires as never before.
Tire manufacturers were challenged by failing mileage to produce a new tire that would meet these conditions. G3 was Goodyear's answer and already so many have been sold that on a safe estimated annual mileage Canadians have already driven G3 more than a billion miles.
G3 is new—but the experimenting is all over. It's a proven tire. Ask a Goodyear dealer to show you your size. He will fit your car with G3's at a price no higher than that of standard tires.

DANGER OF WAR HANGS LIKE CLOUD SAYS RED CHIEF

700 Military Planes Fly Over Red Square at Ceremonies

'RED ARMY READY'

Every Type of Airplane is Paraded Above Lenin Tomb

(By John Lloyd)

MOSCOW, May 1.—(AP)—Nearly 700 military planes roared over Red Square today in the most imposing demonstration the Soviet has ever given of its aerial power while the Red Army passed in review in the annual May Day ceremonies.

The demonstration was followed by an address by Klementy Voroshiloff, Commissar for Defense, in which he said the danger of war "hangs like a heavy cloud over humanity."

"If war is imposed upon us, the enemy will get response to him with our Red Army," he added. "They must not reproach themselves if that acquaintance is disagreeable."

Every type of airplane from multi-motored bombers to new, blunt-nosed and swift pursuit craft paraded above the tomb of Lenin from which Joseph Stalin, Soviet Dictator, reviewed the military display. Hundreds of them passed, meanwhile, over the stone paving of the square.

Spectators counted 125 heavy bombing planes, alone during the impressive aerial demonstration. The Air Parade was led by the huge "Maxim Gorky," largest plane in the world's largest land plane.

Voroshiloff addressing the troops said:

"Our country is doing everything possible to prevent war and our strong army appears to be the best argument to this end. If war is imposed upon us, the enemy will feel there is a difference between the Czar's Army and our Red Army."

Mystery Jar Full of Money Keeps Relief Parents Trembling

Springfield, Mo., May 1.—(AP)—Willis Bridges' family was on relief roles all winter, his "seven kids crying for something to eat"—while Bridges forcefully guarded "dough."

Today the 41-year-old tenement farmer told his story, refreshed by three nights of good sleep, the first he has enjoyed since he went rabbit hunting last fall. Seeking money for the family table, he found in an abandoned cache on his farm near Stockton, a fruit jar full of money.

"I told my wife about it and we didn't know what to do," Bridges said, "I heard them talkin' downtown that the gold notes wasn't legal, or something, and I was afraid to try to spend it.

"I hid it way out in a plowed field. But I couldn't sleep nights. I kept thinkin' what if it was to get plowed up, or something."

Historians Find Indian Chiefs Were Not 'Big Shots'

Their Power Was Limited, Each Tribe Had Different Chiefs

Muskogee, Okla., May. 1—(AP)—The "Heap Big Indian Chief" of Hollywood fame was foiled down to less glamorous proportions today in one of the favorite reservation lands Oklahoma.

Indian authorities of the State Historical Society, and the Smithsonian Institute ethnologists who report to Washington agree on not "big shots".

Said old-timers who ought to know.

The chief's power was limited, their authority was exceedingly restricted even when it came to recognition of their own following.

In fact, Indians were downright backward when it came to recognizing authority, even in their own tribes.

Their own ideas rather than those of their chiefs, Grant Foreman, a man, noted authority on Northwest Indians, explained.

"The Cherokees, for example, had a war chief as distinguished from the chief who presided over peace councils," he said. "The war chief was selected for his exceptional courage and ability to lead men, but to follow him was not required."

Expert Denies Theory

Binghamton, N.Y., May 1.—(CP)—Young Canada and the youth of the United States will not change Indian chiefs all over slumberland tonight, because the Indian chiefs of today are real entities and not mere storybook creatures, the leading United States authority on the Iroquois says, the Smithsonian Institution to the contrary notwithstanding, that there were Indian chiefs.

Dr. Arthur C. Parker of Rochester, former State Archaeologist and recognized successor to the late Dr. William Beauchamp, historian and foremost United States authority on history and folklore of the Six Nations—in a statement to the Binghamton Press today set Smithsonian authorities right in their recent declaration "there were no Indian chiefs."

"The Iroquois and many other tribes," said Dr. Parker, "recognized had civil and military chiefs whose authority within their fields was not questioned save in the case of a reform expected functions."

Referring to the pitch of Brantford, Ont., Iroquois authorities to the Smithsonian bulletin, Dr. Parker said:

"The Canadian authority who replied that the Nations of the Iroquois had civil chiefs is correct. These civil chiefs sometimes constituted a council operating under rules and regulations as definite as those of the United States Senate and with even greater decorum. What the Washington Bureau overlooked was that in Indian government there was a complete organization capable of rigorous enforcement.

"With the Indians, however, social pressure was the only force behind Indians government proceeded from the group as a unit and was not imposed from above. Thus may have arisen the statement that there were no chiefs. To dispute the fact is only mincing definitions".

CAR CRASHES TREE TWO ARE INJURED

Miss Bernice Davison of City and Ernest Smith Occupants

Miss Bernice Davison, of this city, and Mr. Ernest Smith, at the R.C.A.F. Camp, Trenton, were both seriously injured when the automobile in which the former was driving crashed into a tree some seven miles east of Belleville at 2.30 a.m. today. After lying unconscious at the side of the road for a period of well over an hour, the two injured persons were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in separate ambulances.

Latest reports from the hospital at 2.30 p.m. today were to the effect that Miss Davison's condition is "very serious" while Mr. Smith was stated to be resting quietly.

The accident happened about one-half mile west of Riley's Furniture Store when the motor car skidded on the slippery pavement, and failed to make a left hand turn in the road. The vehicle crashed across a stone fence, driving the entire engine back into the front seat, where the two occupants of the car were seated. Miss Davison sustained a broken right ankle, severe internal injuries and facial cuts due to flying glass. Mr. Smith sustained a broken hip and numerous other bruises.

Miss Davison was removed to the Belleville General Hospital by the city ambulance, while Mr. Smith was taken to the Belleville and Macmillan's ambulance. The two injured persons were unconscious along the side of the road, and it was only by a passing motorist, who informed the police, who in turn notified and provided the ambulance service.

SCRIBBLED NOTE FROM YOUNG SON ARRIVES AT 2P.M.

Young Than's Letter Last Condemned Man May Read

NO LAST REQUESTS

A forlorn little message scribbled in pencil on a page of plain paper from his only son, 14-year-old Than Ardd addressed: "Dear Dad Bernardino, California will be one of the last letters Harold Worden Vermilyea will read on this earth. The short message, the contents of which were not divulged, was received with a small batch of other mail for the condemned man in the county court house, shortly before two o'clock this afternoon. Inside his cell cage as he read the letter from his son stood a small stack of letters written in pencil during his confinement, and addressed to friends and relatives throughout this country and the United States. In this manner is Vermilyea, doomed to die on the gallows some time after midnight tonight, spending his last hours in communication.

Vermilyea was up early this morning after a restless night. For the first requests was for a shave and a hair cut. This was done by Jack Ellis, barber, in the cell corridor while three others stood and watched on. Shortly after 10 o'clock and shave his second request was for a stock of writing paper and envelopes. Alone in the cell seated on the blanket on the floor he spent hours during the time this request was granted.

Hearty Breakfast Taken

Vermilyea ate a hearty breakfast today, a simple fare of bran flakes, grape fruit and oranges, but he refused the meal the night before and only an hour or so after he was sentenced to death. Sing Ping who had been denied him ate heartily a substantial noon day meal consisting of salad and other delicacies topped by cake and a cup of coffee.

Spends Day Writing

This afternoon Vermilyea's letter writing will be broken by a session with his wife, Mrs. Arthur, the brother is expected to arrive at Belleville at 4 o'clock and spend an hour or so with the condemned man. Up to the present no reference has been made by Vermilyea to his brother or other relatives of his family residing in the city the widow of the rope is only hours away.

The condemned man will walk unassisted to the scaffold, with the only accommodation that has been exhibited by him ever since the sentence was pronounced upon him. This is evident by the fact that he appears to walk with little more ease and has apparently accepted the inevitable with a cool appreciation of what lies before him during his last few hours on earth. This is especially true of late.

Hour of Execution Unknown

When Vermilyea is hanging will take place in the tiny yard at the rear of the jail has not been announced by jail officials. It may take place at any hour between midnight tonight and the light of the grey dawn. Officials at the county jail were apparently unaware that the execution had been fixed for midnight. It was made to find out. The streets in front and at the rear of the court house will be closely guarded by a corps of special constables and provincial police this evening on. Particular attention will be paid Church and Pinnacle streets, adjoining property. none but jail officials and others specially engaged for the act of execution will be admitted to the jail building.

Harry Hangman Samuel Edwards who has been in the city for the past few days superintending the erection of building the scaffold has seen Vermilyea but it is said the condemned man has not seen the man who will perform the last act. Vermilyea has been very calm and visually "weighed" as he paced the corridors for the death cell by the reprehensible of the Crown. Vermilyea's office is said to have been given him by the jail physician.

Vermilyea may make no "last request" other than that his letters written by him, be addressed to the proper destinations and that he be provided a good cigar. When he will be executed he will not know until Edwards steps on the trap, accompanied by the special guards, straps his arms to his sides and leads him down the tiny stairs in his cell corridor to the tiny yard in which stands the scaffold.

Major Bunton, Salvation Army Prison Commissioner for the province is expected to arrive in the city late this afternoon. He will offer religious services at the local Citadel will accompany Adjutant Martin to the jail local clergy on this death cell where they are expected to remain in close conference with the condemned man.

HALIBURTON, ONT., WOMAN TO DIE

Mrs. Eva Coo Will Walk Last Mile at Sing Sing

Albany, N.Y., May 1 (AP)—The New York Court of Appeals today signed the death warrant for the execution of Mrs. Eva Coo and set Tuesday, June 4, as the day Sing Sing prison as Thursday night, June 6.

The order of the court gives Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing discretion to set the exact execution any time within the week beginning Monday, June 24, but as executions are invariably carried out Thursday nights the order means Mrs. Coo will walk "the last mile" on the 27th. She was born in Haliburton County, Ont., but left her home at an early age.

The high court yesterday unanimously affirmed the verdict of the lower court in finding Mrs. Coo guilty of murdering Harry Wright, her chore man, for his insurance.

Executive clemency now is blond Mrs. Coo's only hope to escape Sing Sing's electric chair.

Miss Mystery Shopper Slips Thru Crowds, Escapes Recognition

Tells Reporter Interesting Stories of Her Experiences in Shops And on Streets—While She Recognizes People, They Do Not Recognize Her

Miss Mystery Shopper, one of the most enthusiastic features of the Belleville Better Days Shopping Carnival arranged by the city's leading merchants for the present week, slipped through the shopping stores and alongside sidewalks of the business section of the city yesterday with the greatest of ease.

No sharp-eyed local or out-of-town shopper recognized her. Nor so far no one has confronted her with a description of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, bearing a printed advertisement of some one of the many women taking part in the Belleville Better Days merchandising festival and offering her: "Pardon me, But Are You Miss Mystery Shopper?" And up to now no one has been awarded the easy prize of ten dollars for following these simple rules.

"Although sighed this 5 foot 7 inch, 130-pound blonde, mystery miss, kept a pleasant and tantalizing day's shopping tour of the leading stores of the city she almost caught twice. If that well known local business man hadn't spied on me in the Metropolitan Stores, with a piece of paper in her hand and a pencil poised ready to write, eye only knew how close she was.

And if that young lady with the Canadian Department Stores only had by a little more courage . . .

Despite the fact that there is a price of ten dollars on her head for discovery and capture, the one who follows the simple rules, Miss Mystery Shopper is really enjoying her experiences in the stores and shops.

"It's exciting," she confided "It's lots of fun. I've been looking at everything from wash tubs in the Walker Hardware Company to chiffon hose in the Walker Store, Mc-Intosh Bros., as well as Lipsons, Stevens, and from electric light lamps in the Hydro Electric Shop to some of that beautiful cutlery and kitchen appliances in Stroudy, to radios in the Big "A" Company."

"Mrs. M—of Charles Street was in Woodley's the Furriers, when I tried on that gorgeous coat in the window. But she was so engrossed in a chic little hat she was being fitted with that she didn't even notice me. Then when I walked into Delaney's a little later in the afternoon Mrs. M—— was standing on one of those beautiful sable-trimmed coats. I didn't blame her for ordering it put away for her, because I never myself that furs are going to be higher much higher next year. And Mrs. McK— is one of my customers, while Smith's was asked to be resting quietly.

"The accidents happening about one-half mile west of Riley's Furniture when the motor car skidded on the slippery pavement, and failed to make a left hand turn in the road. The vehicle crashed across a stone fence, driving the entire engine back into the front seat, where the two occupants of the car were seated. "Frost in May? Don't be too sure that we won't get it," warned a well known local gardener today in connection with the unseasonable weather which set in the first day of the present month.

Last night temperatures descended to a degree which is not at all usual for the weather, riding through the district as a gale from the north stopped just above the freezing point. Almost each registered during the night a temperature above freezing, but no frost damage was reported. The night before last, however, several patches above ground.

MUSIC

KAYLA MITZEL GIVES RECITAL

Performance by Young Toronto Violinist Brilliant.

Breathing the very spirit of music and with a mastery of expression which makes the most difficult compositions a delight for her to play and for her audiences to hear, Kayla Mitzel, young Jewish Toronto girl, who has made her way by music through sheer genius until the violin pleased more than five hundred Belleville and district music lovers at the Collegiate Auditorium on Tuesday evening. Miss Mitzel was last night in appearance in the season's series of three concerts under the auspices of the Belleville Concert Association.

Kayla Mitzel, not yet twenty has been to the fore in musical ranks for some years. Years ago she played in Toronto with the Symphony Orchestra at a twilight recital and they gave promise of that future to her chosen art which is already rapidly being fulfilled. Today she stands as the polished and experienced artist with an exquisite sense of, great power of music, a charm of manner which delights hearers, an emotional grasp of the different numbers she plays and an interpretation of technique, together with inspiration and fire which always go with the outstanding genius. Despite her youth, her musical age is far advanced. There is a complete absence of the methodic and painstaking, all seems pure art as she draws her bow across her bow crosses the strings.

Miss Mitzel opened the program with the old and lovely "Caprice No. 20", the Brahms-Joachim "Hungarian Dance No. 2" Bloch's "Nigun" and the Saint-Saens "Rondo Capriccioso" Then came "Flight of the Humble Bee" Rimsky-Korsakoff and "Zapateado" Sinsoso was clearly marked and her grasp of musical color was revealed in all it fulness.

Her fourth group was composed of the Tartini-Kreisler selections "Variations on a theme by Corelli" the Stravisky-Dushkin "Sicilienne and Da Palla's "Danse Espagnole". Miss Mitzel's art charms, and sings its way into the heart of the audience. She brings to her work the dash and enthusiasm of youth together with the dignity and experience which only can be expected of an older player as well as perfection of tone and of technique. Even her extremely modern number "Berceuse" by Stravinsky while catching the modern mood brought with it a wealth of beautiful tone and melody interpretation, which could not fail to please. She entirely avoids the sensational in her work, and possesses smoothness and beauty of phrasing. She has the poise of the real artist.

Gwendolyn Williams, who has been heard in Belleville on previous occasions, was the talented accompanist. Her work at the piano was at all times of the highest order. During the evening a very large number of persons subscribed for next season's series of concerts which will be arranged.

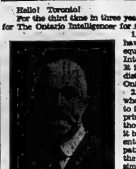
Travel Letters

No. 1
By G. M. JAMES
Travelling Representative of
THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER



Hello! Toronto!

For the third time in three years the writer begins a series of articles for the Ontario Intelligencer for the following reasons:

1. Throughout our extensive travels we have failed to find a newspaper which equals much less surpasses The Ontario Intelligencer for general and local news. It is a paper credit to all concerned and a distinct asset for Belleville and eastern Ontario.

2. The writer greatly admires the man who has had sufficient courage and faith to invest a fortune in a complete, modern, printing plant in a small city of thirteen thousand people like Belleville and he feels it both a pleasure and a duty to assist that enterprise in every way possible both by patronage and otherwise. Undoubtedly there are many others who feel and act similarly.

3. For over a score of years the writer has been treated like a prince by the people of Belleville and surrounding district. They have been very generous and kind to their guest and he feels humble lines try to express the feelings of a grateful heart.

4. The writer and Mrs. James are now far flung distant shores with tickets and diversified details all arranged. The many friends of Mrs. James will be pleased that she will detain from time to time news and chat especially for feminine ears and ears.

We have been in Toronto for a whole week and not a single young man has asked us for a dime, buy a cup of coffee or anything else. It has been so fortunate for a long time.

Excellent meals are served everywhere in Toronto at new low prices. The twenty-five cents breakfast is worthy of special mention as we never before had anything so excellent for twice the money. Other meals are correspondingly low and good. That is one reason why so many people like to visit or live in Toronto.

BIG BUSINESS

The writer always visits a certain large, well known store every time he comes to Toronto because he personally knew its founder and also because he has followed its wonderful growth from very humble beginnings. Its founder began his career in a small general store in the village where also the writer was born about thirty miles west of Toronto. Five hundred dollars would have bought that store and its initial stock in trade. The writer as a chubby little lad spent his pennies in that store for candies and until that time smiling eyes and always had an extra candy or two to spare. Then this Irishman moved to Toronto and resumed a similar business in a small way, but it grew within a generation to be one of the largest departmental stores in Canada. Its motto is "Quality counts" "cheaper than others; satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded". Until recently placards throughout the store exhibited the words, "Breaking down all sales resistance". To-day the motto is, "No dearer than elsewhere". Knowledge is greater power than selling resistance, but that great founder is dead. Time does not permit us to further discuss or promote or retard prosperity. This brief history of Big Business should be of interest to young people everywhere. Also, it has been done once and can be done again.

HIGHLY FLAVORED RISBEE

The street car service in Toronto is worse if anything than a year ago. During the rush hours in the morning and evening when people are going to work or returning, the overcrowding is simply terrible. Even the good might well blush with shame and humiliation. Thousands of young girls stand in densely packed cars to work, stand all day as they toil, and stand again crowded like sardines in the evening. Many of them are pretty, the breath of life remains to these exhausted mortals. They feel so nearly dead that they smoke and even drink to keep their nerves from which they still ache. And these ignorant or indifferent to the awful facts hold up their backs in holy horror and scandal. "Our youth are going to perdition; they have no fear of God before their eyes". Many of them do drink until they are old, jaded, while as a corpse when they should be as lively and even as a vessel of honor. Many of them are hopelessly immoral and debauchery with rouge and powder hot the sparkle, lustre and youthful glint of the eye is gone; young men no longer crave their highly flavored kisses!" Thus does preacher and the man in the street condemn, but, honestly, is it not a fact that our young people are more sinned against than sinning? Did they ask to be born? Is the manner of Toronto University once said in my hearing, "We are only half civilized". Often the writer ponders on these things, and wonders and wonders and wonders whither are we drifting. One thing is certain, the young people will play the game fully and fair if they are given a reasonable chance.

SHEIKS AND FLAPPERS

We found larger crowds than usual engaged in Easter shopping and this prompted us to visit the boardwalk at Sunnyside on the afternoon of Easter Sunday. This boardwalk is about three miles long and is one of the widest sidewalks at Belleville, about two miles long and closely follows the shores of Lake Ontario. Sunnyside is the favorite resort for the people of Toronto and reminds us of a similar boardwalk eight miles long at Atlantic City. Several thousand young men and women were on parade in high glee and sometimes boisterous mood. Many older admirers sat on benches which bordered the entire course. Thousands of cars were parked along the two miles of boardwalk every one of which (and then some more) was in the main becomingly worn yet there were some favorites. Mrs. James was impressed with the predominance of beautiful eyes and brown, dark and black hair. Blondes are in the minority a little shorter, about half way between the knee and the ankle. Two and three piece tweeds were very abundant. Many sailor hats in rough straw were favorites, also round sailor hats, and hats turned off the face. The sailor hats were tipped jauntily on one side. Mrs. James also reports that the gentlemen generally consist of pin-spotted vests, fancy check gingahams and plenty of linen dresses.

Our gentlemen friends may be interested to learn that not one girl in a hundred in that immense Easter parade possessed the charm of a Belleville face though each would by as far from it. Belleville faces were large nose, small chin, small features, or soulless eyes. Belleville still has more beautiful women of all ages to the square foot than any other place we know. Of course the obvious moral is to go to Belleville to get married and after that have a real honeymoon once a year.

CURE FOR DIVORCE

There would never be a single divorce if married people would use a little common sense. What actually happens? A young man and a young woman love each other devotedly and what would die for each other. They are married and have a wonderful honeymoon. Then life begins in earnest; she strives for a happy home and he tries to lay the wealth of the whole world at her feet because this is a mercenary age and more and more concerned in his work or business until sooner or later there are woman's rights and no explosion, yes an explosion too! "John, I married you because I loved you and because I wanted to help you and make you happy. (Picture—A flood of tears and a pretty face disfigured by awful agony). How (and what has happened? I am your cook, I mend your socks and bring up your children but you are a stranger to me and my home; you are married to your business and you never give me the slightest consideration any more."

"How Clara," tenderly replies the guilty husband, "you know I love you and that my only thought is to get everything you need so that our friends will respect and like you."

"I don't want things and respect, I want your company and love as it once was. I prefer that to everything else in the world, because I am [illegible] dreamingly."

So often at this critical moment the wrong thing is said or done and the [illegible]. Yet the remedy is very simple. Take her away on a [illegible] and be real lovers again. Separate and say pretty things but above all make her happy in her own way at least once a year. The results are sadder than words can express. Mrs. James has a remedy and can life as plain Donald Smith but he presided the annual honeymoon plan with great material success and sentimental happiness. When she [illegible] she had in mind a way with the following comment: "What is the good or use of my millions, when she is not here to share it with me?"

A GOOD SCHOOL

For half a century the writer has attended more or less frequently a famous church in Toronto, and it is a great pleasure to record that the Easter Sunday morning service in that church was the most inspiring in all his experience. Every seat (about fifteen hundred) was occupied and every one of every three was under the age of thirty. We were much delighted because we had not seen such an audience for several years. The congregation sang so well that the gigantic organ had to use full power to be heard. The sermon, "Evidences of Immortality" was splendidly delivered in a new setting with fresh illustrations, although the essential points were as old as the Sermon on the Mount. The minister was a young Scotsman under forty and he knew how to interest young people. He spoke slowly and simply with frequent pauses, and used not a single unnecessary word. The young people were able to absorb and digest every thought. But the service was exceptional from another point of view, the appeal for funds. A Scotsman has a tender conscience and he knows how to turn it to good account.

"A person's age doesn't necessarily indicate that glasses should or should not be used. Neither does a person's vision. School children often require them badly— while many elderly people get along nicely without. While Optometric science provides the most precise mechanical devices for measuring visual defects the real value lies in the experience of the EXAMINER.

"The offering will now be taken up to carry on the Lord's work in this church. To whom much is given much will be required."

We were amazed at the generosity of the people. Not so soon had good reasons to be startled at its effectiveness. Large brass plates, highly polished, were passed to and fro and every coin sounded like a gong as it came to rest on brass. In a few seconds the coin, the louder the claims of generosity. A blind man could tell how contributions were progressing around him. He could tell the centre of the church and by the time a plate reached us, it required too strong hands to pass it in safely. No person could doubt the effectiveness of that Scotch appeal to conscience.

In the course of the next two other appeals which form a striking contrast:

1. One minister at an evening service scolded his congregation as follows: "The ushers are about to take up the collection; we need larger offerings badly. I see that not a few people refrain from deposition coin because of the size of the bill which to pay for the light that illuminates their hymn books."

2. Another minister: "The ushers tell me that the collection plate often reminds them of a buffalo national park; brethren, let us be more generous." The reference was to the head of a buffalo on so many American nickles.

ONTARIO EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

For seventy-four years this parliament of teachers has assembled once a year to discuss educational problems and to devise ways and means of educating youth. Changes in matter and method have been continuous because the needs of the times are ever changing.

This year is famous for many reasons which will soon become apparent. The convention was divided into twenty-five sections with an attendance of five thousand serious and earnest men and women, perhaps a high record in more ways than one.

The writer has attended the high lights of the various meetings as follows:

1. The new school course is to be turned upside down and ready for action in September 1936. Then the secondary school will be much scrapped and revised.

2. Some new texts are expected to be ready for the opening of schools after the summer holidays including Middle School Geometry and Algebra, Civics and two books on Canada, one for senior public and one senior.

3. The teacher is to become the mainspring and dominant force in education. Freedom and fitness (mental and physical) will become the watchwords.

4. Teachers will be allowed greater freedom in the choice and use of texts.

5. Latin and Geometry will become optional subjects and under such conditions they are likely to pass into oblivion.

6. The system of recommendations by teachers will be gradually extended to replace examinations in public schools, secondary schools, normal schools and others.

7. All the courses proposed and contemplated are due to changed conditions but also to some extent to lessen the enormous expenditures for education. The writer has been attending the meetings of the Education Association here for half a century and he can find no better words to describe what is transpiring than a "bloodless but beneficent revolution". Reforms and changes will be introduced by the traditions of two thousand years and more.

Tears are swept aside as were the Caesars.

"The big shots have only themselves to blame. They would not tolerate translations or keys to make certain subjects more palatable. They proudly clung to senseless traditions and actually urged that to publish a key to a translation was criminal. Behold the result. Soon they will expiate their folly in the bread line."

Those are only a few of the laments poured into the writer's ears during the past few days.

"But Mr. James, you have done your part nobly for over ten years to save the Latin scholar which has overwhelms us. Nevertheless the proud aristocrats of Latin and Greek have been overbearing, overbearing and arrogant (the few behind the throne) have preferred to break rather than to bend. You have been mentioned in these columns every section this year and you will now come into your own. Most of the teachers and all the students praise your publications to the skies." Modesty prevented the writer from repeating some corridor chat.

In a few days we will be in New York and until then "best wishes to all".

DRIVING EXAMINER VISITS SCHOOLS

Mr. G. A. Hodgson Addresses Scholars on Safety Measures

Between eleven and twelve hundred scholars of the Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra Public Schools heard Mr. G. A. Hodgson, Chief Examiner of the Motor Vehicle Branch, Department of Public Highways on Tuesday afternoon as he visited these institutions to address the scholars on safety measures.

Summoned into the assembly rooms the pupils gave a fine demonstration of the value of drill exercises. The precision and the speed with which they could close their desks was apparent, said the examiner that if all motorists could but see the value of such training, there would be no collisions, so effective would be the objects learned in them.

The talk was made such that the youngest child could understand that it was for his and her benefit so that the danger to life, accidents or the collision might be reduced to a minimum.

Mr. Hodgson was accompanied by Mr. T. K. Shapiro of the Kiwanis Club who had brought the matter to the attention of the city in an effort to increase the safety of travel by the reduction of hazards. The Kiwanis Club had the permission of Col. F. A. Geen of the Board of Education to have Mr. Hodgson speak to the children.

The examiner expressed his appreciation of the privilege of addressing the young scholars.

Time did not permit visits to all the schools.

SOCIETY HOLDS FINAL MEETING

St. Andrew's Young People's Guild Hear Fine Program

Stirling, May 1—On Monday evening April 29th, St. Andrew's Young People's Guild held their last meeting before closing for the summer recess. The meeting was held in the Sunday school room, where, in spite of the rainy weather a large attendance representing both St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, and St. Andrew's, West Huntingdon who joined them on this occasion, listened with great interest to the splendid musical program supplied by a large group of musicians from the Belleville barracks of the Salvation Army. Giving a very complete program of instrumental and vocal numbers, they delighted their audience and responded willingly to their applause with numerous encores.

The meeting was opened by Rev. J. A. Kotfend with the singing of that old favorite hymn "Stand Up Stand Up For Jesus" and prayer. The minister then read the Scripture lesson for the evening found in the Gospel of St. John the twelfth chapter, verses twelve to twenty-one. The usual business of the meeting was omitted from this program, and at this time Rev. J. A. Kotfend gave a short address of welcome to the visitors to whom he said the guild was very grateful bringing what he knew would be an unusually fine program. He then called on Sgt. Maj. Hart to act as chairman for the balance of the evening.

Before announcing the first number Mr. Hart expressed the wish that the program which was almost entirely musical would be helpful as well as entertaining to the audience. These men love good music and considered it a real privilege to God to bring enjoyment to others with the aid of their instruments. Without any further delay, he introduced the following numbers which were offered in their respective order:

March: "Gladstone Melody"; By the entire group.

Vocal Selection: "Comrades in Arms"; Male chorus.

Cornet Duet: "Captain and Lieutenant"; Deputy Bandmaster and Band Secretary.

Vocal Selection: "Sweet and Low"; Male chorus.

Hymn Tune: "Deep Harmony"; Instrumental group.

Saxophone Solo: "Rocked In The Cradle of the Deep"; Bandman F. Wardle.

Recitation: "The Twins"; Deputy Bandmaster J. Green.

Vocal Selection: "The Soldier's Chorus"; Male voices.

Cornet Solo: "Silver Threads"; Deputy Bandmaster J. Green.

Selection: "For You I Am Praying"; The Band.

March: "Montreal Citadel"; The entire group.

God Save The King.

This was an excellent musical evening heartily enjoyed by everyone present and the various numbers were so splendidly given that hearty every presentation called for an encore. Throughout the evening at several intervals the audience were called upon to join in the singing of many inspiring marches to which words of old favorite hymns were used.

Words of praise were offered by Mr. Arthur Duncan in moving a vote of thanks on behalf of the Guild to these visitors who had journeyed from Belleville through the rain, had no doubt given up other engagements to be present at Stirling. They had given a program that required a great deal of preparation and the Guild was truly grateful for this brotherly gesture. Mr. Charlie Allan organist, in seconding the motion also offered congratulation for the manner in which the programme had been given.

Rev. J. A. Kotfend closed this part of the meeting with prayer after which the young ladies of the organization served a delicious lunch and a very pleasant social hour was enjoyed by all. There will be no more meetings of the association until fall when it is expected that a reorganization meeting will be called and the good work of the past season will go forward in the same successful manner as it has throughout the winter months.

St. Paul's Y.P.S.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Society was held in the church parlours on Monday evening April 29th with a good number of the members present. The program for the evening was provided by the khaki division.

Mr. Harry Hinlin, President, was in charge of the devotional portion of the meeting which was opened with a song service, Mr. Fred Kigle led in prayer and Miss Ruth Martin read the Scripture lesson for the evening. Mrs. Nora Westcott, Secretary gave a report of the last meeting. Rev. R. W. Rowland spoke of the illness of little Bobbie Kotfend, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kotfend and requested those present to observe a two minute silent prayer for his safety. At the end of the two minutes Mr. Rowland offered prayer for the son.

An interesting feature on the program was the passing around of slips of paper on which was written some helpful quotation. As the holder of each slip read aloud the words found upon it Mr. Rowland carefully explained its significance and meaning. Miss Patsy Landing then offered a very pleasing solo entitled "Trees" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. W. Rowland.

The next number was an instrumental duet by Misses Pearl and Ruby Stapley, accompanied by Mrs. Rowland at the piano, entitled "Forget Me Not."

The very instructive topic was dealt with in a fine manner by Mrs. John Holmes, who spoke on the subject "The Little Things of Life," after listening to her fine discussion on the subject which was well planned and delivered in a manner that was entertaining as well as promoting a great deal of sound thinking on the part of her listeners. Many present felt that sufficient thought was not given to the little things in life. We forget that success is based upon the manner in which we attend to all our duties large or small and to overlook the smaller things of life is to grow careless of the more important things.

Miss Marion Jones was responsible for the very interesting contest which was heartily entered into by everyone present. The color count was taken and the Blue section gained the honors for the meeting, which was closed with the repeating of the Mizpah Benediction.

Personals

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kotfend will be very sorry to learn of the illness of their son Bobbie who is suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis; all his friends wish him a speedy recovery and hope to see him at play again soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Flavelle of Toronto, were week end guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kotfend.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Francis spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Emerson in Tweed.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

The King and the Army

WHILE the King's first love has always been the navy, he has also taken an active part in military matters.

As well as being Admiral of the Fleet, he is also a Field Marshal in the army and is General-in-Chief of the Royal Air Force, but his activity does not cease there for he is honorary Colonel-in-Chief or General-in-Chief of practically every British military unit.

Though these positions are largely honorary, King George makes use of them to keep in close touch with British military affairs. As an expert on naval strategy, he is often consulted on army manoeuvres as well. His capacity of sovereign makes it paramount that the officials surrounding him are members of military and naval orders, which is why the King appears so often in uniform at official functions. Our picture to-day shows the King in uniform of Field Marshall, reviewing his troops.

During the war, the King did not interfere with his officers, although he had every authority to do so, he wisely left it to the more experienced judgment of his army and navy leaders, but was often consulted and just as often advised.

During the Silver Jubilee celebrations this year, there will be a gigantic military and naval review. On his royal yacht, the King and Queen will review the Grand Fleet; Aldershot will again be the scene of mimic wars, and the air will be filled with flying daredevils of the Royal Air Force.

CHAIN LETTERS

A chain letter has made its appearance in Canada after having been worked in the United States. This one does not carry the threat of dire calamity for disregard of its injunction to pass it on to a stated number of others for the purpose of bringing good fortune, as used to be the case with some of the old nuisance chains which offered a blessing or trouble.

The new chain letter offers reward in its own way, by the promise of ten cents to be sent to the original sender. Big rewards are dangled before the innocent. But of course that does not work. It must run out. No one can run a business on that line and any letter to be worthwhile that line and any letter to be worthwhile must be on a business basis and chain letters are not of that kind or, at least a worthwhile letter of this kind has not yet been invented.

Authorities will pounce upon any writer of a chain letter asking for money who can be found and convicted. Most people are not silly enough to put 10 cents in a letter to the sender and then hope to make money by receiving coin in response to letters sent out.

In the old style letter which threatens calamity for disregard of the notice there is the danger that some weak minds might fear to refuse to carry out the commands to pass on the letter. These should also be punished if there is any law to get them. Fortunately this type of letter, which is usually the work of people unbalanced in some respect, is becoming more rare.

A PLEA TO THE BRITISH PRESS

Premier Ramsay MacDonald has thought the time suitable for an outspoken statement on the question of the ethics of journalism, especially of the sensational kind, whose aim is huge circulations. Even staid England has its sensational newspapers as other lands have. He finds that the most ordinary event must be made "astounding", "a monstrous scandal" or "sensational". Any rumor is made to take its place on the same footing as fact and the necessary hysteria is supplied by invention, which has not even the foundation of rumor.

Truth and the whole truth and nothing but the truth must be the ideal of the newspaper, as of the witness in court, whether it is published in a metropolitan city or in the smallest village. There is no excuse for distortion and falsification.

At the bottom of it, he is in Britain, Mr. MacDonald knows what dangers can be created by the fictions and scandal-mongering of irresponsible journals. The appetite of the people for the type of journalism grows by feeding on half-truth or whole untruth or rumor. Every day has its news headline, even at the risk of causing international crisis through the manner of presenting the news which comes from the various capitals of the world as a result of the world as regards policies, wars and preparations for wars.

A mighty weapon is in the hands of the press. If it is not used as a gentleman should use it, it is a source of danger.

That Premier Ramsay MacDonald's plea for a saner outlook and a fairer presentation of news may be improved on is the hope of every lover of his country.

TREES FOR THE GATHERING

In a fortnight or thereabouts thousands of bushels of elm seeds will be blowing about the streets of Winnipeg and in the parks—just a nuisance under foot.

Those elm seeds will produce trees, trees that will grow rapidly under favorable conditions.

Planted this spring, if they have normal moisture they will be a foot tall by autumn and grow rapidly next year.

They will not grow on the open prairie in a drought year. They will in a year of normal rainfall. But in any sort of year, they will grow on the banks of sloughs and lakes and streams.

They require very little work to plant, and once under way they will look after themselves—though the better, of course, for a little cultivation.

Here is an opportunity for service for the Boy Scouts or school children. A million elm seeds could be gathered in short order, and sent out to Boy Scout troops or schools in prairie centers for planting.

Carried out steadily for a few years, the reforestation of the prairie areas would be accomplished to a degree that the most ambitious plans today can hardly visualize.

Here is another idea: The Russian willow is an exceedingly hardy and fast growing tree. Cut off a branch, stick it in the ground, and in two or three years it becomes a bushy and vigorous tree. One Russian willow, growing in the Winnipeg area, can supply enough cut branches to make a thick windbreak around a big garden plot on some prairie homestead, or around school grounds.

By these and other means the transformation of the prairie country can be accomplished easily and quickly and with little expense. It requires organization and work rather than a great sum of money.—Winnipeg Tribune.

JOHN BULL DRINKING LESS

In 1930 Great Britain's drink bill was the substantial one of $2,000,000,000. Last year, according to figures published in the London Times, it was $1,145,000,000. In 14 years there was a drop of more than $800,000,000.

Old John Bull, quite clearly, is drinking a lot less. Whether he has taken to new forms of relaxation, or of amusement, or is just tightening his belt in the matter of drink as in other things, the fact remains that the old "public house" is rapidly dying out, has become, in some centres, almost non-existent.

Perhaps the real reason is found in public education, in a campaign for temperance. The British, slow to go to extremes, have never troubled with prohibition, but they have built up a system of control and regulation, have made drinking more supervised and more respectable. This, with a steady pressure of temperance propaganda, with the propaganda resting upon rational efficiency rather than upon morals, appears to be making headway. It is the typical British way of doing things—and of doing them successfully. — Ottawa Journal.

FLOWER MARKETING IN ENGLAND

Few people are hardy enough to stay up till half-past six in the morning, but an invited company who had that endurance were rewarded at Covent Garden market by seeing a wonderful display of spring flowers grown in this country, the best of its kind we have yet produced. Nearly £15,000,000 a year is spent in Great Britain on cut flowers, and the Covent Garden flower market has doubled its trade in the last seven years. H. Miles, president of the British Flower Marketing Association, at the breakfast afterwards said that not only did the British flower-growers need to build up trade of the market but they were producing better flowers, and, of course, fresher, as they had a shorter distance to come.

Years ago the flower-lover had to consider four flower seasons—daffodils and narcissi, tulips, roses and carnations, and chrysanthemums. Today we saw them all together, as well as orchids, South African marguerites, with their lovely pastel shades, sweet peas from Sussex, glorious pot-plants. Carnations we were told are now second only to roses as the national favorites.

Someone said today that only Mayfair could afford the retail price of carnations. Mr. Miles said that was not so. The East End, he said, buy more and often more expensive flowers than the West End. The East End Jew would never think of taking cheap flowers to a sick friend, and more-over at Jewish weddings there was always a great floral display. According to the Ministry of Agriculture, more flowers are bought and sold in Great Britain than in any other country in the world.

It was argued that flower influence the people who sell them, and that flower porters are more polite than Smithfield porters who have a bovine outlook and dispositions. Covent Garden porters, who suffer from a perpetual pain in the neck through carrying such heavy loads on their heads. Flower salesmen and porters, it was decided during the luncheon, did go to bed in the afternoon so as to be able to begin at three in the morning. — Manchester Guardian.

ENJOYING SUNSHINE

At Easter time, Britain takes a real holiday—in many communities extending from Thursday night to the following Tuesday. The silver jubilee celebrations next month will be followed by Whitsuntide in June, another great holiday time in the British Isles.

Canada could well take a leaf out of the British holiday book. In the desperate pursuit of business on this continent, Whitsuntide has been almost completely forgotten. It is one of the most beautiful times of the year in this country. It should be made a great national occasion of excursions to the hills, lakes, woods and seashores, but the Canadian workers are kept with noses to the grindstone, bowed in a state of worship before the sign of the dollar.

Canada could be just as prosperous without so much of this devoted adherence to the gospel of hard work. It is true that a day off is taken about once a month in summer, beginning with May 24, on to Labor Day. With the harnessing of hydro-electric power to do more of the heavy work, however, some of the benefits should be distributed to the Canadian people in the form of more opportunities to enjoy sunshine and fresh air. Doubtless it will come in another generation.—Ottawa Citizen.

Real goodness does not attach itself merely to this life—it points to another world. Political or professional reputation cannot last forever, but a conscience void of offence before God and man is an inheritance for eternity.—Daniel Webster.

By desiring what is perfectly good, even when we do not quite know what it is, and cannot do what we would, we are part of the divine power against evil, widening the skirts of light and making the struggle with darkness narrower.—George Eliot.

SHADOWS

Every shadow ever shows
Something of the sun,
As, how long ago it rose,
Or how far it has run.
Even faulty human sense
This glad truth divines:
Shadows are but evidence
Light behind us shines!
Night is just a shadow cast
As the swift Earth turns
From the glory, golden, vast,
Where the white sun burns.
Only for a little time
Fall the veils of night,
The Earth swings to the sublime,
Never-failing light!

BELLEVILLE MEN'S CHORUS, one of the finest musical organizations in Canada, one that any community might well be proud of, presents a high class recital for the home folks, assisted by Frank Oldfield, Canada's leading banjoist and an entertainer of rare talent. The recital is given to wipe out a deficit. What happens? Fifty dollars is added to the deficit. Is it any wonder these fine musicians are discouraged. They give up one night a week in practice to perfect their art, spend money for music and other incidentals—give concerts for charity and other worthy purposes—once in a while they give a concert in an outside community for some worthy object. The people are amazed and jealous of the good fortune of Belleville in being the home town of such an organization. How poud they must be of it, those Belleville folks, say the outsiders. How easy they must afford it, they think it generously..... Oh, Yeah! Fifty dollars deficit. Back to your radio!

"THERE OUGHT TO BE ROOM in the new Mark Twain Museum at Hannibal for a sketch of the humorist, together with George Gable and his manager, Major Pond, sitting down to luncheon in the old Revere House, Brockville, with that other genial soul, the late Dan Derbyshire, as they did fifty years ago." So says the Brockville Recorder, heading back to the memorable occasion half a century ago when Mark Twain and George Cable under the management of that famous collector of celebrities for the lecture stage, Major Pond, toured Canada and gave a lecture in Brockville. Whether they appeared in Belleville during their tour is problematical for the oldest lecture attender extant does not remember this particular visitation, if and when. It will be remembered by admirers of Clemens (Mark Twain) that this lecture tour was part of a program to pay his debts and recoup his fortunes after a disastrous venture into the publishing business which swept away the accumulated savings of years. It is gratifying to report that Mark Twain came back strong, after talking his way around the world and writing another book or two—all accomplished by dint of much heavy work, burning the midnight oil, and all that kind of thing, don't you know. Now the hundredth anniversary of his birth is being celebrated in a nation-wide manner, but particularly in Hannibal, Mo., where he spent his boyhood days and where Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, Becky Thatcher and other Mark Twain characters were born into the lives of millions of boys and girls all over the world.

TO LIVE TWENTY YEARS in the loneliest spot in the world and then to suddenly come face to face with the world of today in all of its wonderful phases, is the good fortune of Donald Glass, twenty years old, born on the island of Tristan da Cunha in the South Atlantic, twenty years ago, and now for the first time getting a glimpse of the greater world outside his lonely home. He is touring just arrived in New York City. Donald Glass is a descendant of one of the soldiers sent to Tristan a hundred years ago by Great Britain to prevent Napoleon from using the island as a stop-off point in his plot to escape from St. Helena where he was in banishment. He intends to continue on to England "where he will seek his fortune." Who would not give all that they possessed for the thrills in store for this young viking of the sea just awakened to the fact that he has interesting neighbors? Millions and millions of them. Tristan da Cunha? What romantic fancies even the name awakes, swinging memory back to those stirring incidents of other isles of the sea as related in "The Mutiny of the Bounty," "Men Against the Sea," "Pitcairn Island,"

CANADA'S JUBILEE GIFT TO THEIR MAJESTIES

Perhaps the most precious single shipment that ever left Canada for Britain is now in the strong room of liner Aquitania. This is none other than Canada's gift box to King George V. It is a gold box measuring 14 x 14 x 3 inches elaborately decorated with hand-engraved crests of the nine Canadian provinces and the Dominion coat-of-arms, with maple leaf and crown motifs. The box was designed and made by Henry Birks & Sons, and its inscription reads: "To His Majesty on May 6.

Most Excellent Majesty King George V humbly address of the Senate and the House of Commons of Canada on the occasion of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee, 1935". The box will be presented to His Majesty on May 6.

Dust Area Looks For Rain in May

Springfield, Colo., May 1—(CP)—Farmers in the southwest dust area left off seeding from the calendar today and hoped that May would bring rain.

For the past two months dust storms have swept over the drought stricken "devil" region, in discomfort, distress and illness. Rain would settle the dust and enable farmers to start planting spring crops.

Rain, however, in charge of Red Cross relief headquarters at Liberal, Kas., estimated "at least 30" persons have died within the last two weeks from diseases aggravated by the blowing silt and sand.

THE LOVE FLIGHT

"Don't Maida me. I'll call Fanchon. She will say that you leave the house—without being seen. There's a hall that leads to the servants' entrance—"

"But, Maida—" Anne's brain was refusing to function. Her mind was dazed. "I've no place to go— no money."

"I suppose you want money. I'll get you what I have in my purse." Maida managed to rise, to walk, still trembling, toward the dressing table.

"No, no! I didn't come for money. I came to tell you how sorry I am—"

"Please! I'm not interested. Not in the least. You are a stranger to me, a total stranger. I'm glad you've enough of decency left not to be begging, Panchon!"

Fanchon appeared from the inner chamber.

"Show Miss Austin out. She'd prefer not to be seen. I'd advise the hall at the end of the rear stairway." Maida went to the dressing table and began to pat powder on her flushed cheeks, furtively.

Anne stood for a moment regarding Maida's back, white and satiny against a pansy blue velvet evening gown. Then she turned and followed Panchon into the twilight of the back stairs.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Somewhere a clock cruck two. Anne stood in the hallway, feeling somehow familiar. She had been here before. Only it seemed such a long way, such a long time ago. Her feet. They were unsteady, heavy. Should she try dragging them along the walk between the clipped shrubs? How dare you comb to my house, straight from the arms of—from a common jail!" Just like Maida. No, she would stand still.

She heard footsteps nearing her. She'd have to explain. Explain! She lowered herself, slowly, painfully to the bottom stair.

How long she sat there Anne did not know but suddenly, inexplicably, she seemed to emerge from stupor into a cool, clear-star-spattered night She stood up. Had she been dreaming? No, these stairs were no dream. They led to a prim concrete house. Phoebe Prime's house! Phoebe,who had befriended her when she first went to the agency looking for work. Prim and peaceful and homey. She had been here a-twice—as it three times—for tea and scones with Phoebe. But how had she come here? Surely she must have walked—miles. Ten cents in the palm of her hand was what she spent that for bus fare—going to Maida's.

Maida! Anne shuddered. Phoebe would understand.

Anne climbed the stairs and pressed the bell. A brief wait and Phoebe Prime herself opening the door. She showed no surprise when she saw a white-faced girl, bedraggled, beaten.

"Why it's Anne," she said cheerfully. "Come in. Anne, I've often heard that bell jingling. This way—to my den. There's an open grate there and I'll light a fire. Couldn't down here in the morning."

Anne followed, watched Phoebe touch a match to pine logs, The flames crackled and danced, chasing away the chill.

"I came to you for help." Anne said. "I'm not sure. I thought you at this hour—there seemed nothing else for me to do."

"No disturbance to me. That's my business—help." Phoebe was matter-of fact. "Now, sit down by the fire—the low one. And excuse me a minute, I'm going to get my warm kimona."

When she returned she was swathed in a woollen dressing gown and was carrying a tray on which were a decanter and glasses.

"We'll have a nip of this wine," she said, pouring the rich purple-red liquid from the decanter. "It's elderberry. An old recipe—like sends it to me. She makes it on her farm in Ohio."

Anne drank. Her throat was parched, her mouth was tinder. The wine was soothing.

"I feel better," she said, relaxing in the big chair.

Phoebe put a fresh log on the fire. "Good," she said. "And now, if you feel up to it, tell me what's happened. Has Madame Hogg run amuck again, and driven you out into the night?"

"No. It's not Madame. She has been kind. She was in Miami with her pearls disappeared. They suspected me at first, I think—"

"Who suspected you?" Phoebe flashed.

"The police. They searched my room. They took me to the police station and questioned me. I was there all night and yesterday. Then Madame came home and found the pearls and they let me go."

"Where did she find them—the pearls?"

"In the cabinet in her boudoir, just where she always kept them. Bats—that's the other maid—said she'd searched that cabinet over and over again."

"Did this—Bats— did she hint that you might have taken the pearls?"

"No. She insisted to the officer who searched the room that I could not possibly have taken them."

"Could the pearls have been in that cabinet when she was looking for them—and in maybe she got excited and didn't see them?"

"I don't see how she could have overlooked them. She knows exactly where Madame is in the habit of leaving them. Yet they were there when Madame came to find them."

"I wouldn't be so sure of it—of their being there all the time. I think that will bear looking into. And Madame, what does she say about all this trububle?"

"—I don't know, I haven't seen Madame."

"You mean you haven't been back to Bois Joli?"

"No. I couldn't go back. I could not," Anne's proud spirit broke a plea. "Although the matron at the police headquarters said Madame had sent word I might come back to work."

"There was more to this than Anne was willing to confess. Phoebe thought. The girl had spirit. If she had lacked spirit she would never have struck out for herself. She would have leaned on being a pandiere and a parasite. There were reasons other than pearls that disappeared and then popped up again—other reasons why the girl would not return to Bois Joli. Whatever these reasons were they must be good and sufficient. Anne Brent was no cry-baby.

"Do you want to go on—working, I mean?" Phoebe asked.

"I must," Anne said, eagerly. "I've got to go on. I have nothing—not a single cent."

"Madame Hogg owes you wages—up to the time you left."

"Yes—but I'd rather not ask for them—I've taken so much from her."

"You don't have to ask her. I'll take care of that. What you need now is a good rest. In the morning I'll leave you here while I go to the office and look over my list. Places are scarce but I'll find something. Come now, let's turn in. Tomorrow's another day and it's almost tomorrow already."

* * * *

When Phoebe Prime returned to the concrete house shortly before noon, she found a different Anne Brent. A bath, hot and leisurely, a rest in the spotless guest room, and a dried in Phoebe's kitchen, clothes pressed. Remained but a physical going over will do to refurbish morale.

"Fine; Phoebe greeted her. "You look fit for work or for fight or for whatever comes along. And I have some vacancies this morning."

"Vacancies?" Did Phoebe refer to you thing I might be able to fill any of them?"

"I don't know." Phoebe was taking a secret delight in Anne's confusion. Her willingness to be of service to carry on. "Let's look 'em over. There's a Mrs. This Williams wants a combination maid and secretary. She's a winter resident. Keeps open house. Lots more excitement. How does that strike you?"

Mrs. Theo Williams. Anne's heart sank again The name Mrs. Williams had known her always. She had dropped in at the Williamses' town house once—after the debacle. The visit had not been satisfactory, either. They did not want Anne to remain as she always had done. They did not extend an invitation for future visits.

Phoebe's quick eyes noted the confusion in Anne's face. The girl knew Mrs. Theo Williams and for reasons of her own felt herself inadequate. Then on to the next.

"A young man, a bachelor, is setting up an establishment of his own. He'll need a dozen or more in help—several of them women. He wants a maid to look after his women friends. That might be just the thing for you."

Hope rose again in Anne, "I could manage that, I'd try my best and I ought to manage it after my experience with Madame Hogg."

"I'm sure you could." Phoebe brought out the inevitable scratch pad she carried. "The young man is very wealthy and something of a spoiled boy, I hear. His name is Craig Braden."

"Craig Craig Braden!" Anne's hands gripped Phoebe's shoulders as the color woman winced. "Phoebe it isn't possible! It just isn't possible for such a thing to happen! I tell you it couldn't happen." She was laughing raucously, mirthlessly.

"What couldn't happen?" Phoebe demanded. Was this girl queer, after all? Had she, Phoebe Prime, student of human beings, made a mistake. But no. She was right. And so was the girl.

"Phoebe, Craig Braden asked me to marry him. He is the reason I am here—I ran away—away from him, from everything. Shall I tell you about it—how I happened to come to your office, why I am here? I'd like to, Phoebe."

Phoebe nagged a wise head. "Now, now. Later, maybe," she said, "You are Anne Brent to me and you are Anne Brent for the present. If you ran away from a man with all the position and wealth of that young fellow, he must be a bad lot. I have one other vacancy. Would you leave Palm Beach, go out in the country a way?"

"Would I? Oh, Phoebe, it would be heavenly. To walk out into the open without fear of meeting my—my—"

"Pearl?"

"Yes, without fear of meeting my past. Without fear of being heckled or snubbed or pushed—anyone—I'd rather not see." Carl—she must not see Carl. Not for a long time. Until the need for him she wormd he had placed in her heart, was no longer an active pain but a healed scar.

"Then I believe we can get down to business." Phoebe said. "A man and his wife have a place twenty or so miles out. The man is a scientist. He's carrying on some kind of experiments and he's built this place for solitude and for the work. Professor Skojlopp—that's his name, I think—is a young woman who can take notes on his experiments now and then, but I gathered that mostly he wanted some one to keep his wife company. It must be lonely out there."

"Not lob lonely for me," Anne assured Phoebe. "Will you trust me with the job?"

Phoebe laughed. "I trust you with the job," she said, "but I'm not quite sure I trust the job with you. However, its there to be filled, if you want to try it."

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Anne flung open the door of the Phoenix Employment Agency so briskly that Phoebe Prime looked up quickly from the papers she was examining.

Phoebe noted Anne's bright eyes, cheeks flushed with color, her upstanding chin. Good! This be the dreggied whimpering youngster who had come to her office to ask for her home for haven, only a few months before? Something had happened.. Something exciting. Something pleasant—if Phoebe was any judge of human emotions.

"Where's the fire?" Phoebe asked, dryly.

"Fire?" Anne was puzzled. Then, with a quick little laugh, she said, "Oh, you mean the way I look. Is me. It's a perfectly gorgeous blaze, and I'm trying very hard to put it out."

"I wouldn't think of trying," Phoebe said. "Too fine a blaze. It's already broken out in your cheeks. What's it all about?"

"Phoebe," the bright eyes were dancing defiance. "I'm going back to work at Bois Joli."

"Madame Hogg telephoned more than an hour ago. She insisted that I find she already broken out in your cheeks. What's it all about?"

"Phoebe," the bright eyes were dancing defiance. "I'm going back to work at Bois Joli."

"Madame Hogg telephoned more than an hour ago. She insisted that I find the pearls. She wants you to come to her. On another status. Found the pearls have gotten you a promotion. Madame wants you as her secretary. In addition you are to have charge of the selection and purchase of her wardrobe. She will pay sixty dollars a month and your expenses."

"Phoebe Prime, Phoebe," Anne said eagerly, "did you by any chance—she might find some one else—"

"I don't think so. I don't get up her mind she wants you, and you know Madame. If she can't have what she wants she'll have nothing. At any rate, we must take the chance. Can you be ready until tomorrow, I'll specify that you are to serve on more as less of a family basis—as secretary-companion."

"Suppose she refuses."

"Then I advise you to stay away from Bois Joli. Madame has other jewels than pearls and string of pearls you know. Some of them might disappear, and that be screw up."

"Phoebe," Anne lowered her voice to a whisper, "do you think Dolph Bats—that he stole the pearls and planted them in my room?"

"Impossible—to even the remotest degree. How'd you get settled having me around, I'm sure that Bats would have knocked him down for trying to make love to me in Madame's boudoir."

"A likely situation," Phoebe said "I've considered it, am still considering it." Then, looking straight into Anne's eyes: "Tell me, Anne, what made you change your mind about returning to Madame Hogg?"

A crimson stain crept up from under Anne's collar, mounted to the her temples. She could not be evasive. Phoebe Prime had been kind but not being herself to confess that the flash of a blue car bowling past Madame Hogg's had caused a bright head thrust forward above the steering wheel. Dark curls had swept her, suddenly, high on the sands of a new determination.

Who should she go dancing through byways? Why should she run away and hide herself in the jungle? She had done nothing for which she need be ashamed. But she had come very near being a coward; afraid to face the aftermath of the pearls, either a deliberate plot to ruin her—a plot which had failed—or of an unfortunate mistake of which she had been the unhappy victim. She was no longer afraid. Courage flowed through her in little vitalizing gushes.

As for Carl Case—she had been pretty much of a fool all her life but here was her supreme folly. Persuading herself she was in love with a man because his eyes could caress you, when they smiled and became he had a way with him under the moon. Moon! She had mooned and palpitated, while Madame's jewels, four indulged in a mild flirtation. Silly little fool. When trouble stalked in at the door, flirtation flew out of the window.

City Softball Group Will Have Total of Seven Teams

Tweed and Rednersville Will Form Part of League

Three new entries were accepted into the Belleville City Softball League last night to elevate the roster of the league to seven teams with two outside clubs being brought into the fold for the first time in the history of softball locally. The Tweed and Rednersville entry were accepted while another local entry, the Tip Top Tailors, joined forces with the local softball loop to swell forces, the previous teams to compose the league being—South End A.C.; College Hill Cubs; Asamas Club and the Alemites. The election to the office of secretary saw Charlie Tebworth the unanimous choice of the meeting while a new executive position was established when Harry Rollins, ex-president of the league was chosen as the treasurer, with power to vote. The executive of the league now is composed of— President, Ken Edgecombe; Vice-President, Maurice Callaghan; Secretary, Chas. Tebworth and Treasurer, Harry Rollins. The admission of the Tweed and Rednersville Clubs met with the favour of the meeting, those Clubs being well represented and duly accepted.

One of the first questions presented the meeting was the question of category of softball to be played by the newly accepted Clubs, they entering the league merely as clubs to inter-lock and eventually revert back to their own standing. Both Rednersville and Tweed will affiliate with the O.A.S.A. in the intermediate "B" series, while the Belleville City Softball League is raised as an "A" group. Home and home games, with a double schedule were adopted with the Alemite and the Cubs only going to Tweed once, while the latter team will play in Belleville with these two clubs three times, instead of twice as in all other cases. The games with Rednersville will be home and home contests, providing the two outside towns finish in first or second position in the local city league they will not participate in the league play-offs, only Belleville clubs being eligible to enter these play-downs.

In the matter of gate receipts it was deemed advisable to split all receipts on the 50-50 basis while each team will be called upon to supply one umpire and pay the same, with the umpires now being asked to supply the umpire-in-chief. The league will operate on the point system with two points being awarded for a win and one for a tie. An affiliation fee of three dollars was set and the league voted to affiliate the O.A.S.A. All games to be played in Belleville will be played on either the Central Park, Alemite or College Hill diamonds.

The various clubs represented and their delegates were—Rednersville—Frank Walkom, H. Russell, R. Wannamaker; Tweed — T. Quinn, Bert Martin, Vernon "Dizzy" Dean, Mickey Cochrane, Rogers Hornsby, Ted Lyons, Charlie Gehringer and many other major league stars. Truly, "Play Ball" is a happy game and should be attended by every amateur baseball player and fan within a radius of 50 miles from Belleville. Ted Rusling, star sports announcer of the air-lines, is also the announcer for "Play Ball" and explains each vital step in the picture. Secretary Chamberlain expects to have more information in relationship to this picture before the end of the week, however.

The above mentioned picture will be shown through the courtesy of the General Motors and by consent of the Oshawa Club. Incidentally, we learned recently that the Oshawa "Brewers" are to appear on the field with brand new "purple" uniforms. Say, my Georgie, they going to supply the hair ribbons? And then, is it true the "Brewers" are going to have floral designs on their bloomers?" (Baby-blue ribbon also makes a natty trimming). Avegee.

A recent sport note from Peterboro suggests that President Swanston may have an opposition from Al Heckman for a position on his umpiring staff. From what we know of Al, he might not be the most flashy official in the loop, but 'tis safe in wagering that his decisions would be impartial and pretty nearly right the most of the time. Al Heckman won for himself the respect of all players and fans with whom he came in contact during his glamorous reign on the mound and should come with equal success as an arbiter. President Swanston could not do a better stroke of business than sign the ex-Peterboro hurler to an umpire's contract, or whatever it is the umpires have to do to qualify for a position.

Boxing Promoter Ciem Allen announced today he was negotiating to bring a string of Toronto boxers to Belleville about May 15th, including Joe Gemmel, the boy who was awarded the questionable decision over Howard "Dynamite" Wheeler during the Golden Gloves finals at Toronto. In preparation for this card Promoter Allen is having Wheeler to Kingston as the King's Jubilee where he meets Mel Gilenna, Kingston middle-weight champion, whom he defeathered in the finals in the Golden Glove preliminaries. This bout is to be one of the feature attractions on Ollie Olsen's card in the Limestone City.

Ralph Morden announced today that all elimination races and finals in the city swimming championships will be staged on Thursday night, instead of running off the eliminations on Thursday and the city championship finals on Friday. "We have just enough entries to make up a splendid one night programme in all groups of both girls and young men swimmers," stated Mr. Morden this morning. The city swimming championships will be decided at this meet in the Albert College pool. Clubs meet is open to all and will naturally attract a large following of spectators, especially following the success of the recent inter-city meet held here.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Yesterday's announcement regarding the passing of Daylight Saving for the summer months will naturally be gratefully received by all local sportsmen. That extra hour of sunlight in June, July and August will add much to the enjoyment of local sports throughout the summer season. Golfers, tennis players, softballers, baseball players as well as anglers and other sports-inclindied citizens all welcome the announcement and will naturally make the best of that added hour of sunlight during their various activities.

Something new, something different is being introduced in Belleville next Saturday in conjunction with the C. O. B. I. meeting when a talking picture entitled "Play Ball" will be flashed on the screen at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening. Thomas Bradley and Jack Thompson received a communication from Oshawa Club stating that the important baseball talking picture was available and would be shown in Bowmanville providing a suitable auditorium could be procured and a goodly audience assured. Invitations were also extended to all baseball clubs within a radius of over 50 miles, inviting all baseball and interested citizens, to witness "Play Ball," a motion picture made and written by the General Motors of Canada. The entire show is free and open to the public.

This picture, "Play Ball" should prove highly educational and valuable to teen-age players as well as more mature ball players, for the picture shows the correct manner in which to bunt, slide, run, hook, bat, hunt, field positions, tag base-runners, etc., and shows major league stars in action. Some of the players to appear in this picture are Lou Gehrig, Lou Pennock, Pepper Martin, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, Mickey Cochrane, Rogers Hornsby, Ted Lyons, Charlie Gehringer and many other major league stars. Truly, "Play Ball" is a happy game and should be attended by every amateur baseball player and fan within a radius of 50 miles from Belleville. Ted Rusling, star sports announcer of the air-lines, is also the announcer for "Play Ball" and explains each vital step in the picture. Secretary Chamberlain expects to have more information in relationship to this picture before the end of the week, however.

Another excellent card has been prepared for the Kiwanis Club wrestling show to be held on Friday night at the Arena. There will be two main bouts with high-class boys participating. The last card was thoroughly enjoyed and the profit although small has been used by the Kiwanis Club to help an underprivileged child. All the money derived from this source will be used in the same way. Dunlop and Parnell should provide plenty of action in the first main go, while Dallas who passed on the last show is pitted against Jack Pearl. Frank Slovak and Jim Wilkins will tangle in the preliminary bout.

The set-up for local softball took a decided turn for the better last night when five local teams, Rednersville and Tweed linked together to form a strong, well-balanced intermediate "B" loop. Although the two outside clubs are only inter-locking with the local city league, competition naturally tends to elevate the game in this community. All games played in the league will count as wins and losses, but the Tweed and Rednersville aggregations will not be eligible for the league play-offs, due to the fact that they are not entering direct entry into the "B" series of intermediate O. A. S. A. play-downs. Rednersville and, naturally, next to the north and the other to the south, Tweed will be a competitive league, so they requested an inter-locking schedule, which was granted. Charlie Callaghan in the hands of these four men lies the destiny of softball activities for the coming season, which opens with six teams seeing action on May 24th.

BAHRAM WINS CLASSIC RACE

The Aga Khan's Stable Takes First And Second

Newmarket, England, May 1—(CP Cable)—The Favorite Bahram won the two thousand guinea first of the season's great classics for three-year-olds, over the mile course today with Theft second and Sea Bequest third.

It was the 127th running of the Classic. Bahram and Theft both ran in the Silks of the Aga Khan, noted turfman who won the race only once before, eleven years ago.

Bahram will be confirmed favorite for the Derby, second of the open classics as a result of today's win although the Derby distance is half a mile further.

The winner is a hall-brother of Windsor Lad, last year's Derby winner. He won all his five starts as a two-year-old. Today he stalked one of the warmest favorites in the Guineas' history, 7 to 2, while Theft was 11 to 2 and Sea Bequest 100 to 7.

Bahram had a length and a half margin at the finish and theft was another two lengths in front of Sea Bequest. Sixteen ran.

FIFTY ENTRIES IN FOR SWIM MEET

All Events Will Be Run Off-In One Evening

Although close to fifty entries for the City Swimming Championship meet have been received by Ralph Morden at the Y.M.C.A. these are spread out over six divisions and it has been decided to run off all the events in one night rather than spread them out over two evenings. Thursday night the events will begin sharply at 8 p.m. and will be run off in quick order.

In the Junior division of the boys it will be necessary to run off most of the events in heats as there is quite a large entry in this section but almost all the other divisions can be run off in straight races without repeats. With thirty-two events to be run off, exclusive of the extra necessary heats in the junior boys' events, it will mean a busy evening for the officials it not to mention plenty of action for the spectators who attend the meet.

The management at Albert College who are looking after the accommodation for spectators are making special arrangements for the accommodation of large crowd. With admission charges much below the ordinary price asked for similar programmes, the spectators will probably share in the breaking of records.

'JIMMY THE RAT' HELPS RESEARCH

Runs "Live Boarding House" For Typhus Flees In Laboratory

By F. B. COLTON
Associated Press Science Writer

Washington, May 1.—(AP)—Jimmy The Rat" believed to be the world's only professional living "boarding house" for fleas, today completed one year as a unique servant of medical science.

Despite his gangster-sounding name, Jimmy's life is dedicated 100 per cent. to suffering humanity. He lives in the Typhus Laboratory of the National Institute of Health of the Public Health Service. His job is letting escaped, typhus-infected fleas live on him, so they won't bite scientists working in the laboratory.

Thousands of fleas are kept in the typhus work-shop by Dr. R. E. Dyer. It is through their bite typhus is spread, and many of them purposely are infected with typhus germs in experiments seeking a method of controlling the disease.

Despite all precautions, an infected flea escapes occasionally from the containers. Any self-respecting flea, however, prefers a rat to a man any time, so the fugitive fleas go straight to Jimmy. He doesn't mind so much because he's had typhus, recovered and so is immune. He's tickled to death, anyway, to carry around a few fleas in return for tasty tid-bits that the white-coated scientists feed him from their own lunches.

But Jimmy is a bit spoiled. His lunch isn't forthcoming promptly, tugs gently with his teeth at the doctor's trousers until they remember him. Sleek, white and pink-eyed, he squeaks them a happy greeting each morning, for Jimmy leads a lonely life with only fleas for company.

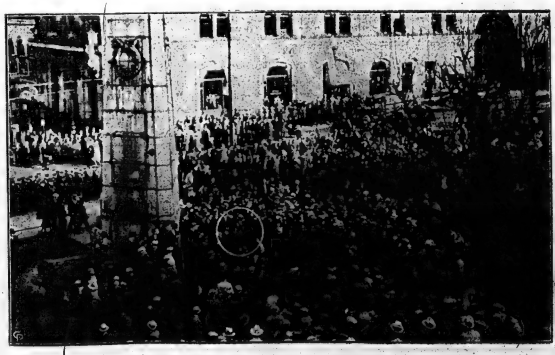
But he has no desire to escape, especially since a sad encounter with the door, trying to follow a doctor out one day, Jimmy's tail got caught. Since then nothing will tempt him to approach that door again.

Breeding Grounds Of Hoppers Attacked

Lethbridge, Alta., May 1 (CP) — A new offensive against grasshoppers that would take attackers to the insects' permanent breeding grounds and prevent recurring plagues by destroying the insects before they assumed outbreak proportions was favored in a statement issued today by eminent entomologists of Canada and United States.

NAZI KIDNAPPING CHARGE IS MADE

Swiss Newspaper Accuses German Reich of Activities



Basle, May 1.—(CP-Havas)—Nazi agents have perpetrated a new kidnapping from Swiss territory, the Communist newspaper Vorwaerts charged, adding that Swiss Federal authorities were investigating, and already had incriminating evidence against the Reich government in the recent Berthold Jacob kidnapping, "which is a crushing indictment of secret Nazi activity."

The newspaper said it had learned that Switzerland would file the Jacob case with the World Court at The Hague, if the Swiss and German Governments do not agree within two months on arbitration of the affair, as provided by treaty.

The latest incident had as its victim a young Swiss who allegedly was lured across the border near Kreuzlingen and jailed at Constance.

The Hague, May 1.—(CP-Havas)—Investigation of the kidnapping of a German laborer named Gutzeit from Dutch territory was pressed by police, as public opinion connected the case with the deportation of Jacob Wilde, also a German, for carrying on Nazi propaganda in the Netherlands.

Dominions' Part In Case of War

London, May 1.—(CP-Havas)—Canada and the Union of South Africa have served notice to the government here their Dominions will not come automatically to Great Britain's aid in case of war, the Labor'te Daily Herald stated today.

The Times declares there might be a "split in imperial sentiment" as regards Dominion military aid in a new conflict.

Notice that the Union of South Africa and Canada would not automatically range themselves on Britain's side in a new war has been served on the London government by Prime Ministers Gen. James B. Hertzog and Richard B. Bennett, both here to attend the Jubilee celebrations beginning next week in King George's honor, the Herald claims.

"The Dominion representatives made it unmistakably clear," the Herald continues recalling that the two Prime Ministers conferred here yesterday with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, "that they were unable to give any undertakings—to support Great Britain in a European conflict—without important reservations."

Daily Short Story

"Palm Beach"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Palm Beach!" Bob sighed longingly as he stood gazing at the travel folder. It was exactly five years since he had been sent Down South by his employers to cover baseball and, although he had also handled a number of other sporting assignments, he had never again been given an out-of-town assignment.

Then it all came back to him: The beautiful girl who sang in the hotel where he had stayed. The way she had smiled at him when he had sung with her each night in the restaurant. How he had tried to summon enough courage to ask her for a date. How, learning that he had learned that a well-known baseball player had been murdered in the hotel during the night, and finally, the lovely figure of the manager of the hotel office, who had been put on trial for her life. The parallel versus Agatha Christie!

"The jury must have gone soft on the wrath of here, too!" Bob thought. He recalled the verdict of guilty, despite circumstantial evidence, that had brought it sentence of twenty years in prison.

It was only two o'clock, but Bob had been given "Good-night" by the city editor and, wandering through the Hudson Stadium before going home, had picked up a time table.

"Those were the days of pre-Hitler," he thought, retiring to the wheel had been the most exciting adventure of his life, being only twenty-three at the time, and a bit wet behind the ears. Now, stinger, had of course made it all seem more like an experience than a thrill, but another story to report for his paper.

Suddenly Bob remembered that his Seminole pen was broken and decided that it would be a good time to have it mended. The store was open when it happened and so he went in, and he knew they had a repair department.

Re-Incarnation

As he was waiting for the job to be finished Bob roamed around the store. The only other customer was a flashily dressed man who was buying a pen and trying out various points. Bob picked up a pen and began writing also.

"Palm Beach . . . Palm Beach . . . Palm Beach . . ." he scribbled all over a piece of note tablet placed conveniently on the counter.

Suddenly the man moved on to another counter and Bob saw his pen, which he had forgotten, was repaired. There, before him, was the paper on which he had written "Palm Beach" over and over and what he had written was the name, "Lillian Abbott."

Bob managed to get his pen back from the repair department and, as the other man made his purchase. They walked out of the drug store and Bob paused to light a cigarette. Then he followed at a discreet distance.

Up Fifth Avenue the man walked, pausing occasionally to glance in a window display but never looking back. At Forty-second Street he turned eastward, finally entering a theatrical hotel. Bob lounged at the news stand but took care to keep in sight which the room-clerk took a key. He also overheard the name, "Harris," and mentally recalled the first name that went with it. Fred Harris! That was the fellow he had narrowly escaped trying to flirt with Lillian Abbott and slugging in the hotel at Palm Beach though she had made it quite plain that she disliked him.

"Funny the way that gang of hoodlums cleared out the day before the murder!" Bob reflected bowing again to an angle of the nose which had apparently aroused its sun's suspicions but his own. Harris, he remembered, had been one of the gang.

"Have you a room on the seventh floor?" Bob asked, stepping up to the desk.

Three were available and, after suggesting them all, Bob chose Number 732, mainly because Fred Harris occupied Number 732.

Matches of any importance happened for him at the front counter to choose. He did Bob. He returned to the hotel at eight-thirty. Bob did also.

Four Together

At ten o'clock, three men called on Harris. It appeared that they were meeting there by a long session at poker, and Bob braced himself to a listening against the wall. What he expected to hear, if anything, he did not know. But he vowed that he would not let Fred Harris out of his sight. If necessary, he would move into his hotel permanently. For something told him that it was not undying devotion that had prompted Harris to write Lillian's name, but more likely the promise of a guilty conscience. After all what he himself had written was merely "Palm Beach," the name of the greatest adventure of his life and the biggest story he had ever had.

The players were discouragingly silent until the clock struck twelve of some aphelion. Bob awoke with a start.

Half an hour later, there were sounds of moving about in the next room. Then voices, Harris' and low betrayed a disagreement of some sort. Then quite distinctly, Bob heard the words, "Lillian Abbott." Then the door opened and Harris appeared. Bob stood up.

"Where are you going?" he asked.

"Down to the hotel for a bite to eat," Harris replied. "Want to come along?"

Bob shook his head. He would wait there, he said. He would wait there for hours if necessary.

Harris left and Bob waited. He had been there for hours, it seemed, when Harris returned. He was alone.

"Where's the other fellow?" Bob asked.

"He left," Harris replied. "Had to get back to his room."

Trenton Adopts D.S.T. from June 1st Until September 15th

Rotarians Enjoy Speaker Sent From U. S. Club

Trenton, May 1.—(Special)—The regular council meeting for the month of May was held in the municipal office and much business was transacted, Mayor Harry Cory and Councillors Hugh O'Rourke, Charles E. York, R. J. Whitley, George Lambert, Ernie Ellis and S. Westfall were all present.

Daylight Saving was passed, effective from June 1, until Sept. 15. This decision was reached after the workers of the various Trenton factories and the Royal Canadian Air Force had voted on the extra hour of daylight during the summer months.

Another matter, that has caused much discussion in the past was finally settled, when council passed a by-law permitting games such as 'whirlie' and others similar to operate in Trenton providing a $200 fee is paid on each machine. This does not include slot machines. Until a year ago all these machines and slot machines were allowed to operate without fee until they were stopped by the police.

Employees of the town office wrote the council asking for an early closing on Saturday afternoon. This request was granted and from now on the offices will close at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The tax rate for 1935 was struck at 53 mills, the same as in 1934. The council had planned on a two mill reduction, but the assessment was not stand for the reduction and the rate will remain at 53 mills.

It was decided to again furnish free garden plots and seed to the unemployed. It was found that 80 per cent. of the gardens were successfully conducted last year. Councillor Hugh O'Rourke suggested, that trees be planted along Trenton streets to beautify thoroughfares, where necessary. This suggestion was accepted with Councillor O'Rourke being put in charge. Trees will be planted providing that the property owners will assume the responsibility of caring for the trees. A proclamation will be given the local press proclaiming May 24 a public holiday in honor of the Silver Jubilee of the reign of our Majesties The King and Queen. Usual fireworks are also passed.

Swimming Season Opens

The chilly waters of Lake Ontario at Old Orchard Beach did not hinder Mrs. Russel Hubbs from enjoying a swim on Saturday last. Mrs. Haines is always one of the first to dip in the waters of the lake. Speaking to one of the shivering onlookers he told us that Mrs. Haines had not just taken a dip but had enjoyed a real swim time-table.

W. S. Speaker at Rotary

The Trenton Rotary Club visited the club from Canisteo, New York, entered into a contest on attendance and the local club were the winners. The loser had to supply a speaker for the winner and last night the agreement was fulfilled when Rev. Harry Somers, President of the Canisteo Rotary Club addressed the local club with visitors present from Cobourg and Campbellford. Members from other centres such as Bowmanville and Belleville were expected but they did not show up and sent no reason for their not being on hand. Those who did not attend missed hearing the finest speaker that ever spoke before the local Rotarians.

Behind the chair of President Tom Jarrett a large Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were hung. Past President Ken Cook introduced the speaker. Canada was not new to Rev. Somers, he said, as he first saw the light of day in the Province of New Brunswick. He was educated in the public and high schools of his native province and later attended the University of New Brunswick before going to the United States where he entered Princeton University.

Rev. Somers, when arising to speak was greeted with rounds of applause. He said, that he felt at home in the land of his birth. He kept the audience in fits of laughter with his witty stories and his unusual sense of humor. He said that he had made a study before entering Rotary and emphatically remarked, that he was sold on Rotary. He said it had a saving influence in bringing men of different nations together in friendship where they learn to know each other better. He forecast that it would be Rotary days that would bring the leaders of nations to-day. "Twenty years ago," he said, "we would not have ever thought of the idea of coming to Trenton and greeting the editor of the newspaper, whom he had never seen before, as 'Tom'—such as he greeted President Tom Jarrett to-day." Rotary is going out into the world and bringing the leaders of the nations together, He asked: "Who knows the mighty float of influence that the Rotary will bring forth in the time to come, as it was not a very old organization, but in years we can see the fine spirit of the Inter-national meetings as well as the district, where both clubs are situated. Beneath it all lies humanity," he said in closing, and it all boils down to "Love thy neighbors as ourself."

President Tom Jarrett said, before he called upon Past President Ed. Simmons and Chester Lott to extend a vote of thanks to the speaker, that he had never seen such an occasion where so much merriment prevailed.

Dr. Bruce Longmore of the Campbellford Club, expressed on behalf of his club, the gratitude of their members in being present to such a fine talk and thanked the Young of Campbellford and Alex. Young of Cobourg, respectively the local club on winning the attendance contest and for asking them to attend such a fine meeting. Members of the Trenton Club and their wives will attend Ladies' Night in Cobourg on May 9th. President Tom Jarrett told the local club members that there would be no regular meeting next Monday on account of the holiday.

Rev. Harry Somers left this morning for Canisteo, accompanied by Rotarians W. R. Williams, who made the trip to Trenton with him on Monday.

Arthur C. Gander whose appointment as District Manager in charge of Dodge, De Soto and Dodge Truck sales in East Central Ontario has recently been announced by A. J. Shaw, Vice-President in Charge of Sales, Dodge Brothers (Canada) Limited.

MADOC INSTITUTE HOLDS MEETING

Mrs. G. Wallbridge Presents Paper on 'Etiquette For Sick-Rooms'

Madoc—Madoc Women's Institute held their regular meeting in the home of Mrs. W. A. Hunter with an attendance of thirty-five. Mrs. R. Bristol presided. The opening Ode and a short sing song opened the meeting. Minutes were approved and signed and correspondence read. Roll Call was answered by Garden Hints and was well responded to. Owing to unavoidable absence of the Convenor of Canadian Industries, a substitute programme was used and much enjoyed.

Mrs. Gavin Wallbridge gave a well prepared and interesting paper on 'Etiquette for the Sick Room.' Besides a lengthy list of 'Thou's' and 'Nevers' to be remembered. She stressed many qualities necessary in those who wait on sick ones. Among others were conscientiousness, Cheerfulness, Gentleness, Observation, Tact, Courtesy, Sympathy, Self control, Unselfishness, Good Judgment and Cleanliness.

Mrs. George White then gave a very able review of the current events of the month.

Mrs. R. Wickham was then called upon and introduced her subject 'Humility' on Lie Knows' and gave a very interesting demonstration and talk on Fancy Articles made from scraps of ribbon, silk, wool, chintz and sugar bags. Mrs. R. Bowen followed this by a talk on "Fancy dishes for tea-time from left-overs".

A Nomination Committee of Miss Jenkins, C. H. Wigglesk, W. E. Connor and W. Rupert was appointed to present for consideration at the annual meeting in May. A complete slate for Executive, Directors and Chairmen of Committees.

The National Anthem closed the meeting and tea was served by the hostess assisted by Mesdames Rutherford, Connor, Chaney, Benson and Aylesworth and a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

On Sunday evening April the twenty-eight the Rt. Rev. J. Lyons Le A. Hinton, Bishop of Ontario celebrated the Holy Rite of Confirmation at St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, when seven persons were presented for Confirmation by the Rector, Rev. H. C. Rice Swayne. Also assisting in the service was Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne of Bonarlaw.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion. The Processional Hymn, "The Church's One Foundation" was used, followed by "My God, Accept My Heart This Day", "Come, Holy Ghost Our Souls Inspire and the Recessional "Thine Forever, Thine Forever."

His Lordship, the Bishop, chose the text "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which has come to pass". Luke 2. 15, giving an inspiring and heart searching message as he emphasized that the same qualities which brought results to those days would if well exercised by the church to-day. In these days, bring tremendous and cheering results to the world and humanity in the world today.

The qualities he stressed as (1) not indifferent, but making our required effort, using energy and denying ourselves, (2) faith and love, the resultant happiness which must share its joy with others.

In the charge to the candidates the Bishop charged them to be mindful of the fact that they are not assuming new responsibilities but taking on themselves new and ready binding them by their Baptism and urged them to rise to their full ability the means of grace offered them by the church for their growth in grace.

Following the "laying on of hands" the Choir sang the beautiful anthem "He Lives" (J. Lincoln Hall) very effectively, Miss Eleanor Aylesworth presiding at the organ.

A supper congregation assembled for this solemn service, among whom were visitors from other congregations in Madoc and several from Tweed.

SCHOLARS TAUGHT BY WAY OF RADIO

City School Classes Listen in on First Lesson of Series

School children of the city assembled in auditoriums and classrooms yesterday to hear the first radio lesson in music broadcast under the auspices of the Department of Education. This initial lesson, of the series of eight, proved a real success and was received with enthusiasm by the teachers and pupils.

At Queen Victoria School three radios brought the lesson to the pupils, and although the lesson was for junior classes all were permitted to hear it. The reception was splendid and the whole school enjoyed the program which lasted well over half an hour, in commencing on the lesson, the principal, Mr. A. C. Wilkin, said it was as well arranged that the children were able to sing the songs correctly at the conclusion. The principal felt that radio lessons can certainly be used to great advantage.

Junior Classes

Junior classes in the King George School heard the lesson yesterday, while on Thursday the senior classes will hear the second lesson. Miss Mr. L. A. Kells, principal of the school, said the reception was very good and that in the opinion of all the teachers the lesson was excellent. Some of the classes took active part in the program which made a deep impression on the children.

Primary classes at Queen Mary School enjoyed the program because in clearly until just before the coinciding number when loud speakers made reception difficult. Mr. C. I. Frederick, principal told the Intelligencer.

Pupils at St. Michael's Academy were unable to hear the lesson because of radio interference. All had assembled in the Academy of the Auditorium but it was impossible to hear any part of the lesson. At Queen Alexandra School, the pupils were also disappointed. The principal, Mr. W. G. Anderson had arranged to have a radio installed but it did not arrive for the program.

Program Splendid

Public School Inspector H. J. Clarke, B.A. who followed the program with great interest pronounced it splendid. The program originated in Toronto, and was broadcast from Station CHOT under the direction of Miss M. Smily Tedd, Supervisor of Music for Toronto schools. Miss Tedd led a choir of children through a group of spring songs, "We, John, Pe," "The Cuckoo" and "Sealmen" "Cradle Song" were sung by the children in the studio, and when Miss Tedd invited the listeners to sing, they did so with keen delight. The first movement of "Peer Gynt" played by a symphony orchestra was heard by the children at the conclusion of the program.

The broadcasts of which there will be eight are in the nature of an experiment to determine the effectiveness of the radio in elementary school work. Reports will be made by the teachers, especially in the rural districts, regarding the lessons. On the basis of these reports a further series may be arranged.

Johnny Walker is Dead, Trainer of Champions

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—The man who made George Young a swimming champion, who developed Margaret Ravior of Philadelphia and Marvin Nelson of Fort Dodge, Ia., into world-beating competitors, is dead here. He was Johnny Walker, 60-year-old Scot, himself an international star in his youth.

Walker, celebrated trainer of marathon champions, died here last night from a stroke suffered when he was taken ill last Saturday shortly after the day's work of coaching young swimmers at the Granite Club.

The pudgy Young, whom the burly Scot plucked out of a big Y.M.C.A. swimming class and developed to make into a champion, brought Walker an international reputation. He trained Young for the $30,000 Catalina Channel swim in 1927, although he did not go to California to watch George win.

After Young's sensational triumph, marathon swimming went on a prolonged boom here. The Canadian National Exhibition put up a $35,000 prize for a 21-mile grind in Lake Ontario. Swimming under auspices other than Walker, Young swam only a few miles in 1928 and was taken from the water.

Not until 1931, with Walker rowing a boat beside him, did Young score in the big Toronto event. Miss Ravior, now Young's wife, captured the rich women's 10-mile swim three times under the direction of Walker.

When the marathon boom arrived Walker opened a camp for contestants and a big percentage of money-winners were turned out of his training grounds. Nelson, the giant Iowan, attributed most of his success to the handling of Walker.

Under Walker he won the swim in 1930, 1932 and 1934. Johnny's son, Tommy Walker, was one of his most successful pupils, winning amateur races in Canada and the United States. He captured the United States pentathlon championship in 1932.

Before coming to Canada 32 years ago, Walker played water polo on the Scottish National team for seven years and was a highly-regarded swimmer at all distances.

Dodger - Giant Feud Ensues When Terrymen Cross Brooklyn Bridge

Stengel and Terry Bury Hatchet, Fans Refuse to Forget Insult

New York, May 1.—(AP)—The Hatfields and McCoys of baseball, Memphis Bill Terry and Gowanus Casey Stengel, may have settled their feud to their own personal satisfaction, but there is no calling off the frenzied faithful of Brooklyn.

It looks as if the boys who buy the pasteboards never are going to forget or forgive the fact in an unguarded moment over a year ago when Terry quaintly pondered "Are the Dodgers still in the league."

Even belting the Giants out of last year's pennant hasn't salved the outraged Brooklyn pride.

The Giants crossed the Brooklyn bridge and the Gowanus canal yesterday for the first time since the 1934 debacle, and the greeting Terry and his men got from the 17,000 flatbushers would have warmed the hearts of survivors of the old Giants' feuds with Chicago Cubs. There must be something to it, because the Dodgers won a ball game as well as the setting, 12 to 5.

The boys heaved cannon crackers out of the stands, howling with delight as the cardboard bombs burst about Giant gunners. They call them Brooklyn greeting cards. One, as the festivities opened, nearly blew staid Tom Clark off the first base coaching lines.

Terry, principal target, shook hands with Stengel for photographers by home plate yesterday, and the 17,000 stood and roared in outraged unison:

"Don't shake hands with that bum."

Not it was all music to the ears of Terry and Stengel, who can hear through the turmoil of baseball's most rabid fandom the sweet click of the overheated turnstiles.

GOLF FACTS

by

Alex J. Morrison

Two of my pupils have dropped from the shooting around 100 to scoring in the middle 80's. I mention them because they should be playing in the 70's.

They hit the ball well and far enough to be putting for a par on every hole. After going out in something like 38 or 39 they'll take 46 or 47 for the second time.

In their cases, the let down is due to the fact that they insist on playing with duffers who shoot around 130. They get to whacking around like the duffers. Players of distinctly different classes cannot keep in step with one another.

You never see pros preparing for a big tournament by playing with duffers. They seek good players during their practice. They'll profit by following their example.

WILL INVESTIGATION REVEAL SCENES LIKE THESE IN CANADIAN PENITENTIARIES?

In view of the probability of royal commission investigating Canadian penal institutions, the above pictures of Sing Sing, one of continent's most famous prisons, are interesting. The candid camera records some of events in a day's life of the inmates and officials of the "Big House"—on the banks of the Hudson at Ossining, N. Y., in which more than two thousand of New York's law breakers are serving terms of from one year to life. Seventeen others, including a woman, Mrs. Eva Coo, wait in the condemned cells for either commutation or death in the "hot seat." Despite drama and tragedy, Sing Sing is a comparatively happy institution. Inmates work in the shops, enjoy radio music in their cells, are well fed, play handball and baseball, and in general enjoy life as much as is possible behind prison walls. Sing Sings military corps, latest innovation in the "Big House" sponsored by Warden Lawes, drill frequently to inmates' band of 86 pieces. Rehabilitation rather than punishment is the objective.

AT THE BELLE

A Baffling Mystery Drama and "George White's 1935 Scandals" On Screen Bill

Arthur Somers Roche's baffling mystery story, "Shadow of Doubt" which kept the readers of Collier's in suspense for so many weeks, and which has created more comment than any story of its type since "The Thin Man", is to come to the screen heralded as one of the most novel of all filmdom's detective yarns. Produced by Goldwyn-Mayer, it opens at the Belle today with Ricardo Cortez and Virginia Bruce heading the supposing cast.

As in "Penthouse", by the same author, "Shadow of Doubt" deals with the interesting people of both Broadway and Park Avenue and those more sinister characters who haunt the streets between.

It brings to the screen an amazing new sleuth in "Aunt Melissa", the wealthy spinster recluse who emerges from her hiding place of years to cope with a baffling murder mystery in New York and solve it. The brilliant author of "Penthouse" has created this unique character an engrossing romance that keeps the audience on tenterhooks up to the solution, in the final scenes of the astounding picture.

Virginia Bruce, brilliant heroine of "The Mighty Barnum" appears as the glamorous screen star, "Gemma Blake" in the new production. She and Ricardo Cortez as the romantic team furnish the love interest, and both do some remarkable dramatic action in the fog of suspicion.

"Aunt Melissa" is played by Constance Collier, the great English stage star, other prominent and popular players include Rabbi Jewell, Nealy Downey, Arthur Byron, Edward Brophy, Betty Furness and Ivan Simpson.

Spectacular night club scenes, dancing ensembles and New York night life add color to the gay suspense and mystery of the central theme of the new production.

"Geo. White's 1935 Scandals"

Slip us a ton of dynamite adjectives! Then maybe we can do justice to the scintillant gayety, "George White's 1935 Scandals", the second feature attraction on the same program. Here's the third triumphant word in screen entertainment, a splendid sumburst of comedy and music that sustains the reputation of George White as prince of showmen.

It more than surpasses expectation, and is just about 365 times more brilliant than the first edition sister of last year.

The second annual edition, sponsored by Fox Films, has everything. Here are ten top-rung stars: Alice Faye, James Dunn, Ned Sparks, Lyda Roberti, Cliff Edwards, Arline Judge, Eleanor Powell, Emma Dunn, Benny Rubin and George White, who conceived, produced and directed the entire show which introduces 200 types of delectable girlhood, and six brand new song hits that you'll be humming for some time to come. It is entertainment in every member of the family. "Rainbow Canyon," a four- star travel-talk in full process technicolor will be exhibited on the same program. George White's Scandals starts at 2.40, 7.10, 9.30. "Shadow of Doubt" at 3.45 and 8.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Good Fairy", the supreme Sullavan in a triumph greater even than "Only Yesterday" and "Little Man What Now".

If the screen has ever shown a more delightful comedy than "The Good Fairy", this reviewer has not seen it.

From the various standpoints of acting, incidents, production and direction, this rollicking farce is completely satisfying and is a credit to not only to the Universal company but to everyone concerned in its making.

Margaret Sullavan and Herbert Marshall are presented as co-stars of the best of an exceptional company and neither has ever before been so happily cast. Unrealized possibilities are here revealed in many scenes filled with delicious humour, and allied to the wide versatility of this popular pair. No less effective is unpretentious funny roles are Frank Morgan and Reginald Owen, who keep the laughs coming as a flowing tide and add greatly to the success of the picture. Other important parts are in the hands of Alan Hale, Hugh O'Connell and Beulah Bondi.

This story of "The Good Fairy" finds Miss Sullavan, a young girl plainly unschooled in the ways of the world, leaving an orphan asylum to take a position as an usherette in a theatre and achieving in a hectic 48 hours a series of most hilarious adventures and a romance with Marshall.

Two important cogs in the production of a motion picture whose efforts often receive scant consideration from theatregoers are in the present instance entitled to unstinted praise, William Wyler has directed the picture with a sure, well-nigh flawless comedy touch, and Preston Sturges has contributed a remarkably fine screen adaptation of the original play by the Hungarian dramatis, Ferenc Molnar.

Put "The Good Fairy" at the top of your list of motion pictures which you simply must not miss. It is a veritable comedy gem.

The exciting adventures of a lovely little vixen who be-devils a romancing millionaire into making her poor sweetheart's dreams come true! Also at our popular prices, an excellent Cartoon, "Joe's Lunch Wagon", plus Capitol Super News-reel, complete a truly entertaining programme you'll want to recommend to your friends and neighbors. Complete shows start at 2:30; 7:15 and 9:15. "Good Fairy" at 2:50; 7:35 and 9:35.

FROM EVERY CORNER OF THE WORLD

to the daily newspaper come flashing the engrossing incidents that are at this very moment making today's history. The whole atmosphere of the daily newspaper is redolent with the feeling with things of the moment that have just happened, or are about to happen.

When white paper leaves the printing presses in the daily newspaper office, it is no longer some inert material, but an active powerful force reaching the thousands who thirst for its contents.

Practically every Canadian family reads a daily newspaper. It is an essential part of daily life and without it all would feel a distinct loss—nothing can take its place.

On the newspaper's pages also are advertisements placed there by thoughtful, energetic men of leading merchants and producers. The best traders in Canada—the firms which grow in strength and prestige year after year—know that the daily newspaper is as necessary to them as their raw material. When the fight is hardest—they have often proved this—it pays to strengthen their newspaper lists.

Follow their good example!

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

Associated Press Financial Writer

New York, May 2 (AP)—The silver boom scented somewhat tarnished today and bullish sentiment in the stock exchange and other speculative markets was dampened.

Nominal price changes appeared in the Canadian list, including shares of Dome, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific. On the curb, Hiram Walker improved a shade, while Base Metals was unchanged. Dominion Government issues were up 1-16 of a cent at 99 11-16 cents.

Chrysler lost 2 points. Sash non-ferrous issues as Cerro De Pasco, U.S. Smelting and Home Mines dropped a point or two, and American Smelting and Anaconda were off fractions. Industrials losing 1 to 2 points included Eastman, Allied Chemical and Coca Cola, while U. S. Steel, Case, Johns-Manville and several others lost fractions. American Telephone was a firm spot, up a point, and Pullman and Westinghouse Electric registered similar gains.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 2.—(CP)—The Industrial list of the Toronto Exchange held a slow and somewhat unsettled day but displayed firming tendencies in the late performance to give the price level an almost even break on losses and gains. Some of the liquors and Oils improved and the Metals recovered early recessions. Volume was better also to the late trading.

The drop in the Silver price indirectly affected the whole Industrial list this week's early trading and recessions on slow turnover was the rule. Nickel held up well and Consolidated Smelters lost only a point and fully recovered in the early afternoon.

Liquor shares and Ford A traded in fair volume with Walkers' common higher and Seagrams and Alsohol A off about 1-4 each. Ford A at 27 was slightly higher.

The Utilities and Steels found narrow recessions. Implements and Banks were quiet and the foods mainly unchanged and steady.

TORONTO MINES
(Close)

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—Trading quite severely at the opening on the announcement of a sharp drop in the price for bar metal, silver stocks came back most of the way into this afternoon on heavy buying. The group held the main interest with base metals trailing and the gold shares quite appealing considerable dragey. At the close the price level was slightly off for the day but with a late firm appearance.

The silver shares were sold heavily from the opening, a drop of 1 to 4 cents in the bar metal price having proved a severe strain on confidence in the group. Losses included 27 for Eldorado, 7 for Castle, 4 for Bear and 5 for Nipissing. Eldorado and Castle erased some of the losses in the early afternoon.

Buying of the gold shares was also allowed up by a fall of the London Bar Gold quotation. Dome dropped 75 cents, Hollinger 35, and Wright Hargreaves 15. Pioneda weakened 15 cents and other base metal issues were off narrowly, including Base Metals Corporation, Falconbridge and Hudson Bay.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 2.—(AP)— The stock market refused to be more than momentarily discouraged by a slump in world silver prices today.

After an irregular decline in the earlier hours the list recovered most of its losses and in most of the leaders rallied from with gains, despite continued sogginess in commodities.

Chrysler and American Telephone rose 2 points and shares up a point or more included Santa Fe, Eastman, Westinghouse Electric, Pullman and a few others and fractional gains were numerous. U. S. Smelting recovered half of a 3-point loss and declines of fractions to a point in other non-ferrous metals were noticed. In the late dealings, the market was irregularly higher, transactions approximated 800,000 shares.

CARGO HOISTS ARE IDLE AS WORKERS CONTINUE STRIKE

Ocean-Going Freight in Montreal Harbor Paralyzed

2,000 MEN OUT

Strike Does Not Affect Lake Freighters And Coastal Boats

Montreal, May 2.—(CP)—While cargo hoists hung idle along the miles of docks here, ship owners and union representatives early today sought solution of labor troubles which paralyzed the movement of ocean-going freight in Montreal harbor since yesterday.

Growing fears of discontent among members of the Montreal Association of syndicated longshoremen (Lvra) when officials of the union issued a strike call, which was immediately and fully obeyed. From holds and winches, from slings and barrows came 2,000 men, who had been busily occupied in and about some 25 liners and freighters and the port went dead. There was no violence and complete order was kept by the striking men.

Point at issue was the size of loads allowed in slings unloading and loading certain commodities, chiefly woodpulp and tin. At present 2,000 pounds are lifted at once and must be rushed away in haste and here before the next sling is handled. The union now wants 1,000 pound slings. It was stated in shipping circles the change would mean the men would earn more money as they are on a time basis and it would take longer to handle a cargo.

The dispute is between the shipowners and the longshoremen, the Montreal Harbor Commissioners not being connected with the strike. Counsel terms are drawn up between the union and the companies.

Hope Compromise Effected

It was hoped the meeting this morning would reach a compromise on the question of loads. Union officials stated they were not actuating any change in basic rates of pay. E. McG. Quirk, official representative of the Department of Labor, was seeking to bring the disputing parties together.

Immediate settlement of the strike was regarded in shipping quarters as necessary if Montreal is to Work

Montreal, May 3—(CP)— Fifteen hundred longshoremen who walked out on strike yesterday, tieing up the entire Montreal waterfront, were to return for work at 1.30 p.m. today, it was announced following a meeting of officials of the Montreal Association of Syndicated Longshoremen and representatives of the Montreal Shipping Federation, which includes every large shipping company in the city.

It was imperative for ocean shipping was completely tied up in the harbor. Frustrated liners are due to sail tomorrow and there is a possibility they may be delayed if immediate facilities for their cargo are not completed.

Belleville Better Days Ends Saturday May 4 — Prize Coupons with Every Purchase

Carl Case had been pretty brutal about giving her to understand the extent of her folly. Sufficient enough to cure her of what never could have been more than an unreasonable infatuation.

Indignation, passionate and choking, carried her, at a speed that left her breathless, from the grateful privacy of Phoebe's home to Phoebe's office. She'd return to Bob Joll. She must return. Carl Case must know that even a silly little fool may despise a charlatan.

Thinking this, Anne told herself: I ought to tell Phoebe about Carl Case, and pour out—

"We'll call it a day," Phoebe said, rising. "We'll go some place for a good dinner. Anne, you look as if a frosty cocktail in a spot with an ocean view."

At a sky little lacquered table under a striped umbrella over her head Anne leaned forward suddenly and said:

"Phoebe, I wanted to tell you"

"Tut, tut", Phoebe laughed. The orchestra again was playing and cheeks again. "Of course you've wanted to tell me whatever it is. Stop bothering you. Only by telling is set quite ripe. When it's ready, you'll tell me—or be just going, rest now."

Anne took a long draught of the orangeade. Dear understanding Phoebe, Phoebe signaled for another round of orangeade and changed the subject.

Bob Joll. Seven o'clock in the morning. Anne arranged herself on a table in Madame Hoag's circular boudoir. Madame Hoag, in the worn purple kimono that had come from her husband's wardrobe, her hair a wet, black mop about her head, her face masked with cold cream, began her third cup of black coffee.

"Now you look here, Pitt," Madame commanded, "I'm not going to pay no attention to that blouse about the pearls and the sweater and the another string of pearls, but when you get home and Mr. Hoag knows about clothes than a dutchess, he got something. Besides, I don't believe you have anything to do with them gettin' lost. Just you pay attention to your own affairs and let me of this gang of cut throat servants problems you, let me know. I'll take care of 'em."

Madame's jowl snapped ominously.

"Thank you, Madame," Anne said. Her eyes were damp with gratitude.

"I'm moving you to a room right here in the front of the house, so's you'll be nearer me when I want you." Madame went on. "You're to wear your own clothes—never mind the uniform. If you need any new casper rags, go to one of the shops where I trade and get 'em, and charge 'em to me. Clothes're part of the expense."

"That's kind of you." Anne wondered if she could keep the tears from spilling over. "I think I can manage, for the present—on what I have."

"All right. Only don't go short. I like folks around me to look pretty and to be pretty. Back of Shop's where your new room is. Come back in an hour."

The new room was down the hall from Madame's suite. It was large and sunny with an alcove of long French windows opening onto a balcony large enough to accommodate several wicker chairs, a chaise longue and some jars of growing plants.

"Are you sure this is the room Madame means me to have?" Anne asked Bats. Obviously this was a guest room with its bath of pale green tile perfectly appointed.

"This is it," Bats said, going into a cedar-lined closet. "I couldn't believe it myself at first when she told me, so I looked again to be sure, and it made her mad as all get out. She shouted at me to stop poking my nose on other folks' business."

"It's quite grand," Anne said, "but I'll miss being next to you. You must come in whenever you can and help me enjoy it. We can have fine sun baths on the balcony."

Bats shook her head.

"It's different now, Miss' Anne," she said.

Anne stopped arranging clothes in the cedar closet, turned and came to where Bats stood rather forlornly, still shaking her head.

"Why is it different?" Anne demanded, "and why do you call me Miss Anne?"

"Madame has given orders you're to be called Miss Anne and that you belong to the front of the house, not back-stairs. You should have seen that Berta when word came you are to be served here in your room instead of at the table with the rest of us. I thought that Berta was going to have a stroke she got so purple. She's been stamping around muttering to herself ever since. Don't you let that one serve you, Miss Anne. She'll like as not put poison in your tomato juice."

Anne laughed. "We'd better be getting back to Madame," she said.

Madame was in a pet about her cold cream mask.

"Cream!" she raged, scornfully. "They call it cream. Mutton tallow! That's what they sell me, tallow for the carat. I know my hide's thick and old and scraggy, but these beauty doctors ought to be able to make me look human. Every other half human, I've ordered the car, Pitt. You go to the best beauty doctor in this town and get me something beside mutton tallow. Get me everything he's got. Rats, you clear out the cupboards and the medicine chest. Throw out all the bottles and pots and boxes. I'm gonna get a fresh start on this face of mine."

The car! Anne's heart stood still, then raced, clamoring at her throat. Madame's blue car! Carl Case at the wheel! How was she to meet Carl Case? How first greet him? How she knew why she had returned to Bob Joll. She must return. Carl Case must know that even a silly little fool may despise a charlatan.

Thinking this, Anne told herself: I ought to tell Phoebe about Carl Case, and pour—

"Are there other errands I can attend to while I'm downtown?" Anne asked, hoping there would be. Giving orders was going to be great fun today.

"I've. Get me a couple of pairs of beach pajamas and some cloth hats. They're on to the new Chich and veil for me in my cabana."

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Anne walked down the broad steps under Bob Joll's awning. Beyond, in wardly she was a turmoil of emotions. Pride rode high but her knees were not too steady. Anyone observing her would have said that here was a very cool and very efficient young person, very lovely and very preoccupied by whatever it was she was about to do.

The blue car was waiting. As she descended the steps, Anne was aware of a blue uniformed figure hastilies from behind the driving wheel.

"Miss Anne!"

Now was the time. Never mind the simulated joy in that word "Anne!". Never mind the blue figure poised for flight toward her. Theodosia! Carl Case had the effrontery now that she was out of shadows to bring to bear that little affair could carry on from where it had been left off.

Her eyes stopped him, brought him of attention. They were dark pools under low, level brows.

"Take me downtown, please," she said evenly, and added the name of a fashionable hotel.

Instantly he was at the back door of the car, standing at attention to hand her in. She dared not look at him. The line of his jaw, she knew, would be tense and jutting. He would resent the supercilious tone in her order. She wanted him to resent it. She wanted to be as hateful as she could possibly manage. He must be made to understand that she regarded him as a totally negligible quantity, that for her he had ceased to exist save as a part of Bob Joll's household, servant.

Now she was being whirled along the Shore Drive, into traffic. Carl Case was certainly stepping on the gas. He was trying to frighten her. She placed her lips close to the speaking tube.

"Thirty miles an hour, please," she said, clipping her words.

Instantly the car slowed. It had whiplashed. Now it crawled. He was trying to infuriate her. The blue figure in the seat ahead was an automaton.

The car stopped at the hotel. How often she had come here in the old days—was it in another life!

Carl Case was at the back of the car. He had opened it. He stood, wooden and whiter than she ever had seen him—waiting to hand her out. She ignored the proffered hand, stepped from the car with maddening deliberation.

"Wait for me, please," she said, over her shoulder.

All the time she was making her purchases for Madame in the beauty shop she was conscious of a blue car and a blue figure waiting outside for her pleasure, her order. Let them wait.

When Anne finished her shopping which included a bathing suit for Madame, she had an attendant carry her purchases to the blue car. She proceeded along the street, "please," she instructed the attendant when the car drew up, "I'll have the chauffeur look after them.

"Carl Case heard. He could not help hearing.

"Where to, Miss Brent?" The blue figure stood, stiffly, still at attention.

"To the Sort Club." Anne leaned back against the cushions of the blue car. She was tired, desperately tired. Was she tired or was she fed up? The old camaraderie of the front seat—the hum of the motor under her feet—the touch of rear lips against her cheek—that too was millions of years ago! The world went on crashing. No yesterdays. Only today and tomorrow—maybe.

The car stopped. The familiar Sort Club, Gilpin and Gilpin and they faces. Flash of color, Sports togs. Laughter, with and without mirth.

"You may look after the packages, Case," Anne said. Her tongue tripped, ever so little, over the word "Case"). Why couldn't she be happy pleasing it over her ability to hurt this man who had wounded her so grievously, who had played fast and fare at the club. Madame will give orders when she arrives.

Anne proceeded along the familiar entrance to the club. She must be nonchalant, she told herself. No matter how much she wanted to be. She must be cool and blase—cold figure, the blue car, she must be leisurely. Even though her heart were pounding, even though she felt small and mean, more hateful even than she had hoped she might be.

She had the number of Madame's cabana. She'd skirt the club to the beach. It might be her good luck to meet no one she knew. If she did meet a friend, an acquaintance of the old days, she would be as cool as politeness permitted. She was here in the interests of her employer. That would answer their questions.

Madame's cabana was the most luxurious on the Beach. A butler in buff and blue uniform was arranging a table on the deep cushioned porch.

"I am Madame Hoag's secretary," she said, forcing herself not to feel a secluded shell. She had never seen this butler before. He was not one of the house staff at Bob Joll.

"Very good, Miss." The butler went on with his duties.

"There are to be—guests?"

"My orders are for two, Miss. Madame will lunch in the cabana."

Two! Madame and—Carl Case was the other one. She was expected to lunch with Madame. Here, within sight of the parade—the parade of fashion and of frivolity, the parade that claimed to be and to be seen. There was no chance that she would escape being recognized by some of those same members. Why should she seek to? There were no excuses she need make to Madame. Let them lift their plucked eyebrows.

She could hear the butler bring champagne somewhere inside the cabana. Familiar sounds. Familiar sounds. Yet she was a stranger here. A side-line worker.

Anne heard the booming of Madame Hoag's voice.

"Bring the packages on a settee, Case," Madame was saying. "Go Pitt and I can look 'em over. Then you go back and tell the one who drove me here what's his name? — Brockenridge? — what a name for a chauffeur—tell him to take you home and you stay here. Go get your food and I'll send some one for you when we're through with this breach stuff."

Anne did not glance at the blue figure.

"I see you found the cabin all right, Pitt," Madame cackled, observing herself among cushions. "You ought to. You been here about as often as I do. You was born to it and I'm just butter-in. Now everything is here. There's enough of 'em. If what they got don't suit you, go buy tough hide, nothing will."

"I hope you'll find them satisfactory, Madame," Anne said. "They are the best on the market."

"Yes, Madame," Pitt said, "they are," Madame began searing at the packages. "Now you go, Case. No hurry. I'm stayin' here till I get ready to leave."

Yes, Madame."

The true French accent. On the Madame's part. Anne knew the language intimately, through association with it, could manage with any particular pronunciation. So this Case person was trying to show off. Well, that she had been a bit of a fool. A show-off—that's what he was.

"Madame Hoag", Anne's voice was steel in velvet, "I'm so sorry but I forgot my handbag and it has some important notes in it. I think I left it on the dressing table in my room."

"You have that?" Madame addressed Carl Case. "Pitt forgot her pocketbook. It's on her dresser. Go get it. You can tell when you come back."

"Yes, Madame."

Anne walked into the cabana. So this was how accustomers felt when they sent heads toppling into baskets. Except that executioners did not have the heads that toppled into their baskets. Just heads.

The packages were being opened.

"Pitt, what's this?" Madame unfolded a black garment.

"A bathing suit, Madame."

"Bathing suit? Black? Who wants a black bathing suit. Orange, purple— but black; I'm going bathing, not to a wake."

"If you'll wait until you try it, Madame—it is one of the smartest bath suits I've seen."

"Smart, huh? Well, maybe you're right. You gotta be smart these days. You look like the devil, but as long as you're smart you're a big fish in the swim. Let's eat."

The butler brought cocktails. Madame tossed off her glass. "What is the matter with you, Pitt? You was weaned on them potions."

Anne thought: What is the matter with me? Ridiculous to be choking down a really delicious cocktail.

"I don't know," she said. "Perhaps I'm getting to be a serious thinker."

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

The King, business man

In addition to being a naval officer, an army commander, an expert on things artistic—in general, apart from being a king, the sovereign of the British Empire has to be a business man.

And a clever business man is King George—the word clever used in the sense that it means neat and careful. The illustrator's day-by-day depicts the King at his desk where he daily reads state documents, letters from his subjects, attends to the rental of his estates and reads all his correspondence—and answers it.

When the King comes down to breakfast which he takes with the Queen and members of the Royal Family are present, he finds there last out, telegrams, morning papers, State communications, etc. which demand immediate attention. He looks them over, carefully before breakfast, which he has at nine-thirty. Often the King and Queen breakfast together; sometimes other members of the Royal Family are house, and the talk is the usual "family stuff," with no suggestion of discussing affairs of state.

Breakfast over, the King then confers with Sir Clive Wigram, his private secretary and personal adviser.

After going over the correspondence with him, he is then advised of callers, requesting each time a short summary of the visitor's career.

Quite often the King surprises his visitor with his knowledge of their own affairs; he is a most charming host and, as one critic puts it: "Whether His Majesty is receiving his first or twenty-fifth caller, it makes no difference." He never allows the interest to flag.

Often the King spends the afternoon in session with government or police officials whom he has called to advise him on certain matters. In all practically his entire day is taken up with the business of being a business man—and that he is capable one is shown by his successful reign of twenty-five years, from May 6, 1910, to May 6, 1935. Long May He Reign!

Hitting Fixed Objects Cause of Most Accidents

Kiwanis Club Hear G. A. Hodson of Dept. of Highways

BELLEVILLE'S RECORD

"Take your time and don't blame it on the steering wheel", said O. Hodson, chief examiner of motor drivers in the Department of Highways to members of the Kiwanis Club, at their weekly luncheon held in the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday. Mr. Hodson inaugurated the "Safety Campaign" that is being sponsored by this service club in this city and district and the campaign was sent off to a good start because Mr. Hodson was a very entertaining speaker with a wealth of knowledge from actual experience, as to how many of the accidents with loss of life occurred. Chief Alec Kidd was an interested guest at the luncheon.

After the president, Cliff Barrager had opened the meeting, Eddie Shapiro announced the program for the Charter Night on May 14th, when members from Kiwanis club of Trenton, Peterboro, Kingston, Oshawa, and Picton will be present. Fred McMillan, district governor, who took over the duties of the late Fred McLean will be the chief guest and speaker. The choir will be stag and it is the wish of the Inter Club Committee, that every member in his place to give a rousing welcome to the guests. Leo B. Hoey gave a three minute talk, being booster for the day. He spoke on the singing of the National Anthem, remarking, that many did not know the words of the same and that the word "Our" and "The" before the word King were generally misplaced. The speaker suggested that it was to remember the correct placing by using "our" for the first two lines in which the word King appears and "the" in the last line. He also stated that the song was sung entirely too fast and that the first part should be sung slowly to accelerate tone finally swelling to full voice in the last verse. The lucky winners of the draw were Ross Silver and Harry Pyne.

Bellevue Holds Record

The speaker introduced by Ridells Shapiro stated, that Belleville was the holder of a real record in that only two were killed on the streets of the city since 1923 and in the past two years and he has been killed. "This is a proud record" said Mr. Hodson, "except that Belleville is situated on the main highway, where the traffic is quite dense especially in the summer season. But Belleville has another record in that it has the highest percentage in the Province for motorists hitting fixed objects, while they also hold the record for running off the highway or street, the city being 47 percent and the average for the Province being 38 per cent. It is too bad that we cannot get motorists to assume responsibility for the terrible toll" Mr. Hodson gave figures to show that on the American continent every three seconds someone is injured by the known hazards and every 5 1-2 minutes someone is killed by some of the known agencies. In the Province of Ontario three are killed every two days and the question can be asked "are you going to be next?"

Motorists Egotism

"The problem to contend with" continued the speaker is that every motorist thinks he or she is a good motorist and that he or she is not immune from accidents." The speaker concluded that motorists take too much for granted and do not drive with the common sense, that the Lord has provided. There is only one way to keep out of accidents and that is to operate with there are reckless and dangerous motorists. Pedestrians should be alert at every motorist should be prepared for anything. "Without fear of contradiction" said he "200 killed and 10,000 injured, ninety five percent of these accidents did not have to happen if the motorist had not taken too much for granted" said Mr. Hodson.

Dangerous Age

Again the speaker quoted figures to show that the dangerous age for drivers was between 25 and 40, because between these ages, 43.9 per cent of the accidents are caused, while only 1.18 per cent is caused by drivers between the ages of 16 to 18 years and 22.2 per cent between the ages of 18 to 24 years. Thirty two per cent of the accidents are caused at street intersections and 36.7 per cent between the street intersections, while 23.9 per cent are caused on the open road, and 23.9 per cent on the highways proving that speed is the dominating factor in accidents.

Mr. Hodson was not in favor of increasing the speed limit and he mocked an order from the Royal Chauffeurs, that must not exceed 40 miles per hour. "All must be controlled or they will find themselves either in the hospital or the morgue", said the speaker. There are only three ways to control the traffic, namely, legislation, punishment and education. He advised against the use of the horn, stating there would be only about one accidents if motorists would behave the horn was out of order. The speaker stated, that the pedestrian had his rights and should at all times be protected, but the car must not belly and the small car must not obstruct" in a good motor to follow. He exhorted his listeners to protect the child, and keep slowly and recklessly dashes about and the motorist should always think "is that me the child that was killed." Ross Silver moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, Chief Kidd told the reporter after the meeting that in 1934 there were only 21 accidents of all kinds in the city and only six of these came under the category of hitting fixed objects.

KNOX SHOT SELF, IS JURY VERDICT

Early Story Said He Was Killed by Auto Against Granary

Drumheller, Alta., May 1 (CP)—A surprising final chapter of the two-hour shooting career of Fred Knox, 45-year-old district farmer, was written today. A coroner's jury here last night found Knox, who shot to death Royal Canadian Mounted Police Corporal Michael Mortiarty, died from a bullet fired from a rifle in his own hands.

The verdict conflicted with reports of Knox's death after he had killed Corporal Mortiarty when the latter went to the farm April 26 to serve a summons. One version was Knox was attacked and shot against a neighbor's granary by Constable Orval Hopkins, while Provincial Police Constable Roy Allen, who accompanied Mortiarty. Allen tried to reach Mortiarty's body while being fired on by Knox.

Gift of Congregation in Memory of Late Mary Ann Cooke

At the St. Marks Church Bishop Lyons dedicated the new font which had given as an expression of thanks from the congregation for the gift of the new church by the late Mary Ann Cooke. The tablet near the font reads: "This Font is erected A.D.O.M. and in honored memory of Mary Ann Cooke by the Sunday School of St. Mark's Church, Easter 1935."

Following the dedication of the font Dr. Lyons assisted by the Rector Canon W/O. Swayne, performed the Holy Communion Sacrament and celebrated Holy Communion. The church was filled to capacity morning and there were a large number of communicants.

SCHOOL BOY WRITES OF EGYPT

Letter Describes Sports And Nature Life at Alexandria

Carrying Flash—Arriving on the last day of the month just in time to bear out April's reputation, a downpour of rain has done thousands of dollars' worth of good to the farms of the county. Farmers were feeling the lack of moisture in the soil not for any present lack but rather with an eye to the future; and the coming of the long-wailed storm solved an unpleasant problem.

There remain only about two more weeks of net-fishing before the season closes. Mr. George Kemp fishing along the north shores of the Bay of Quinte, just west of Trenton has been very fortunate this season. Others have not done quite so well.

Easter Sunday was a red-letter day in the history of the local church. For the first time members of the choir of St. John's Anglican Church were robed during the regular service. Entering the edifice singing the Processional Hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," they proceeded to their places. The congregation was full and there were a number of communicants. The rector, Rev. Arthur Shreiber, chose as the text for his sermon: "He cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth!" and he that was dead came forth," from St. John XI. The Holy Table and the Sanctuary were tastefully decorated with Easter lilies and other sprays of flowers, all placed there in commemoration of some loved one gone before. The Recessional Hymn was "Ye Christ of New Jerusalem."

A student of Peterborough Normal School is spending a week observing and teaching at Youngs' School.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Campbell and family spent as their guests shortly Miss Alice Spitty and girl friend from Hamilton.

Lieut.-Col. Saura, local Canal superintendent, received on Saturday last the long-service medal from the Canadian Government. Col. Saura is well known in local military circles and the ex-soldiers of the community say that the medal is a very handsome one.

A year ago a correspondence was begun between a number of pupils in the local school and several same-age boys in the British Boys' School in Alexandria in Egypt. A recent letter contains so much interesting information about the distant land of the pyramids that a part of it is quoted herewith:

"In answer to your enquiries about Egypt, I can inform you that we never get any snow or ice out here, the climate being too hot. Winter does not really begin until January and it is practically over by March. Rain starts falling in November, but we do not get much of that either. Rainy days do not last longer than a week and they are always followed by a period of bright sunshine. We do not know the meaning of the word cold as known in Europe because the temperature changes very suddenly and I can state that by April summer is in full swing. The weather is really marvellous from April to June. July is very hot and in August, September and October the atmosphere is so terribly damp that we can hardly stand it.

"I have never seen the birds you mention, but my dad tells me that starlings come out during winter; he describes them as being black with silverish spots on their breasts. We also have black-birds, thrush and a large variety of wild ducks. In the summer we have turtle-doves, quails, hoopoes, larks, goat-suckers, jays and beccafices. The birds that stay all the year around are sparrows, sea-gulls, owls, hawks, king-fishers, and snipe.

"I thank you for your willingness to give me any information about Canada, and I shall be much obliged if you will kindly let me have a summary of the ordinary city life as well as the mountain and country life. Are there still any red Indians and cowboys?

"I have not yet played hockey but I know the game, having seen it played at the pictures. I am very keen on football which we play at school twice a week."

Specialized Grocery Service

The most necessary people in the world are those who provide food. Many people are engaged in different phases of this all important function. There are the actual producers, the farmer, dairyman, fisherman and planter. There are the vast number of workers who pack, prepare, ship and transport the great variety of foodstuffs, gathered from the four corners of the earth, that we consume. They, too, perform a work of vital necessity.

Then there are the people who bring this great diversity of products into a convenient place, ready for the housewife to select at her leisure. Here is where the grocer comes in. He is one of the most important men in the community, and we should never forget the invaluable service he performs. This community is served by a number of splendid independent grocery establishments which have been catering to the needs for many years. These stores maintain a type of individual service which the customer cannot help but appreciate. The customers of the independent grocer are his friends, whom he takes a personal pleasure in serving. He has pride in his business, in his premises, and is anxious to maintain the very highest standards in quality in everything he sells, and to hold the good-will of everyone who deals at his store. You will find it a pleasure to deal with the independent grocers in this city. You'll like the courteous, helpful service, the efforts to give you perfect satisfaction. Just remember these points when you do tomorrow's marketing. Some of the best and most dependable grocery establishments who give specialized individual service are listed below.

Cleveland Indians Going Places Providing They Do Not Crack When Eastern Teams Invade

Already Repulse Two Strong Challengers For Leadership

GIANTS WIN

Increase Margin by Defeating Dodgers by 8-3

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Unless they crack up when the eastern teams start their first intersectional invasion, Cleveland Indians appear set to remain at the head of the American League for some time to come.

Despite the absence of Billy Knickerbocker, flashy young shortstop, and weak hitting by some other members of the club, Walter Johnson's team already has repulsed two strong challenges in riding into first place, overcome an early lack of scoring and gained strength as the pitching continued to perform consistently.

In their first three games this season the Indians had to pilfy 41 innings in all for a total of six runs. Then they swung into action at bat and have fallen below the five-run mark only twice in eight starts.

Facing their closest rivals, Chicago White Sox, yesterday in the only game left of the series after rain and cold weather got through the red-men batted out an 11-6 decision to increase their lead to a full game. They started scoring in the first inning, belted Sad Sam Jones to cover in the fifth when the totals reached nine blows and eight runs, and kept right on against young Joe Vance. Willis Hudlin went in for the route for Cleveland, granting eight hits, and having only one bad inning.

Averill Begins To Hit.

To make the prospect brighter, Earl Averill snapped out of his hitting slump with a home run, double and single and Hal Trosky belted his fourth homer.

Cleveland's threat from New York Yankees, a game and a half behind in third place, was lessened when the Yanks failed to survive Washington's ninth inning rally and went down 7-6 to see their winning streak ended at six straight. After coming from behind against Lefty Pettit, the Yanks called upon Lefty Gomez for relief after Vito Tamulis gave a pair of passes in the ninth and the starting southpaw was nicked for a single and double that decided the ball game.

The Red Sox also won out on a ninth inning spurt, scoring twice off Charley Lieber to beat the Athletics 8-6 after coming from behind with pairs of runs in the seventh and eighth. Jimmy Foxx smacked his fifth homer for the A's but let in the last run with a wild throw.

National League.

The Giants finally broke the Brooklyn spell to increase their margin of leadership in the National League with an 8-3 triumph over the Dodgers. Featuring circuit swats by Dick Bartell and Mel Ott in the third when they drove Johnny Babich out with four runs, the Terry-men had an easy time behind Roy Parmelee's fine hurling. Parmelee lamed Johnny Mitchell to Lonnie Frey and Danny Taylor but never was in trouble otherwise.

Dizzy Dean lifted the Cardinals into fourth place in the other National League contest by turning a six-hit, 5-2 triumph over the Reds. He gave only three hits in the first seven frames but eased up after Joe Medwick's four-pip outing had started the Cards off well ahead.

Rain and cold weather kept the other four National League clubs and Detroit and St. Louis in the American idle.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Cliff Bolton, Senators — Rapped Yankee pitching for four straight hits, driving in tying runs in ninth.

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals — Limited Reds to six hits, fanning eight.

Earl Averill, Indians—Led attack on White Sox with homer, double and triple.

Dick Bartell and Mel Ott, Giants — Belted homer and triple each in triumph over Dodgers.

Jimmy Foxx, Athletics—Knocked in three runs against Athletics with home run and single.

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

Recent rains have abruptly halted the spring training of the Stewart-Warners for the past few days, but practice resumed last night with a large turn-out at hand. Incidentally we understand that Harry Blakely who starred for the Nationals back in '36 when they won the provincial championship has been suspected relative to turning out with the local senior club this season. It seems Dr. Blakely is at present residing at home with his parents in Thomasburg and is quite desirous of returning to the diamond. The acquisition of Dr. Blakely would elevate the stocks of the "Radios" to no small degree. We also understand that Vaughan Jack of Madoc will also try out with the local seniors next week. With Jack and Blakely added to the local roster of ballsters, the 1935 edition of senior diamond aspirants will have elevated to a position on a par with the other clubs in the loop.

A mystery that did not necessitate the endeavours of the police was enacted in local baseball circles lately. It seems that Harold Hansen who took up residence in Belleville prior to March 15 completely vanished from the city. Hansen, we were informed, played senior baseball in the T.A.R.A. last season with success and subsequently decided to procure further baseball experience in far away fields. Hansen came to Belleville highly recommended as an infielder and seemed more than satisfied with his lot, but mysteriously shook the dust of the city from his heels on Good Friday, never to return. Naturally the executive of the Stewart-Warners became somewhat alarmed in relationship to his whereabouts and upon checking up with his home address yesterday were surprised to learn that Hansen had returned to Toronto and did not intend to come back to Belleville. Hansen's reply to relative questions was that his mother was seriously ill and demanded his return to the Queen City. The loss of Hansen to the "Radios" will naturally be keenly felt, despite his contention that he was not fast enough for C.O.B.L. company.

The Kiwanis junior league held a hurried meeting last night that resulted in the committee announcing that the league would commence operations on May 6 with a double-header in the morning. The first game will be called promptly at 9.30 a.m. and will see the West Hill meeting the South End while directly following the College Hill kids will tangle with Jack Kidd's East Hill "Aristocrats". Incidentally the remainder of the schedule will be released next week, but the league will definitely get under way on Monday morning. As soon as daylight saving comes into effect, all games will start at 6.00 p.m. Umpires, playing equipment and grounds will be supplied by the Kiwanis Club and the B.A.B.A.

Arrangements to reinforce the wrestling ring at the arena opened today when the officials procured two steel cables to be placed beneath the structure for the purpose of strengthening the ring. New ropes are also being added to the corners to make the ring move solid for Friday night's charity wrestling show. We need to have the ring in excellent condition for such men as Dunlop and Parnell appearing in the main event clash," stated Chairman George Lee today, while he further announced that two of the three bouts would be over the one hour time limit and two falls. Dallas and Pearl will decide their bout with the best two falls out of three over the hour limit, while Dunlop and Parnell will also meet under the same setup, while the curtain-raiser will be a one fall affair over the 30 minute time limit agreement and will bring together two newcomers to a local ring—Frank Slezak and Jim Wilkins. "You can rest assured our bouts will commence promptly as does this week and we believe we have one of the best cards procurable," concluded Mr. Lee today.

KENTUCKY DERBY 1935

At the turn, Churchill Downs

Annual classic of the American racing season, the Kentucky Derby, run this year on May 4, attracts the same enthusiastic gala crowds as does the famed English Derby. The best of American thoroughbreds are named for the Blue Grass race over the Churchill Downs course. Top layout shows general views of the scene on race day. Below, a line-up of the best-favored contenders this year.

Daily Short Story

One Night Stand

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Jack Bartlett cursed the railroad service as he paced up and down the station platform, now looking at his watch, now peering into the distance, in the hope that his actions might hurry the arrival of the train, already long overdue. The train was bringing him success — or failure.

All depended upon the girl who was on that train. She could make him, or she could doom him to failure. He did not know her, did not know what she looked like, or how old she was. He hoped she would be her name. He wanted a girl who was good. He wanted a girl who would go the trails of the years ahead.

Back on the trails of the years went his thoughts, as he paced back and forth, waiting for the arrival of the train. Back they went to that fateful 1928, when he was climbing the ladder of success so quickly as a orchestra leader. Chicago, how popular he was in that city. As a youthful baton wielder he was reaching the heights—He was made....And then came that offer from New York....He packed and went....He left the men who had played with him for five years in Chicago....And in New York he built a new orchestra....He opened his booking in the Triangle Club ...Everything was going nicely ....He featured Netta Lambert.... She was a sensation....Not only personality....and she could dance! He had fallen in love with her....

Steps Tumble

Then came the crash.... Everything went to smash, including the Tuxedo Club....He started the round of booking offices — and jobs were scarce....And those that were open, those with real money, went to play to Whiteman and Whiteman....They couldn't see that he was a star, that he was in the same class with these New York favorites....Netta got a job with vaudeville....He hung around the New York booking offices for one, two, three years....

His money was gone.... Then that day.... He waited for Netta until she was finished with her last turn at the Belasco.... They went to a little restaurant off Broadway.....

"Well, Netta," he said. "I'm going back to Chicago. I can't get anywhere here. Out there I'll be able to pick up small bookings. It means returning to 900 mile jumps for one-night stands but it will mean playing regularly. Come on out with me. We'll work it together, and after we've made some money, we'll get married."

Netta reflected in the smoke of her cigarette.

"No, Jack," she said. "No, I can't go with you. The days of sleeping-car jumps are over for me.

"Not yet, I'm not very far here."

"I'm good for my 30 weeks a year here, and I'll get my break. Then I'll go way up.

Jack Bartlett looked at his watch. Ten more minutes to wait.

So, Netta Lambert refused to go with him. She had said:

"I can't leave this, Jack. This is my life and here is my opportunity. I can't leave until I prove I can reach the top or am forced to give up to me that I can't get any further than I am now. It's all a matter of getting the right break."

And so Jack Bartlett left Netta in New York. He returned to Chicago, made a new band, one consisting of young musicians, and began again the one-night stands. Now as he waited for his new singer he reflected that he did not regret his move. He picked up plenty of small jobs for his band, sometimes and Dailey booked him for a three-week stand in one of the larger middle West cities, and then he received $600 or $700.

Netta Lambert finally got her break. And she went up. He saw her picture frequently in the Chicago newspapers. And when she got a week's booking at the Palace, after which she landed in a Lester Gray show as the feminine lead, he knew that he had lost her. It was then that he stopped following her career.

"I will not go back to that life. I can't stay when I have to jump from city to city, from town to town, when I have to be on the move all the time." Those were her last words to him when they parted.

He could hear the train approaching. He rose from the hard bench and walked out to the platform. He could see the train coming closer. Closer and closer it came. It slowed down and came to a stop. He looked at the people who alighted. First came a middle-aged portly man, then a young man, then a young woman. She must be the girl he was waiting for. He walked towards her. She looked familiar. She turned towards him.

"Netta," he called out, and ran towards her. "What are you doing here?"

She looked up from her smallness into his height. Her bosom moved rapidly. They embraced. And he mutter[illegible] voice close to him from where it was buried in his shoulder. At last she laughed.

"Phooey, silly! Isn't it? I thought it," she said. "Failure is better—with success you love."

Little Benny's Note Book

FRED FEERNOT AND THE SLAVES

Scene, inside the palace.
King. Hello Fred, what's on your mind?
Fred Feernot. Your slaves are about to mutiny, your majesty. They claim slavery is old fashioned and they're not going to keep on starving for it. They're holding secret meetings in public and everything. In fact they're clamoring outside the palace rite now. In fact that's what that noise you're hearing is.
King. O goodness that's fearful. Go on out and tell them I said nobody will be aloud to beat them with anything except cloths made out of soft rubber. And tell them they can sing while they work and tell them they can each have a ice cream cone with their lunch.
Fred Feernot. But your majesty.
King. I have spoken. Be gone.
Fred Feernot. Okay, your majesty.

Act 2

Scene, outside the palace.
Fred Feernot. Silence, stop clamoring. I bare a message from the King. He claims he's a grate believer in freedom and he wants to set you all free. So from now on instead of just keeping up starving all day with nothing on your mind you'll have regular jobs and if you're not fired at a certain time to the very minnit you'll be fired. And you'll be payed a regular salary and you'll have to make it last all week no matter how much you feel like spending it when it rattles in your pockits. And you'll all have to make up your missed education by going to school at nite until you've learn all about thrift and importa and experts and hard parts of speech.
Slaves. No no! We wasn't to stay slaves.

Act 3

Scene, inside the palace.
Fred Feernot. The mutiny is over your majesty.
King. That was a pritty good idea of mine, ending them that messages wasn't it, Fred?
Fred Feernot. It's a nice day your majesty.

The End.

Painful Piles

Go Quick—Prevent Cutting—
No Salves

When sore and painful Piles distress and upset you, and salves give insufficient or only temporary help, what is to avoid operation; isn't it best to at once try HEM-ROID internal remedy for piles?

Dr. F. E. Leonhardi was convinced early in his career that the cause of Piles was internal—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel—the hemorrhoidal veins filled with stagnant blood—and that the right and safe way to get freedom from Piles agony was to remove the cause with an internal medicine. Immediately the doctor set to work to find a remedy. He succeeded and called his prescription HEM-ROID.

Pile sufferers everywhere are benefitting by Dr. Leonhardi's internal treatment so why doubt or delay longer when J. S. McKeown and other good druggists say "Go back for what kind of Piles you have the bottle of HEM-ROID tablets must show you the sure clean way to get rid of your pile misery or money-back."

MYSTERY GIRL STILL AT LARGE

MORE MYSTERY SUSPECTS?

The young lady will gracefully entertain and acknowledge the wise-cracks.

It won't be long now, her time is getting short—the chase is getting faster—she'll be the lucky winner of the clothes!

Interviewed by a representative of this newspaper, Miss Mystery Shopper admitted a strenuous day and many narrow escapes. She was subjected to close scrutiny from the girls in the store, of Dickens & Son, while admiring the dainty pastry, but she escaped capture there and drew her impressions thus:

Among The Pies

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating, we've always heard. But that can apply to cakes and pies and even that delicious raisin bread and long Dickens & Son make. And if Gena was ever a more tempting display for the hungry man—or woman—than that seen daily in the windows of that store, well, I simply have to see it. So entering the two Dickens & Son luncheon specials that I just had to stop here for a little nourishment to sustain me through the rest of the day.

The Trail Weaves Thru

"I mentioned some time back that I had a rather close call after being almost discovered by Mrs. ——— in the Canadian Department Stores, but that was nothing to the hard face I had to put on in the Archibald Store, when a tall young man appeared to recognize me. I met all the hosiery counter looking over some of the excellent bargains Miss Ng came up to me. He had the section of newspaper right in his hand, too. I slid away. He followed. He even followed me into the Lipson Store up the street a short distance. But he seemed to lose heart in the crowd of ladies there. Phewwh! that was the third narrow escape!

The Golden Eyes

How many lipsticks, cosmetics and little gadgets for the dressing table I found at in Dolan The Druggist, Catruan Drug Store, Boyle's Drug Store, Lattimer's Drug Store, Gem's Drug Store, Seldon's Drug Store and McKown's Drug Store, I don't know—there must have been hundreds of items I could have picked up for a song, put in my purse and taken home to keep me happy for a long time. It's the little things like that that are appreciate—and when will the men learn that? Fred Woodley in Dolan's said: Can coding in Lattimer's, certainly gave me a suspicious eye.

Wood Every Woman Wants

"I've hardly mentioned the latest vogue—the wear stones because them, seemed to be so much variety in each one I visited that it left me a little bewildered—I can say that the window displays match the newest beautiful creations. I noted that the Metcalfe store has some really stunning imported manicure—at the French Beauty Parlor and the Wotherspoon's Store have also nothing them-selves in offering attractive values. In Mackaby Ladies' Wear, Model Ladies' Wear and the Georgian Shop, ladies will probably keep you for hours if you enter them and in the Artistic Ladies' Wear, the Wren Ladies' Shop and the Yetta Shoppe will give you that "I must have that" feeling whether you go after with the hand of the house, as he is so often humourously labelled.

Book Worms and Bridge Fiends

I found books, school supplies and almost every known novelty and hundreds of little gifts suitable for holiday prizes at the Nunes Tents and Awning Co. and still I found the Store and the Quinte Book Shop. Judging from the sale of books carried by all four of the stores, little city needs the services of a number of book worms, and judging by the counters of little novelties on other hand even more fiends of the deepest dye. Not all the prizes are for bridge players, however, I was told. Euchre parties have also become quite fashionable lately and these require some prizes, too.

We women it is said ever had so many pair of shoes as she would like to have a pair of shoes for every occasion and an old hat and hat happy. But so with his better half, and if any woman could have her pick of any half dozen pair exhibited in the Bata Shoe Store, Bairn's Shoe House, W. H. Adam's Shoe Store and the Nabor-hood Shoe Store during the afternoon, then not even a run in her stocking on the way home could per-her squarishing. Perfect fitting in trendy stores has become more than a saying now, I also found out when I tried on a pair or two.

There are still some stores left that I haven't visited, but I'll have to tell you of these later.

Cheerio.

Letters to the Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

As regards a letter appearing in your issue of April 30, I shall endeavour to reply to it.

Surely the parents who wrote the letter does not understand the Cadet System, because if this training is allowed to continue it will become more of a militaristic system than it is at present.

The conditions under which Germany and Italy are labouring at this time must be understood before any comments on the Cadet Training in this Province.

I advance the following logic for his kind consideration.

1. Cadet Training tends to militarize youth, (at the present time this is tragic).

2. Cadet Training does not teach any good that cannot be taught in Physical Training.

3. Boys should not be taught that war is glory.

Boys should not be over-disciplined as they are in the Cadet Corps, this leads to an inferiority complex.

When boys (more children in this case) are taught to "drops arms" and wear khaki uniforms they inevitably believe that they are soldiers.

To the Cadet Corps boys give orders, this leads to a feeling of superiority and an explosion will result.

I believe that the anonymous writer is a youth like myself and would hate to be belabored in another war, but may I emphasize the fact that Cadet Training like Fascism leads to war.

The Ontario Legislature Parliament of which I am a member sent a petition to the Department of Education asking that Cadet Training be discontinued in Ontario. These boys are representatives of the Province.

Yours very truly,
Jno. R. Beaud.

Belleville, May 2nd.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:—

I have just read the letter in last night's paper, apparently signed by four "ex-cadet officers" of the Belleville Cadet Corps.

The writer seemed to read the outline, I knew what the signature would contain—the word "officer" or something similar.

This group of officers outline the intrinsic value of this so-called non-military training. Just wish to state at this point that I was a student at the Collegiate for three years, and if I had wished military discipline over and above my regular course, I could easily have secured same through enlistment in the 49th Argyll Light Infantry. When I attended the Collegiate, I knew it was only possible for me to spend a certain period in endeavouring to secure a high school education. (I knew it was not possible for me to spend four or five years just putting in time). Even today, I attribute cadet training as being responsible for not being able to pick up educational information which would have been very beneficial to me today.

As an "ex-cadet", and not an officer, I herewith respond to the four ex-cadet officers' statements.

As being present on inspection day, I can assure you I was, being among the ranks of the cadets five full years ago.

Regarding the statement of how a sloppy group of boys at the start of the training being educated into a smooth moving group, this may be quite true, but each student on inspection day only does this because he knows he has been applied to him on preceding days, and he knows the disagreeable consequences he will suffer if he makes a false move. As far as the training discipline him, that is only for "spit and polish" drills from five, theft, heat, dampness and cowlick.

GALLOWS IS GONE, GRIM MACHINE IS DISMANTLED

Atmosphere at County Gaol Changed After Execution

SCENE AT MIDNIGHT

Grim Shadows Moving on Walls Tell of Court-yard Scene

This morning the gallows on which Harold W. Vermilyea died today was removed. As it contained a large amount of lumber only a portion is to be saved, which could conveniently be used in case of need, so large and sensibly that it can not be properly housed. A good bit of the material will accordingly be used up, said the warden of the jail.

Next week I am going to send the clothing and all his belongings back to Old Orchard, California. This is the request he do. He had a little of money left, but not very much. He had used the money to buy cigars and a little milk at first, and some of the money he used for stamps as he wrote so many letters, whereas the rule is that a prisoner is allowed only one letter a week. He also spent money on his laundry and in telegrams. For what he spent I have a receipt for everything

"The letters he wrote to his son Than and daughter Aurelia yesterday I am mailing."

Scene of Change

There was still activity about the jail early today and there was also the sense of a great change, an official said, as the man who had spent over six months in the jail had become almost part of the routine of the institution.

Yesterday a farewell telegram came from Vermilyea's divorced wife in California, saying that God would forgive him everything as she had forgiven everything. The message seemed to please him as he was busy writing his last messages to his dearest and nearest—his son and daughter in far off California.

Vermilyea ate a good meal at five o'clock last evening of cold chicken, bread, cake, French fried potatoes, jelly, tea and pineapple and tea, and seemed to relish the food.

In the southwest corner of Belleville Cemetery, Vermilyea was laid to rest in a plot by himself. His burial which took place about six-thirty o'clock this morning was attended by some relatives. Assistant Turnkey A. Winters, one of the former guards, E. Wheeler, Major Hunton and Adjutant Martin of the Salvation Army and by Plain-clothes Officer Fred Izard, who was one of the officers who escorted Vermilyea from Ontario, California to Belleville last October to face the charge.

Fantastic Pictures on Walls

Grim gigantic movings high up on the rear wall of Shire Hall from now and then as the shadows swept back and forth out into the black sky, but still marked enough even to outline movements in the tragedy which was being enacted in the execution yard of the county jail a few minutes after midnight told to many hundreds the story of the end of Harold W. Vermilyea, 55-year-old California fruit grower, and native of Hastings County as he was plunged into eternity.

While county officials and police kept secret the time set for the execution, it was known that electricians had been stringing a line into the gallows yard because known and as the lights came on the little inner court where the last act was to be staged it was realized that the event was not far off. From eleven-thirty on crowds began to gurge through the streets. Campbell, Pinnacle, Patterson and Church, the police preventing any delaying. Motors moved in circles about this block where a man was to pay with his life for the death of his mother. The crowds kept moving or stood on fences.

The night was clear though there was a slight haze which dimmed the brightness of the stars which shone over the scene in the open air.

Walls that even in daytime took grim would have worn a much more sinister look if it had not been for the light which was shed from the electric lamps which lighted up the entire small quadrangle formed by the prison walls. It was on these same walls and on the rear wall of the nearby Shire Hall that the fantastic and magnified shadows of the central scene were figured in a sort of impressionistic picture

The Last Scene

It was not long after midnight, that the moments of grim gloomy shadows began to move against the walls revealing to those in the outer circle which was at hand. No loud sound but an unceasing wave of muttering was heard from the hundreds on Church and Campbell streets. A few near the wall of the prison yard heard the low sounds as of the service but nothing could be clearly distinguished. Those near the wall heard a dull clog as when the trap was sprung. That was all. The crowd was finally urged away at 12:25 as traffic officers cleared the streets as the final act of the law had been completed.

Traffic officers moving in and about the street, the court house guarded by city police had kept order and movement of the crowd which some estimates place at half as one thousand persons in the vicinity of the court house.

Abolish Health Grants Plan of Department, Minister Announces

Grant to Belleville Board of Education For Health $116

TAXPAYERS ADVISED

Inflated Idea of Credit Blamed by Health Minister

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—Taxpayers must realize the Ontario government cannot carry on services on borrowed money, Minister of Health A. A. Faulkner said today in announcing discontinuance of the government's municipal grants for school medical inspection and public health nurses for school and community dental services and boards of health. The grant for venereal disease clinics is unchanged.

"We're not going to do for one what we can't do for another and everyone has to be treated the same," said Mr. Faulkner pointing out only a few municipalities received grants for school medical inspection and public health nurses.

In the fiscal year ending October 31, 1934, the grants totalled $76,230. Only 11 cities received grants which were: Brantford, Chatham, Fort William, Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, Niagara Falls, Ottawa, Port Arthur, St. Thomas, Woodstock and Stratford $750 each; Sarnia $600; Toronto $3,562.

32 Towns Suffer

Twenty-eight towns will also be without the grants. In the fiscal year ending October 31, they received $630 each for Blind River, Burlington, Cornwall, Elmira, Georgetown, Haileybury, Kenora, Lindsay, Midland, New Toronto, Oakville, Paris, Port Colborne, Renfrew, Simcoe, St. Mary's Strathroy, Wallaceburg and Weston.

Other grants for venereal disease were: Carpenter $86; Cobalt $533; Copper Cliff $176; Orillia $750; Penetanguishene $500; Sturgeon Falls $466; Timmins $600.

The village of Ayr received $366 and the villages of Forest Mill and Hensall, $600 each.

Six townships will feel the effects of discontinuance, the grants Amounts obtained in the fiscal year ending last October were: East York $1,000; North York $600; Stamford $322; Teck $700; Tecumseh and Sandwich $1,000.

School Grants

Grants to municipalities for school and community dental service amounted to $18,000.99 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934. Of this total, Board of Education and Boards of Health received as follows: Boards of Health $4,072.36.

Major portion of the school board grants were allotted as follows: Belleville $116; Brantford $386; East Windsor $400; Peterborough $1067; Port Arthur $157; St. Catharines $1417; Thorold $181; Tottenham $579; York Township $3,562.

Among the larger recipients of school board grants were: Hamilton $1500; Orillia $288; St. Thomas $1202; Stratford $107; Toronto $1,250.

"People who pay taxes have to get together and realize the government cannot carry on services on borrowed money," Minister Faulkner, "and when they're in a position to assume the responsibility of carrying these services, which they aren't at the present time the government will be prepared to cooperate with them."

"Our idea is to get the public to realize the situation in which the government is placed," added the Minister. "They have been carrying on here for years on the inflated idea of their credit."

Discussing Ontario's hospital situation, Dr. Faulkner said a survey conducted by his Department during 1934 showed 1,000 beds available in hospital for an average of eight days. Patients in hospital for more than 12 days. "Malingering?" he was asked.

"Yes, you might as well call it that—chiselling," he replied.

RAIN OF BULLETS ALMOST BEHEADS DRIVER OF BOAT

R.C.M.P. Catch up With Alleged Rum-Running Craft

SIGNAL TO STOP

Other Occupant of Boat is Uninjured But Held

Lunenburg, N.S., May 3 (CP) — Machine gun fire from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police cutter Acadian instantly killed William Tanner, 30, aboard his allegedly rum-running motorboat early today off Crow Island, near Lunenburg Bay.

Tanner, at the wheel in the pilot house, was almost decapitated by the rain of bullets. Allen Mason, only other person on the powerful motorboat, escaped injury and is under arrest here. The motorboat's eastern points and Tanner was a native of Germany, both near Lunenburg.

The fatal chase began before dawn in waters made choppy by a brisk breeze. In command of Captain J. C. Hallet, the Acadian was near Cross Island at first sight of the motorboat. Allegedly failing to heed a challenging signal shot, Mason and Tanner hoisted on their way. A second burst of fire followed without effect, but at the third Tanner collapsed.

Boat is Confiscated

With his body still aboard, the motorboat was taken in town and tied up at the government wharf here. It was stated the inquest would be held in the hoodlumed pilot house.

Mason, leaving his wife and five children, was well known along the Lunenburg waterfront, and word of the fatality spread quickly after the Acadian brought in the 50-foot launch. A small crowd soon congregated around the craft.

Police maintained a strict watch over Mason and no one else was permitted to approach him.

The motorboat will be held this afternoon.

Ostensibly a fishing boat, the seized craft had been purchased by Tanner and Mason.

Newspapers Favorable To Air Force Increases As Stated by Premier

Britain Will Have Difficulty in Reaching German Parity

NOTE OF VIGOR

Express Criticizes The Government For Attitude

London, May 3—(CP)—Most of today's newspapers received favorably the speech by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald announcing further increases in British air force construction. Even the opposition organs recognized the necessity of having parity in the air with Germany.

"But whatever efforts in that direction are now made," the Daily Telegraph said, "Great Britain will have difficulty in reaching parity in any short time. Our wish is still to limit armaments by agreement, but the basis of that policy are obviously running out."

The morning Post declared "in Mr. MacDonald's reference to air defence, the Prime Minister struck a note of vigor which presents a welcome contrast to the recent inactivity of the government. A further satisfactory aspect of his statement was his renewed insistence on solidarity with France and Italy for the fortification of peace. How we could have wished that he had abstained from any more appeals to Germany to come in.

"What is the use of adopting an attitude of sweet reasonableness toward a country which every week flaunts under our noses the treaties in our face and scuttle daily in the night of its war equipments?"

The Daily Express commented: Mr. MacDonald's speech as meaning Britain henceforth will put permit Germany to have a stronger force of military aviation than herself.

But it asserted Prime Minister MacDonald "let the Nazis build as many ships as they like and lay down the keels of a navy," and demanded "no more Munichs!" The paper said the world's hope for peace rests on understanding between Great Britain and the United States.

CONCRETE WORK AT DOCK COMPLETED

Concrete work on the extension at the government dock has been completed. Wooden forms have been taken away and the cement allowed to dry. The new dock comes up flush with the cement roadway and has to the east. A more imposing aspect is given to the old government dock by its present cement. Filling in on the northern side is all that remains to complete the project.

Former Belleville Man Honored As Hymn for Jubilee is Sung

George Allen Kingston Writes Beautiful Hymn

The following hymn written by George Allen Kingston in honour of Their Majesties coming Silver Jubilee celebration has been received with much approval. Artists will have the opportunity of reviewing it. It has been sung following the visit of the Prince International Anthem in response to the request that the King and many thousands by loyal organizations in Toronto during the past two weeks, and it will be sung in many churches throughout the Province next Sunday as one of the regular service hymns in connection with the Jubilee celebration.

Archbishop Owen, Anglican Archbishop of Toronto and Primate of all Canada in endorsing the use of the hymn expressed his approval in a letter to Mr. Kingston under date of April 26th as follows:

"I have carefully read the copy of your Jubilee hymn and I write to tell you that I consider it excellent and most appropriate for singing in churches at this time. I gladly endorse it for those Clergy of the Diocese of Toronto who wish to arrange to have it sung in connection with the celebration of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee."

The author of this hymn will be well remembered in Belleville. He came here from his old farm home in Rawdon to attend High School some 50 or more years ago. A few years later he came again to Belleville as a law student and spent two years in the late Judge Gluss office. Then he moved to Toronto and a few years later came back and took away with him as his wife one of our Belleville girls, Miss Beasie Conger.

He was appointed to the Workmen Compensation Board when it was first organized back in 1914 and is now the only surviving member of the original Board. He has long been very active in Masonry and is a Past Grand Lodge officer. As a writer and pastime he has developed the art of hymn writing and other verse writing with considerable credit to himself, and his group of devotional hymns are being used in many churches throughout the province. This latest effort his Jubilee hymn will we feel sure be received with very general favour.

JUBILEE, HYMN

To be sung following the first verse of

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

God bless our Sovereign Lord,
As we with one accord
Our prbuke bring;
Almighty King of Kings,
Oeath Thy protecting wings,
Guard, we pray.
Nation sings
"God save the King"

Our Gracious Queen, may she Loved by her people be,
God save the Queen!
With loyal hearts aflame,
Let us with glad acclaim
Sing praises to her name,
God bless our Queen.

Thus on their Jubilee,
Joined one in heart, may we
All, rich and poor,
Sing praise to God above,
And for our Sovereign prove,
Strong in an Empire's love,
Their Throne secure.
—George Allen Kingston.

JAIL, NOT FINES IN FUTURE CASES

Magistrate Butler Issues Warning to Intoxicated Drivers

"This driving of motor cars while intoxicated has to be stopped. It can no longer be tolerated if we have to impose the maximum sentence," stated His Worship Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., during today's local police court when charges' number of L.C.A. and H.T.A. cases were speedily disposed of.

Common drunks, speeders and two youths charged with joy riding all appeared before His Worship in procession-like movement, the proceedings being terminated as quickly as possible. Still another local youth stepped into the witness box and paid ten dollars with court costs for driving his automobile with four passengers in the front seat. Another pladed guilty to driving while intoxicated, he being the driver of a motor car that collided with an automobile in front of the City Hall on Wednesday night. This young man was given the maximum sentence under the circumstances, jail.

"In the future there will be no fines in such cases, the jail sentence will be meted out," stated His Worship as he struck a note of warning to automobilists as well as drivers and also careless ones. There will be no police court on Monday because of the King's Jubilee. It was learned.

FIVE PRISONERS GAIN BY AMNESTY

Doors of Cells Open For Two Men at County Court House Today

Five inmates at the Hastings County Jail were affected by the King's Jubilee clemency proclamation. Gerge Gordon announced today. Two of them were allowed their liberty this morning upon reception of word from Toronto, the remaining three having their sentences materially reduced.

Early today Gaol Governor French was in receipt of a telegram from Toronto following the King's proclamation of amnesty given inmates of prisons deserving of such consideration and careful check-up it was found that five were effected locally. "Of the two liberated today one received 27 days of his sentence while the other received 28 days. After checking the prisoners sentences he finds that another will be allowed his freedom on May 8, he having thirty days taken off his time, another to go out on the 10th will receive 40 days off, as will another who will be liberated on the 24th. of this month," said the gaoler.

According to information received the proclamation sent out from Ottawa in relation to amnesty for prisoners under the Criminal Code does not apply here to any of the inmates of the county jail, there being no prisoners confined there for a period of six months definite. "We have three inmates who were convicted under the Criminal Code but they only received determinate sentences of three months, thus eliminating them from considerations. Of course the information of release from Toronto only covers I. C.A. cases" added Mr. French.

The proclamation states that ten days per month be stricken from the sentence plus a further ten days for good conduct, if deemed advisable. Hundreds of inmates of penitentiaries, jails and other places of confinement will be released today in connection with the King's Jubilee under the amnesty.

Act of Grace Elsewhere

Guelph, Ont., May 2 (CP)—The silver jubilee amnesty of clemency granted as an act of grace to prisoners throughout Canada, resulted in the release today of 56 prisoners at the Ontario Reformatory. At the same time four prisoners were released from the county jail here.

Including six paroled men, and one on ticket of leave, the population of the Guelph institution dropped today from 589 to 533.

Montreal, May 3 (CP)—Prison gates swung open today for 65 men at Montreal jail, released from custody in the partial amnesty in connection with the celebration of King George's Silver Jubilee. At St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary 70 convicts will be released.

Brockville, Ont., May 3 (CP) — Population of the Leeds and Grenville Counties jail standing only at five, was reduced by two today thru operation of the King's jubilee amnesty.

It was impossible to learn the identity of the men as only a few minutes elapsed between the time the men left the institution and when they boarded the trains, some went east to Montreal and others to Toronto.

ROYAL AIR FORCE WILL BE EXPANDED SAYS MACDONALD

Britain Will Meet Menace of Rearmed Germany

RUMOR IS DENIED

British Premier Still Holds Out Hope For Europe

By GEORGE HAMSLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 2—(CP Cable)—Great Britain will immediately meet the menace of a rearmed Germany, Premier Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons this afternoon the government has already taken steps to accelerate the expansion of the Royal Air Force.

Prime Minister MacDonald faced a house packed to the doors—conscious with the gravity of the occasion. Miss Margaret Bondfield unbroken by any interruption save an occasional cheer.

From the dominions his listeners included Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, Status Premier of Australia, Sir James Parr of New Zealand, J. W. Dulanty of Ireland, Sir Basil Blackett, Premier G. M. Huggins of Soulehrn Rhodesia.

MacDonald's Denial

The Prime Minister denied reported statements that Government officials England turned against Germany because of Nazi actions, declaring: "The policy pursued by the representatives of this government at Stresa was to maintain the possibility of co-operation with Germany.

"It is well to know that Herr Hitler has said that Germany will sign nothing which he felt could not be carried out, yet if he gave an undertaking, he would never break it. Be it also noted that Herr Hitler publicly declared the determination of the German government to accept both the spirit and the letter of the Locarno Pact."

(The Locarno Pact by Germany, France, Belgium and Great Britain to preserve the Franco-German border inviolate.)

Outlook in Europe

While Mr. MacDonald painted the European picture in somber colors he still held out hopes. He firmly declared Great Britain's intention not to be outclassed in the air, yet he appealed to Germany to join in an international agreement before it was too late.

"The destructive possibilities of aerial warfare were appalling, he said. Britain would not encourage competition in air forces unless she was forced to do so. The value of air forces was relative.

Mr. MacDonald pressed again that the policy of the British government was a policy of collective security—a collective system which contemplated the inclusion of Germany. Aggressive military alliances formed no part of British policy.

SAKADLISTAS RIOT AGAINST REGIME

At Least 49 Killed And Many Injured in Outbreak

Manila, May 3 (AP)—Bloody outbreaks and disorders in a sudden uprising against the projected new Philippine Commonwealth left a trail of at least 49 dead today in two provinces.

At least 47 were dead in a clash between constabulary and the extremists at Cabuyao in Laguna Province, southeast of here. .

The Sakadistas, who rioted, favor immediate independence for the Philippines and oppose the leadership of Senate President Manuel Quezon. Under the Independence Act of the United States Congress the Philippines must go through a 10-year transitional period before obtaining freedom. A plebiscite for ratification of the Commonwealth Constitution will be held May 14.

Order was restored at Cabuyao late today. The constabulary reported, only after bitter fighting in which 47 were killed and 40 more wounded.

Reports showed the Sakadistas, who officials charge have communistic leanings, actually controlled three towns for short periods during the night. These were Cabuyao and Santa Rosa and San Idlefonso.

Constabulary officials declared none of the Sakadista rank and file recently contributed $1.50 each to representatives the money could be used to obtain guns from Japan. The officers said the Sakadistas had been led to believe this sum would be sufficient to "rent" the fire arms

Japanese Consul General Atsuhi Kimura quickly denied reports the Sakadal movement was Japanese backed saying there were no grounds to support such an assertion."

A BARBER WHO HAD RHEUMATISM

Tells How He Carried On

A barber who had been "a martyr to rheumatism" writes:—

"I have been a martyr to rheumatism for some ten years. For five years I was so affected that it was with the greatest difficulty I was able to carry on my business. I may say I am a barber by trade. After having used Truxchen for cies, I was finally advised to try "Kruschen. I am pleased to say that after having used Kruschen for some twelve months, I am now free from aches and pains than I have been for some ten years. In fact, I consider I am rid of rheumatism, thanks to Kruschen Salts."—W. M.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are the most effectual solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swiftly dull the sharp edges of the painful crystals, then convert them into a harmless solution. Other ingredients of these Salts have a stimulating effect upon the kidneys, and assist them to expel the dissolved uraric needles through the natural channels.

THIS MAY DAY

May Day passed off without many disturbances. The English - speaking countries this occasion is not dreaded for free speech offers a grand opportunity for elimination of radical agitation. Suppression is one of the causes of a great deal of unrest and under the British rule the freedom which is given for free-voicing of arguments quite eradicates almost completely the possibility of revolutionary talk because of suppression of opportunity to present views. But occasionally there is the agitator who is bitter and unjust, who is not even held back from reviling by the freedom he has and that man justly finds his opportunity taken from him. And the public and the other critics of things as they are, believe he is justly treated.

The glory of British institutions is that they allow this freedom and prevent any anarchist tendency.

There was more than ordinary calm on Wednesday, the day which was usually featured by opponents of institutions with riots and so forth. Whether it means that in Europe outside of Britain and a few other countries the power of the dictator is so great that the usual difficulties of May Day were rendered impossible of development or not remains to be seen or was it because international uneasiness has covered the entire stage so that the national agitators forget their woe-telling in the excitement of international politics? Or it may be because the world is growing weary of agitation and words and ready-made solutions, which are too easily made, and which take no account of the fact that remedies like institutions are of slow growth.

Whatever the cause, the day was more quietly celebrated.

EXIT THE HITCH-HIKER

Pennsylvania is making a determined effort to discourage the hitch-hiker with the promise and threat that "thumbing" will land the offender in jail henceforth if he cannot pay his fine.

Why the hitch-hiker should get a five or ten dollar ride for nothing when he can pay for it, is the problem which the authorities of Harrisburg, Pa., have said will be solved. They claim the hitch-hiker is worse than a whining pan-handler. They say the pan-handler is a down-and-outer while the hitch-hiker is only trying to cheat the motorcar salesman, the garage bills, the railways and the motor bus lines. The hitch-hiker is conscienceless in their view.

Most hitch-hikers would not want to be called no better than vagrants and bums but that is what it is going to mean in Pennsylvania.

The tide is turning against this parasite class.

The hitch-hiker is a potential cause of accidents. The practice of taking in and discharging the hitch-hiker may easily lead to accidents.

It will be a good day when universally the law makes it possible to exile the hitch-hiker for good.

COMMUNIST LEADER PROPHESIES

Harry Pollitt is the leader of the British Communists and he has been assuming the role of prophet. "Ten years from now," he told a correspondent of the Toronto Star, "Britain will have gone Communist."

Is this a wild statement based on optimistic hope or is it a prediction that bears some relation to reality? Mr. Pollitt points out that eight million Britons today depend upon the dole for a living and that four million others receive wages so low that they might as well be on the dole. "Starvation," said Mr. Pollitt, "is making Communism in this country inevitable; it needs only a war to precipitate it."

Certain it is that present social conditions seem to be designed to breed revolutionary yearnings. Underneath the outward calm and patience of millions of British families there must be some stirrings of revolt against the artificial privation that is being fastened ever more tightly upon them. Will it lead to Communism?

To most outsiders, knowing the traditional steadiness of the British people such a reversion will still seem improbable, despite the apparent favorable circumstances for fostering revolution. But it is not altogether a question of the drift of mass feeling. The truth seems to be that if there is to be a profound change in Britain within the next decade, the holders of the purse strings will see that it is in the direction of Fascism, disguised by some other fancy term.

Communism in other countries outside of Russia is a idle dream, not because the makings of a revolutionary change are not resident in the popular will, but because the controllers of the national and international credit power have decided so. Communism in th non-Russian world was doomed when Mussolini marched on Rome in 1922. Its doom was doubly sealed with the failure of the British general strike in 1926.—Ottawa Citizen.

BELLEVILLE'S PLAN DEVELOPS

The Overseas Trade Department of the United Kingdom apparently is prepared to give attention to the two-way trade plan of the Belleville Trade Group as soon as details are available. Captain Arthur Evans, M.P. for Cardiff South, introduced the question in the House of Commons recently by asking the Secretary to the Department if the reciprocal trade proposal had received cognizance, and if the Department was in touch with interested parties and endeavoring to facilitate mutually advantageous arrangements. Colonel Colville, the Secretary, stated that he was aware of the movement and commented that "if any practical scheme were submitted for conducting by barter a considerable volume of trade which could not be financed by more normal methods, I should be glad to consider whether there are any means by which it could properly be facilitated."

This, it may be surmised, was by way of introduction of the plan since submitted for consideration of the Dominions Secretary, the Canadian Prime Minister, and the Leader of the Opposition. Both of the latter have acknowledged its receipt, Mr. King stating that he proposed having it studied by a committee.

Although no definite plan drawn up at Belleville is called a barter plan, this, it is stated, is only a general term. The intention is to carry on business through the usual channels, financed in the customary way by banks. It is a barter proposal in the sense that a fixed volume of trade is suggested as the aim, amounting to $25,000,000 in value each way annually for a fifteen-year period.

The encouraging point is that two energetic organizations, one in Canada and the other in Wales, are engaged in promoting an undertaking which is as practical as trade can be. Yearly purchase of $25,000,000 worth of Welsh coal by Canadian consumers is by no means an extraordinary thought. Equivalent consumption in the Welsh coal areas of products from Canadian farms, exclusive of grain, is equally practical. Both classes of commodities are needed where it is proposed to place them. By carrying out a plan such as this the years are the habit will be formed, and will be founded on a sound basis, "buying from those who buy from us."

Canada and the United Kingdom are both desirous of extending mutual trade. If the presently sponsored plan is inaugurated it will be the commencement of a larger scheme. The authorities can hardly overlook its possibilities.—Toronto Globe.

ACCIDENT RATE RISES

March, with 31 deaths reported, was the eleventh consecutive month in which fatalities from motor vehicle accidents have shown an increase over totals for the corresponding months of the previous year. During these eleven months, there were 522 persons fatally injured as compared with 477 in the corresponding period, or a percentage increase of 44.1.

March accidents numbered 612, as compared with 1,004 in March, 1934; and resulted in 31 death, injury to 571 persons and a property damage loss of $53,870. There were 9 more persons killed and 100 more persons non-fatally injured than during last March, and the property damage loss increased by $10,120.

The totals for the first three months of 1935, and the percentage increase from the totals for the same quarter of 1934 were: accidents reported, 1693 (3.6% Inc.); number of persons fatally injured, 88 (49.4% Inc.); number of persons non-fatally injured, 1412 (6.9% Inc.); and the amount of property damage reported, $158,608 (13.5% Inc.).

During the first quarter, the greatest advances were found in the number of accidents in towns, and on county and township roads. The number of accidents in cities and on the King's highways showed very slight advances from 1934.

The "collision with bicycle" type of accident accounted for the greatest relative increase during the three months.

There were 40 persons fatally injured in the "collision with pedestrian" class of accident as compared with a total of 29 during the first three months of 1934. Collisions with railroad trains resulted in 15 deaths (of which ten occurred in one accident) or an increase of 13; and collisions with bicycles caused 7 deaths or 5 more than in the corresponding period of last year. The number of fatalities from collisions with other motor vehicles, with horse-drawn vehicles, and from non-collision accidents was, in each case, slightly less than last year.

Wind swells the canvas, great poles sway

MAKING RACKETS SAFE FOR RACKETEERS but favorite indoor and outdoor amusement for the "Down Trail" of the underworld these days. One of the biggest and best "rackets" worked on Uncle Sam recently was by the "Diamond Racket". Rich folks in hotels, or at their homes are robbed of jewelry running up into thousands of dollars. The police haven't been asleep and occasionally a dapper individual appears posing as a private detective and promises to get the gems back, but at a stiff price. He gets the job and the gems return, he gets a handsome reward and the mob moves on to the next victim. Police are now investigating the methods of this surge recovery sleuth, and have a more than hazy idea that he is not far away when the robberies are planned and never out of sight of the jewels until their rightful owners get him. One of the biggest of the jobs involved was the theft of a $700,000 pearl necklace from the heiress of the Woolworth millions. One of the first to be grilled will be Harry Sitamore, society Raffles, who stole more than fifteen million dollars' worth of gems from Manhattan society leaders. Sitamore is now doing a forty-year stretch on a Florida chain gang for the $80,000 gem robbery of Grace Moore, the opera singer. The plan of stealing the jewels and then returning them for a reward, with prosecution banned, is an improvement upon disposing of them through a "fence" for a small part of their value, and risking prosecution and a long sojourn in "stir". Consequently the investigation of one Noel Scaffa, who always got his jewelry, should produce much of general interest.

GREEK CASTLE FOUND ON MOUNT

Discovery Made on Site of Temptation of Christ in Wilderness

Jericho, Palestine, May 3 (CP-Palcor Agency)—Remains of a Greek Castle has been found on the mountain of Jebel Quarantal above Jericho on the site of the Temptation of Christ during the 40 days in the wilderness, Dr. R. L. Bohrenh, Professor of Archaeology at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, reported the discovery today.

The scene is notable for the tragic event in Maccabean history when, in 135 B.C. Simon MacCabaeus was murdered by his son-in-law, Ptolemy, whom he came to visit, as reported in the first book of MacCabees, in the Apocrypha.

At the summit of Jebel Quarantal, famed during the crusades as Quarants, remains of Greek civilization were recently discovered by Dr. Sukenik shown the Greek Monastery very near the top of the mountain.

A number of stones have been found, including Ionic capitals, columns and drums and also the remains of a frieze and an entablature.

NEW CURE FOUND FOR SEASICKNESS

Raise Acidity by Holding Bag Over The Nose

Philadelphia May 3 (AP)—If you get car-sick, buy a bag of peanuts, munch the nuts away, and hold the bag over your nose while you breathe. It's a cure, announced today at the American College of Physicians meetings.

Try it also on seasickness and plane sickness. Any kind of paper bag will do, and it should cure these as well as car sickness under a theory of these ills described today.

The treatment was found during a study of "hyperventilation" of the human system described by Dr. William C. Kerr of San Francisco. Hyperventilation shows itself in the taking of big breaths and the familiar long sighs that follow. They are the body's way of regaining its alkalinity-acidity balance.

In studying the ills due to this balance Dr. Kerr found too much alkalinity may cause convulsion like those of tetnay, and other troubles include the thin game cycle as the varying forms of seasickness. The remedy for them would be an increase in acidity. This he obtained for car sickness sufferers by increasing their breathing of carbon-dioxide. As carbon-dioxide is a natural product of the human breath, holding a paper bag over the nose effectively raised the carbon-dioxide, and acidity.

LUCKIN'S

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

Her Most Excellent Majesty, Queen Mary

IT has fallen the people of the British Empire about twenty-five years to know their Queen. In part, this is due to the natural reserve of her most excellent majesty.

In early childhood, the lovely Princess May, brought up in a home where the hand gloved in velvet dispensed an iron rule, was always a shy girl. This shyness, or life as Duchess of York and reserve remained with her through Princess of Wales. When she became Queen, the British people knew little of her beyond the factual details of her life and training. They did not know Queen Mary, the woman.

Back of this reserve, which often gives the impression of austerity and an over-abundance of dignity, there lies a very human person — one who is sensitive enough to understand things from both sides; and who can remain human and still be conscious of her position.

Queen Mary has always felt that maternity was woman's highest achievement and the lack of motherring six children was one that she did not take lightly, but sacrificed much in order to see that they were given the best of training. As a result, her four famous sons and the Countess of Harewood, her daughter, worshipped their mother, sometimes stern though she may have been.

It has oft been chronicled that the Queen has done more for the British people than any woman in the Empire. Charitable to an extreme, yet ever desirous of remaining in the background, there are hundreds of organizations and individuals who receive donations from a source never made known even to them.

Only now, as the Queen grows old graciously and gracefully (she will be 68 this month), is the gap between the Queen and the people being bridged. To those who did not understand, her reserve and dignity, always in evidence, was misconstrued as coldness. Nothing could be farther from the truth; down through the years her high ideals and principles have been retained and gradually made, known as an example to be followed.

What Queen Victoria accomplished by power of personality; what Queen Alexandra did through the sympathy she felt and the sympathy she engendered in others, Queen Mary has probably doubly done, not by personality or sympathy, but by clinging to and pursuing an ideal—the ideal being human, of spreading human kindness and charity where it would do the most good.

Queen is more than title to Mary.

Jubilee Highlights

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 3 (CP Cable) — "I have said before and I repeat here that among the men I have known some of the best have been Kings," General Jan Smuts, South Africa's distinguished soldier and statesman, wrote in today's Spectator.

"You may go far among Presidents and Dictators to find human like them."

He refers to encounters with King Victor of Italy and the late King Albert of the Belgians, and then, referring to King George, adds: "One never will find King, has a sense of position—pose or pomp. The centre of the mightiest and most successful group that ever existed in history, he himself is singularly lucid, and that simple self is composed of sheer humanness, giving him a tact and sympathy and intuitive understanding of others which are real sources of strength."

Twelve seats in St. Paul's Cathedral for the great Jubilee service today have been reserved for wounded soldiers, representative of large mass of maimed humanity throughout the Empire. This pathetic phalanx will comprise three combinedcond officers and eight other ranks, with one army nurse. In addition 300 other wounded have seats in a special stand outside.

The City of London's Jubilee gift to the King is a silver-gilt dessert service made in 1745 to the order of George I. The Jockey Club is presenting to the King a picture of his stallion, Limelight, painted by Lynwood Palmer, which will be in addition to the painting by Palmer of Scottie, who won the Stiller yfields, the One Thousand Guineas, for his Majesty in 1928.

At the request of the police the broadcasting authorities have abandoned a proposal to relay light music to entertain the huge crowds Monday while they wait for the Royal procession to pass. The reason is that many military bands will be playing along the route.

Nearly 750,000 school children in London today received a message from the King as a souvenir presented by the London County Council. It says:

"You are heirs of a great past, but the future is yours, and it is your high responsibility. Each of you must try to be a good citizen in a good city. To this end you must make the best of all your powers. Strive to grow in strength, in knowledge and grace. If you persist bravely in this endeavor you will work worthily for your family, your city, our country and for mankind. So to live, in whatever sphere, must be noble and may be great. My confident trust is in you. — George, R.I."

MCKIM'S DIRECTORY IS ISSUED FOR 1935

Montreal, May 3—The 1935 McKim's Directory of Canadian Publications, just off the press, lists 1,400 publications in the present business conditions, showing an increase of 62 new publications as against an increase of only 30 in the previous year. Failures in the publication field decreased proportionately.

This 1935 edition of the directory is the twenty eighth, the series having begun several years after the founding of the A. McKim Limited, advertising agency, in 1909.

Recognized as an authentic gazetteer of advertising media throughout Canada, the directory gives exhaustive information about newspapers, magazines, trade papers and miscellaneous publications. Provinces, cities and towns where publications operate are all listed, together with population, industries and outstanding characteristics of market areas.

Somewhat larger than its predecessors, this edition will replace last year's directory on the desks of manufacturers, publishers and all firms dealing in advertising in Canada. Enquiries concerning the publication should be addressed to any one of the six McKim advertising Agency offices at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Halifax or London, England.

CADET TRAINING

Belleville, May 2nd.

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer, Belleville.

Dear Sir:

I would like to reply to the letter in your paper of April 29th above the signature of "Ex-Cadet Officer," and say that maybe he will yet hear an argument that will hold water against cadet training. Did this man ever hear of mothers (and fathers) who do object to this military training especially when it comes to guns and uniforms—in these days when many groups of women are trying to instill into youth the ideals of "Peace" as against the greed of war. Ex-Cadet Officer, and advice that objectors to this training should attend a cadet inspection. To this I say—the more we see, the less we like it—potential cannon fodder.

Granted that boys in general do need "smartening up"—by all means, but there are many other activities which will accomplish this

Yours truly,

Mother of at least one grown boy, who managed to grow to over 6 feet and well disciplined, without cadet training.

EXCHANGE OF SPIES TAKES PLACE QUIETLY

Berlin, May 3 (AP)—Baron Sosnowski, Polish spy, whose machinations resulted in the beheading of two women of noble birth with whom he was associated, has been exchanged for Germany's beautiful young espionage agent, Theodora Ogurek, it was learned today.

The exchange was understood to have taken place nine days ago but the movements of the couple have been enveloped in greatest secrecy because of fear for their safety.

To the 30-year-old peasant girl, the exchange meant reunion with her, husband, Ernst Drager, whom she has not seen since their prison marriage the night before she went on trial in Warsaw.

For Sosnowski, release meant a period of hiding even from his friends and relatives. Even Sosnowski's parents do not know of his whereabouts but it was learned he is not far from Warsaw biding his time until it may again appear safe for him to appear in public.

Scene from "The Good Fairy" co-starring Margaret Sullivan and Herbert Marshall with Frank Morgan in support, now showing at the Capitol.

officiated at the service which was attended by immediate relatives only.

Ferns and flowers were effectively used to decorate the room.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, was becomingly attired in a navy silk crepe suit, with shell pink lace blouse, and navy kiss accessories. Her chic hat was of navy straw with pink trimmings. She wore a corsage of carnations and ferns.

Miss Marie Parks, only sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and wore a navy taffeta ensemble costume with hat of the same material.

The groomsman was Mr. Frederick Sills. The hymn, "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" was sung during the service.

The gift from the groom to the bride was a white gold brooch, and to the bridesmaid a similar present. The best man received a silver cigarette case.

A number of friends assembled in the village to witness the popular couple motor through and to shower them with confetti.

Following the simple dignified service the party went to the bride's home where the wedding breakfast was served. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Parks left on a motor trip for Montreal and other eastern points. On their return they will reside at Latta.

The bride's travelling costume was of navy and grey tweed with navy accessories.

While the general tone softened moderately under profit-taking in the late trading, nickel and smelters were leaders in the action on the up side and both retained the bulk of their advances. Golds had plenty of set spots while metals also were well on top.

A general tone of firm and even strength in spots prevailed in the industrial share market today with industrial share market today with trading fairly heavy in the metals, oils and some of the beverages.

International Nickel, active in volumes, gained 3-4 to 27 7-8 and Consolidated Smelters advanced 1-4 to 16½. These issues had the support of a come-back in the world quotations for bar silver. Advances in the golds ranged from a few cents to twenty cents with volume building to 1½ million and Base Metals were firm to strong with a few sort spots and the Base Metals held steadily in quiet, slow trading.

The silver stock swung into a general upward movement on heavy trading today, cheered by the recovery of bullion values to the 45c per silver price. Bear was the volume leader on the list, closing at 6 cents to 6c. According to street gossip a considerable short interest has been trapped in the rise. Eldorado advanced 20 cents to 2.65, also on good volume and smaller gains were made by Castle, Premier and Nipissing.

The golds were slow with definite weakness in Braloma and Little Long Lac. Both sold at new lows for the year, the former at 6.45 and the latter at 4.86, and both erased half their losses in the early afternoon.

Miss Mystery Shopper Caught By Fourteen Year Old Girl

Miss Edna Caverly Wins Ten Dollar Award For Sleuthing

NARROW ESCAPES

"It's a long lane that has no turning and a long, stern chase with the capture at the end of it.

Captured!

What?

Miss Mystery Shopper.

The chase began when Miss Edna has been dangling ten dollars in the face of hundreds of shoppers and passers-by people with whom she came in contact during her self-appointed meanderings about the city during the past few days in the interests of Belleville Better Days, sponsored by the officers of the Retail Merchants' Association.

The capturer of Miss Mystery Shopper was MISS EDNA CAVERLY 303 Bleecker Ave., Gtr., a young lady fourteen years of age, who was sharp enough to appreciate the dignities of the mystery lady and win the ten dollar reward. Miss Caverly carried a clipping of the advertisement of Miss's Marketeria, which appeared in the newspaper Monday.

The identification was made in the store of McIntosh Bros.

Herewith is presented a photograph of Miss Mystery Shopper taken just before she started out on her adventures.

Among the many close calls the mystery lady remembers with a thrill is one at the store of Dickens & Son—the gentleman who left his groceries on the counter will remember the occasion. He was reminded of his oversight by Mr. Dickens, but he sure was hot on the trail, only his head seemed to fall him at the crucial moment.

Bill McIntosh also gave Miss Mystery Shopper a bad few minutes. Bill was very insistent on showing some new goods, but seemed to take a deeper interest in this particular shopper than ordinary circumstances would seem to warrant—but Bill failed to come through and lost his chance at the ten dollars.

Charlie Dolan has "a boy like a beagle," according to Miss Mystery Shopper, who fancied a knowing look in Charlie's eye as he very patiently showed her various new lines in connection with no sale resulting.

While looking at a range in the store of John Lewis Company, the manager, Billy Doyle, brought up the question of Miss Mystery Shopper, and referred to it in such a humorous way that the lady herself sensed imminent capture. However, she remembered that Bill is secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association and it would not be good form for him to make the capture.

She was followed around the Metropolitan Stores by several young girls who were visibly excited. Two of them were sure that this was the mystery girl, but the others held back and expressed doubts. The psychological moment passed, however, as Miss Mystery Shopper extricated herself from the predicament.

Russ Wotten had a faraway look in his eye when Miss Mystery Shopper evinced interest in some of his higher priced offerings in ladies' wear. In fact his attitude gave the elusive lady a nervous few minutes and the girls in the store seemed to sense something too, but a graceful though hurried retreat was effected.

Several tours through the various departments of the Canadian Department Stores seemed to stir up an electric current of uncertainty, anticipation or expectation, and Miss Mystery Shopper momentarily expected to be caught but she kept going and managed to escape, but by a very narrow margin.

Other incidents occurred of interest but space forbids further comment, and so, with congratulations to Miss Edna Caverly, winner of the ten dollar prize, Miss Mystery Shopper vacates the stage for the present but may come back at some future time to try conclusions with the amateur sleuths of Belleville.

WANT WORK DONE IN RAILWAY SHOPS

Workers Declare Rail Equipment Plants Obsolete

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)—Rail equipment manufacturing plants which could be used to fill in the last five years were "obsolete" industries and should be allowed to go bankrupt, while equipment requirements could be supplied by the existing shops of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific, the Government was told today.

Representatives of railway mechanical workers' organizations from Prince Albert and Moncton, headed by their spokesman and Ottawa representative, R. J. Tallon, waited upon Acting Prime Minister Sir George Perley and Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways, with a request all the proposed equipment work provided for in the re-employment legislation now before the House of Commons should be carried out in the shops maintained by the railways, themselves.

6 MORE DEATHS FROM DUST

Little Rock, Ark., May 3.—(AP)— Six more deaths were reported today from the Arkansas storm area where five persons already had been listed as "known dead".

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, Ontario, May 2, 1935.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir:—

I wish to reply to the letters of May 2.

The author of the first letter made four points. If, as he states, the disciplines of cadet training brings an inferiority complex and causes the cadets to dislike the training, I do not see how it glorifies war in their eyes, or militarizes them. I cannot see how physical training can do as much good as cadet training. It consists of a series of exercises, done in a confined space, and lasting five or ten minutes. There is no marching, no work with dumbbells or Indian clubs to take the place of rifle drill.

The author of the second letter believes that cadet training hampered his education. As there are only half a dozen cadet drills per year it can not have done so in any marked degree. I have taken cadet training for three years, and do not find myself laboring under any marked inferiority complex. While turning out, for cadet drill one hears more sighs of relief at having "missed Latin" than groans of despair. As to the officers having superiority complexes, all officers have had two years in the ranks, and any boy who wishes to do so may attain the officer's training classes.

Yours very truly,
A Cadet.

DOG ACTS GUARD OVER DEAD PAL

Spaniel Protects Body of Terrier For Many Hours

George F. Brickman, 169 Foster Avenue, knows that there is at least one dog in Belleville, which thoroughly one dog in Belleville, which though where he has slept without fail since he was a pup was willing to give up the warm shelter of home to stay out all night and up till eleven-thirty the next morning and to watch over the dead body of his dog playmate a wire-haired terrier "Tippy" owned by Mr. G. E. Meyers, a neighbor.

The night before last, Mr. Brickman, whose valuable spaniel will not be two years old until next September 11th, let his dog out as on other nights and expected him to return and bark for admission, eleven o'clock or after, but didn't from the dog. Hour after hour passed and Mr. Brickman still kept watch. Finally he retired at three o'clock in the belief certain that his dog had not come back.

Mr. Brickman told the story. "At seven-thirty yesterday morning Mrs. Jamieson, who lives near called the house by telephone and said that there was a dead dog down by the embankment. Just below the Tourist Camp and that my dog was standing by it. . . I went down and there sure enough was my dog "Byng" by the side of his dead companion, the wire-haired terrier with which I learned he had been seen playing on the lawn at eleven o'clock the night before."

Asked if he had any difficulty in getting his dog to leave the dead dog's side, Mr. Brickman said, "No, I just called him and he came".

Mr. Taylor inglines to the view that the dog was killed by a car and carried and thrown on the embankment and that his own dog followed and stood guard all night through the night and morning.

Mr. Meyers speaking of the finding of the dog found starting "Tippy's body, said she thought it was remarkable a thing for a dog to act in the capacity of guardian. She recalled another recent incident in "Bynz's" nature.

"Tippy" was eighteen months old and played with "Bynz" about that. On Wednesday evening the terrier disappeared and did not come back. In the morning Mrs. Meyers telephoned Mr. Brickman's home to find if "Bynz" had come home and learned that he had not returned. It was some time later that the discovery was made.

Kellogg's WHEAT KRISPIES

by Irene Dana

"Then suppose you give your brain a rest and be a serious drinker. Jiminy, you're here with me. You got Rosie in your system. Stop thinkin' about yourself and think about me. That's what you're paid for."

Anne laughed. She sipped her cocktail.

"Madame Hoag," she said, "aside from my failings, you are the best friend I've ever had. You're honest and generous and fine."

Madame spooned caviar from a dish the butler had placed to the right of her plate.

"I'm honest," she admitted, "and fairly generous once in a while, but when you say fine, Fifi, you ain't talkin' about me. Maybe I'm a diamond, but it takes a lot of chisels to get me outta the rough."

A train of voices. The parade was under way.

"Oh, darling, wherever have you been?"

Anne choked over her iced melon. Arms about her throat! Heavy, overpowering perfume. She managed to extricate herself from the arms.

Mrs. Bruno Beasley!

"Bee-Bee!" Anne exclaimed. Then, with some formality she stood and said, very coolly, "Madame Hoag, Mrs. Bruno Beasley."

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

The name Bruno Beasley was one to conjure with, Anne knew. It raised the lop of the society colonies. Those on the fringes of society used it with awe and a hope that was never realized.

World Madame be impressed? Would she do a bit of social bowtowing? Anne projected a silent wish that Madame would accept the introduction with the aplomb that was native in her.

Madame said "Howdie do." Anne breathed relief. She might have known Madame would be too clever to register delight even though she felt it. "Maybe your friend's around like a drink, Fifi, or some fool. The motion is particularly good."

"Fifi!" Mrs. Bruno gasped. "Did Annie don't tell me you've changed your name to Fifi, and your friends and personality."

"I changed it for her" Madame said with finality. "Have a cocktail, Mrs. Beasley."

"Darling," Mrs Bruno exclaimed to Anne between sips, "we thought you'd gone home in a spirit to the Riviera or something. I asked Maddie and she practically threw me with a look. Have you and Maddie been quarreling again?"

"No", she hesitated. "Maddie's not seeing me any more—"

"Is this Maddy the one that bustled into my house without being asked and raised Cain because she found you pulling your hands with good honest work?" Madame asked, sharply and acid.

"Why—yes—"

"Then you got it all wrong, Fifi. You mean you're not seeing her any more—she's not seeing you. Here's to Mrs. Beasley." "I'll a like like Mrs. Beasley—I've taken Fifi under my wing. I'm figuring on her growing up like a scarred chicken in a rainstorm. I handed her in circles the rain and here she stays at long as I like it. Hey, bring another tray of them cocktails."

"But Anne, darling," Mrs. Bruno cooed, "you know I'd do anything to ways open to you. Bruno and I would be thrilled to have you, no matter what Maddy might have to say. I'm sure we could pacify Maddy—he's been rather venomous about you, Anne—of course, it might be awkward, Craig and Bruno being practically inseparable—"

"I'll be good if you to offer me shelter, Bee Bee," Anne said cheerfully, "but I can't possibly accept. I have my work to do, you know."

"You mean you're still that Madame Hoag's creature?" she plainly as though she had voiced the question, Mrs. Bruno's startled eyes were demanding. What are you doing here, lunching with your mistress like a guest? Don't you know servants are not allowed the privilege of the beach?

"Maid!" Madame snorted. "Who says Fifi is a maid? She's a member of the Hoag family. I let her mess around with my letters and things because she's got an idea she wants to do something, she's that independent. But she's a guest in my house and in my cabin on this beach, and don't let anybody forget it."

"Oh, how nice for Annie!" Mrs. Bruno began to babble. "Annie and I were always such chums around Anne's shoulder. Mrs Hoag was fabulously rich. Money literally talking in these days of collapsing fortunes, it shouted. It might pay to cultivate this Fifi as a person. "I must dash along—I'll be seeing a lot of you, won't I darling, and of dear Madame Hoag, too? Bye Annie, and I are going a supper dance tonight on the terrace. Be a lamb and come—bring Madame along," Mrs. Bruno waved off in a flutter.

"Well darrel!" Madame pushed back her chair and regarded Anne. "Didn't have what I told her peddled all the way up and down the beach before the day's an hour older."

"Madame, why did you tell her?" Unaccountably to herself, Anne was trembling.

"Tell her what?"

"That I was your guest—a member of your family."

"Because you are." Madame took a third chocolate from the plate.

"But, Madame, I am only your secretary."

"All right, Fifi. Be my secretary if you want to. But that don't keep you from being a member of my family. I'm not as squeamish about working folks as your friends are, kinda like 'em. I might even adopt you, Fifi, if you're in the market. I need a daughter. I need a son, too. I thought that Dolph that nephew of ours would fill the bill, but I might as well try to be a mother to a rainbow."

"Madame, why are you so kind to me?" Tears were coming unashamed dong." Anne choked.

"Bosh. You're a good girl, Fifi. You're smart. The smartest girl I've ever had to myself for carpetrags and jewels. Then I married papa he had eighteen dollars and an extra pair of socks. I wouldn't trade papa for anything I've had since. I'm not like papa, like to potter with his flowers and I like to go places, but when we get together we're just like we was when we was on the beach in the park and didn't care because we couldn't afford to buy us an ice cream soda. You're papa and she're me. We're not as young as we used to be. We got a right to do what we want to do and to live who we want to. We got a hard enough for it. Let's go for a swim, Fifi. You'll find a pack of bathing suits in the cabin."

Cat Cass was waiting at the cabin when Madame and Anne came in after their dip—Madame couldn't swim, but the sunshine was blindingly bright, and there was a nip into shadow.

"Hello, hag." Cat said, depositing on a table the news hanging Anne had brought from Craig. "I've come to send him on an errand to Bois Joli."

"All right, Cass. Fifi, we'll have to get you a new pocketbook. Cass, go to and see Mr. Fifi's purse in about an hour."

Anne watched the blue-clad figure disappeared up the beach. The sparkling blue ocean blurred. The gold in the sunshine was turning to rust.

"I don't get Cass," Madame said. "Fifi, get him."

"He seems to be an excellent messenger," Anne offered. Her heart was beating a-tatoo.

"Sure," he's a good chauffeur. Too good. What I mean is he's too good to be true. Class, that's what he's got. You oughtta see him handle Dolph, Dolph's afraid of Cass. Dolph's afraid of class. Cass pulled him out from behind a tree when I ran in Miami—he fool was crunk as a cook—and left his big hooky alone on the curb. I offered Cass a hundred dollar tip for the job but he wouldn't take it. All he said was 'It's a pleasure, Madame.'"

* * * *

It was inevitable, Anne thought, that she should meet Craig Braden before she could leave the Surf Club.

She saw him coming at a sufficient distance for her to make an attempt to avoid another an encounter. Her first impulse was to go so. But was she going through life fleeing from every unpleasantness that happened across her path? She has chosen her way definitely. She gallant about it, then

The girl with Craig was a stranger to Anne. A slim blonde with honey colored hair with skin burned to a dusty gold by the tropic sun. She was wearing shorts and carried a huge scarlet sun hat. It was evident she was making graceful little efforts to fix and to hold the attention of her escort. Braden, with the golden prize in the grab-bag of matrimony!

If only the girl would rivet Craig's attention until she, Anne, was safely past.

But no Anne was almost opposite him when he saw her. Their eyes met. Smiles anger darkened his face. She could see the muscles around his mouth tighten, almost wipe out the looseness etched there by indulgence, by dissipation. What would he do? Denounce her? Hired help in the sacred purlieus of the Surf! Almost anything might happen.

The slim blonde sensed the change in her companion's mood. Instantly she was on the alert. Anne saw her catch Craig's arm. Saw her prattle up at him in a desperate effort to distract his attention. "What's the matter honey? Aren't we having fun?"

Craig Braden ignored the adoring eyes. His sullen anger continued to blaze at Anne until she had passed beyond the line of vision.

Anne felt suddenly limp and defenseless. Must she go on meeting these people whose code she had so brazenly violated, whose sense of decency and the fitness of things she had so flagrantly offended? Was she thought of the debt of gratitude she owed to Madame. That debt must be discharged fully and with interest.

She rode with Madame in the rear of the car. Perquisite of her new position. Conscious always, achingly conscious of the blue figure at the wheel. Here was another human being with whom she was at cross-purpose. Cari Cass, Craig Braden, Maida, Bee-Bee, Dolph, Berta. What devil was it that moved about in the wells of her being, muddying the waters?

Anne accompanied Madame to her boudoir. A note had arrived for Madame.

"You read it, Fifi," Madame commanded.

Anne opened the note. From the Surf Club.

"My dear Madame Hoag:

"We regret exceedingly that we have failed to acquaint you with certain regulations of the Surf Club. The board of governors has ruled that servants may not partake of the privileges of the Surf Club except in such manner as is necessitated by the pursuit of their duties.

"Please accept our profound apologies for our dereliction in the matter of information. A book of regulations is being forwarded to you in the next mail.

"Very truly yours,
"Henry D. Waldron.
"Secretary."

"What's the matter, Fifi," Madame demanded, alarmed by the rustling of paper in Anne's hands. "It ain't going to explode. Is it?" Anne handed the note to Madame.

"Gimme my specs. Where am I—" Madame plopped into a chair. "Braden," she said. "That's the one you give the air to, as Dolph says. Sassety. So we got his goat! Listen, Fifi. I've had more fun since you been here than a barrel o' monkeys. I saw him. He was with a girl in short pants—short pants and a big red hat."

"I'm sorry to have caused you this embarrassment."

"Embarrassment!" Madame let loose another bellow of mirth. "Do I look embarrassed? Why, Fifi, I ain't even mad. I'm tickled. A couple months ago that club was way in the hole. Looked like it would blow up higher'n a kite. Members couldn't pay their dues what with Wall Street sneezing 'em close to their rides. So two of the directors came to me. They asked for a loan. I made 'em one, fat enough to make their heads swim. When I tell 'em Henry What's-his-name's bothering me about my funds and I'll have to sell the loan in, you'll see some fun."

A week passed. To Anne's delight Madame did not press the matter of a return to the Surf Club.

Anne managed for the most part, to avoid being drawn on her errands by Carl Cass. When an encounter was necessary, she was coldly polite, seeing her errors with Craig. He returned her conduct in kind. Once, handing her into the blue car he brushed her hand. Anne withdrew. And was enraged with herself for what she called her "wayward-ness." In the honesty of her mind she knew it was not her feet but her heart that had tripped.

Eleven o'clock in the morning. Anne in Madame's round boudoir, was going over her mail.

"There's an invitation for you and Mr. Hoag from Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Beasley. A dinner at the French ambassador." Anne held up the white engraved card.

"Ain't she the one we met on the beach that day? Maddie's friend?"

"Yes. She came to the cabana while we were lunching."

"Throw it in the waste basket. I don't like her. She's phoney."

The telephone rang. Anne answered it, and said, "No, this is Anna Brent—Anna Brent, Ch-ch-. Yes Madame. It's Madame Hoag's dan, my cousin. The one who made a scene here."

Madame chuckled. "If we stay here long enough, Fifi, we'll have the whole kit and boodle of 'em camping on our doorstep. Find out what she wants."

Anne turned to the 'phone. "Yes I'll rather not. Bell, Maida—I must consult Madame Hoag." Anne said aside "The fundy is visiting in her home. She says it's necessary that I come. She sounds terribly excited."

"Tell her if she wants to see you she should come herself. Who's going to get to do except gad?"

"I'll see you," Anne said. "You'll have to come to Bois Joli. No, I can't do it possibly. I'm very busy. I'll ask Madame Hoag, but an hour would be convenient."

"One o'clock." Madame said. "But tell her she'd better be prompt. I'm going out to lunch and I might lend you my time after that. Tell her. You can leave word to have her sent right to your room."

"One o'clock." Anne said into the receiver. "Be prompt. Madame Hoag leave word you are to be shown to my room."

Anne finished the correspondence. What had impelled Maida to call Bois Joli—particularly at Bee-Bee's end, an adroit plea. What was there between Maida and herself that demanded a reckoning? Every thing had been reckoned. And found wanting. Anne told herself as she pressed a button for the maid.

The crystal and gift clock in Anne's room chimed one o'clock simultaneously. Mrs. Bruno Beasley announced.

Mrs. Bruno came into Anne's room a bit hesitantly. Some of the old arrogance was missing. She was subdued rather than an active annoyance. Perfectly groomed as always Maida was tall and slim and smart. Not even the most perfect grooming could not conceal the fact she was ravaged by fear under the prominent grey eyes and around the thin tight lips.

"Anne, dear," Maida advanced in a polite rush. "I know you're wondering why I come to you—after I've been such a rotten friend ever since we were in trouble. Trouble—I've never known what it was. I know now."

"I'm sorry," Anne said, "that I won't have a job to fall down on. Maida girl!"

"I'm all down. I can't sleep. I can't do anything but think, think, think. The name of Hoag has become impossible it all seems. Anne, something perfectly horrible has happened to drive me to you. Your lips shone bits around their line of pain which you've been at pains to hide with the fright that was in her. "Anne, I've got everything we have his money, my money—everything."

"Oh, Maida—surely not everything." Anne was shocked.

"Practically. I've been able to salvage something—if we can find help. Jerry Bell has—but I'm not sure any one we know. We're desperate. No one seems to be able to do anything. Our friends are as bad off as we are, or nearly as bad. Oh, Anne—what will we do? The children—"

Maida stood there wailing.

"The first thing to do is not to go to pieces," Anne said as calmly as she could. "You have the children and you have Jock. It may not be as bad as you think."

"It's worse than I dare think." Maida made a despairing gesture.

"I help?" Anne wanted to escape the clutch of those icy hands. She couldn't think for the pressure of them. "But Maida, you know I have nothing—my wages here—they wouldn't be a drop in the ocean—"

"You have Mrs. Hoag." Maida lowered her voice. "Bee-Bee told me. She told me how the Hoags have taken you up. They're fabulously wealthy Anne. They give right and left—to the tune—to charity—hundreds of thousands. Go to them Anne. Ask them to see Jerry through. He'll pay them back—a dozen a hundred times over. Anything will—you must—look for me—I know you hate me—I've been so hateful—for the children—what will we do?—everything gone—"

Tears choked her.

"But Maida, I'm a stranger in this house. I'm only an employee. How can I—"

"You can try," Maida broke in. "Try, Anne. After all there's the tie of blood between us. I know I didn't remember it—but you're different. You forgive me. I've always have been. This is our last hope!"

She and Anne promised. Fifi would present the case to Madame Hoag exactly as it was. Maida left in a shower of tears and a flutter of arrangement of gratitude.

That afternoon, when Madame returned from a lunch for a Russian artist she was sponsoring, Anne broached her problem.

"Um-m-so she remembered you was kin of hers? Madame said, relaxing in the old purple bathrobe and sipping a beaker of iced champagne. "The blgher they fly the farther they fall. What did you do, Fifi, when you found your pocketbook had went flat?"

"Why—I—"

"You got you a job, didn't you? What's Maddy's husband Surplans doin' the same thing?"

"Yes, that you see I had no children to think about—only myself."

"So she used the children, did she? She worked." Madame snorted. "What's wrong with parents workin' for their children? Plenty of 'em do it. They got nice children, too, the working ones. Not little brats that grow up incorrigibles and made to run into ditches and knock down telegraph poles. Look at Dolph. He's what happens to kids that don't get on their own and humain'-bird wings. You don't want to see more kids grow up like that, Fifi, you're not."

"No doubt your nephew has his faults, but I'm fond of him."

"Not a single point." Madame finished the last of the cocktail and papa's. All we do is give and all he does is take till now we got him where he can't take no more. Your mouthful he'd starve to death. Kids don't know the value earnest and fine—he'd be finer if it wasn't by Maddy and Jerry's side most of the money."

"Madame," Anne said gravely, "All right then. Let 'em smash. It'll do 'em good. When they gather up the pieces and begin to mow grass and ground again, I'll see papa gives me a nice job where I can earn a decent living. If he needs one. Maybe they'll be happier, but I'm very comfortable and maybe something on the side if she's willing to do that. Maybe I'll be a millionaire, Fifi?"

Impulsively Anne went and sat on a stool at Madame's feet. Her eyes looked up. Madame returned Anne's penetrating gaze with warmth and with understanding.

"Maybe you are the kindest and the most generous woman in the world," Anne said.

Madame laughed, but she was appreciative. "Maybe you do," she said, "but I'm not telling you."

Gardner Sisters Win Junior And Intermediate Titles

KEEN COMPETITION

Meet is Conducted With Dispatch And Fairness

Six swimming championships were won at the first all-Belleville swimming meet held in the spacious Albert College pool last evening under the auspices of the Belleville Swimming Club. Each of the six various classes, Junior, Intermediate and senior in both girls' and boys' events saw a goodly number of starters that resulted in numerous heats being needed before the final winners were declared. The meet was supervised by R. B. Morden, physical instructor at the Y.M.C.A.

The champions and runners up for the meet in their respective classes were as follows:

Miss Orrace Bongard led all feminine swimmers in this contest with 125 feet or a little over two lengths of the pool. The swimmers were forced to turn around under water at each end of the pool. The meet was most successful with over fifty local entries being on hand to compete in the thirty events all to be staged in the evening. Nellie Flag May be Post Favorite Kentucky Derby Run Saturday

If a Winner, First Time That Filly Has Won Since 1915

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

Louisville, Ky., May 3 (AP)—Approach of another Kentucky Derby, the 61st and by far the noisiest since the epochal year A. D. 1929, today finds one intriguing question, above all others, absorbing the best and most masterful minds of the horse-racing fraternity.

To give this serious subject a light and frivolous touch, the issue concerns the ability of a lady of unconfined thoroughbred class to wind in the eyes of fifteen or more blue-blooded gentlemen, right out in full view of perhaps 60,000 horse racing addicts, gathered to witness the colorful classic for three-year-olds.

In short, can Nellie Flag, strapping granddaughter of Man o' War who was the best filly in 1934 and has returned to the races this year with smashing success, overcome the handicaps of sex and precedent sufficiently to whip a somewhat ordinary field of colts tomorrow afternoon in heavy going over the mile and a quarter route at Churchill Downs?

On the face of it, the odds seemed to be 15 to 1 against Nellie, only the fifth filly in the past sixty years had shown the way home in the derby. That was Regret in 1915, and only one other racing mare, Lady of Navarre in 1906, was able to do as well as second place. Still fresh in mind are the high hopes placed in the bangtail last year of two other queens of the turf, Mata Hari and Bazaar, but the best either could show was fourth place money after it was all over and the mighty Cavalcade had run his field into the ground.

RIDES A C.C.M. on the Streets and Highways as well as on the Race Tracks

BIG, good-natured Torchy Peden, world-famous 6-day rider, just loves to ride a bicycle. He actually spends more time spinning along city streets and country highways than he does on the race track.

By riding out-of-doors regularly Torchy Peden fills his lungs full of life-giving fresh air, keeps his muscles flexible and his body fit. He says, "The bicycle is a grand conditioner."

And, of course, you'll want to ride the same make of bicycle as Torchy Peden. Anyone who has seen this human dynamo do his stuff in a 6-day bicycle race knows that no ordinary bicycle could stand up for long under his hard riding. Yet Torchy can show you bicycles in his C.C.M. fleet that have gone over 42,000 miles and are still on race-track duty.

All C.C.M. models have the Straight Line Drive which makes the bicycle run so truly that "back and front wheels track like one." They also have C.C.M.'s own weather-resistant, brilliant Enamel; C.C.M.'s own Chromium Plate over a 20-Year Nickel; Triplex Hanger; Rustless Steel Spokes; Endrick or Enamelled Steel Rims; Dunlop "Fort" or Dunlop Imperial Tires.

In the long run you save money by buying a C.C.M. Ask Torchy—he knows!

DAY BY DAY

Everything was reported to be in ship-shape order for tonight's all-star charity wrestling bout at the Arena. "We checked with the contestants yesterday and they assured us they would be in Belleville ready to start promptly at the advertised time," stated Chairman Geo. Lee this morning. "In order to elevate the show we are giving the fans two main bouts this evening as both Dunlop versus Purnell and the Pearl-Dallas affairs, are over the one hour limit with the best two falls out of three deciding the winner," explained Mr. Lee. "Besides these two hour bouts there is a thirty minute curtain-raiser being also absolutely two new faces in town. Judging from the "flee" the fans pu on in Dunlop last week when he beat Johnnie Gyroffry the paid customers will be "right in there" pulling for their Parnell from the drop of the hat tonight at the Arena.

Although it was purely a personal attitude, our suggestions on the neutral sundry system question for the C.O.B.L. reached its deserved point yesterday when the sport commentators throughout the loop commented upon it favorably. At least we must thank our Peterboro pal for the "quote" and recognition, which by more than can be said for others. Our good friend "G. B. C." in Oshawa has apparently gotten over the shock sustained in the O. H. A. play-downs and recently returned to the wars to realize the better season is only around the corner. Which reminds us, that just three weeks from today is May 24th, when the local senior ball club usually pries off the lid for the current season.

Although a man representing himself as the business manager of the Copland Baseball team of the T.A.B.A. was in Belleville recently and opened negotiations in relationship to a possible game between that club and the Sherritt-Gordons here on May 6th, of late the "Radios" have heard nothing along these lines and non further checking up with Napanee, where the Cyclones were supposed to be booked on Monday afternoon, it was learned, that no such arrangements had been completed either, so it looks as though there will be no baseball in Eastern or Central on the King's Jubilee as the Smith's Falls-Perth series also proved a wash-out. (Oh well, it's too cold for baseball anyway).

Although it was none too favorable in the matter of weather conditions the local outfielders evening into action last night when the Ashmea Club won the evening game in the Wall Street League by the score of 10 to 3 over Sixth End A. C. H proved a free hitting affair and gave the rooters up around the old Albert college a thrill. After poling out a homer in the seventh inning, Johnny Bawden went in to pitch the last frame and win the game. When the dust of battle settled the plate the score was tied, one out and one on and in the last inning. So it looks as though Johnnie gets the season's initial bow from the outfielders. They'll be back at it again on Monday evening at the same spot.

Late this afternoon Coach Feeney stills announced he would stage an impromptu baseball game between the regulars and the rannigans of the "Radios" at the Exhibition Park on Monday afternoon. The gates will be thrown open and a regular game played, owing to the fact that no outside club could be procured for competition at such a late date.

All baseball players and fans are invited to attend the showing of the motion picture, "Play Ball" at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night commencing at 7.30 p.m. sharp. Such major league stars as Lefty Grove, Tommy Farr, Mickey Cochrane, the Ferrel brothers, Rog Hornsby, Ted Lyons, Al Simmons and others are in this picture, that has been hailed all over the continent as the best medium of education, along the lines of baseball, ever filmed. The entire show is free and sponsored by General Motors.

Pre-excitement and keen competition local sport fans passed up a rest evening's entertainment last night, when they missed the city swimming championships up at the Albert College. Each event was keenly contested and six new city champion swimmers named. This is the first all-Belleville indoor swim meet, that has been held in many years, but the turn-out of contestants last night should have surely encouraged the city promoters, that such events are worthwhile in Belleville. The efforts of the contestants were warmly received and roundly applauded, especially the under-water events, that saw many surprises. The dashes and long-distance swims also came in for their prominence as the races were all of the very best possible caliber. Promoter Ralph Morden is to be congratulated upon the splendid showing of the contestants and the fine manner in which last night's races were completed. The contestants all entered into the atmosphere of the meet which resulted in the success of the meet.

MESA IS WINNER OF FILLY CLASSIC

French-bred Invader Wins Newmarket Event Handily

Newmarket, England, May 3—(CP Cable)—Mesa, French-bred filly owned by Pierre Wertheimer, today won the 122nd running of the classic for fillies, the one thousand guineas, with J. Stand's Hyndford Bridge second and Lord Lonsdale's Carstis third.

Mesa started at odds of 3 to 1, Hyndford Bridge at 20 to 1 and Carstis at 25 to 1.

The invader won handily, having a three-length margin at the finish of the race over the mile course. Hyndford Bridge gained the place by a margin of a length and a half. Twenty-two ran.

Mesa was making her first start on the English turf but was highly regarded because of her fine record as a two-year-old in France last year. She is a trim bay by Kircubbin out of Mackwiller, Johnstone, English rider, had the mount.

The one thousand was first run in 1814, and today's renewal was worth more than £33,000.

McMURRAY TRIPLET INES

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—Mrs. Edith Ariens McMurray, one of Toronto's youngest triplets, died today. Born Sept. 18 last to Mr. and Mrs. Jack McMURRY, the baby, like her sisters, weighed one pound at birth. She was progressing satisfactorily until recently when she contracted pneumonia.

EVEN THE WRONG SIDE MUST BE RIGHT.

WHEN we refer to the wrong side, we mean, of course, the inside, but we do not refer only to the lining which is all you can see on the inside. Between the lining and the fabric there are many highly technical operations which can only be done well by skilled craftsmen.

Twenty-five years of tailoring experience has taught us to carry out these operations efficiently. The foundation which is formed by canvas, must be constructed and placed with meticulous care. The choice of suitable Hymo is an all-important factor, because this material when properly moulded, brings out the smart lines in the lapels.

We have selected Spun Haircloth that forms a foundation which insures a shapely coat. This is so woven that it does away with the irritation of horse hair working its way through the fabric. These are some of the hidden advantages that assure you Tip Top satisfaction.

NEIGHBORS HONOR BRIDE AND GROOM

ELDORADO— On Monday evening, April 29th., about a hundred friends and neighbors gathered from the surrounding communities, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Manly Post, for a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chambers, who were married on Wednesday, April 24th and who will reside at Mount Pleasant, near Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chambers have always taken a most active part both in the community, church and Young People's Society which has won for them an exceptionally large circle of friends in this district and they shall be greatly missed from our community.

During the first part of the evening a social time was spent and Mr. Vernon Strebe delighted the gathering with some organ selections which were very much enjoyed. Then a short period was spent in games after which the gathering was called to order by the Rev. W. G. Fletcher and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chambers were asked to take seats of honor and the following address was read by Miss Freda McCann from the community.

"Eldorado Ont. April 29th.

"Dear Leda and Clifford,—

"We are assembled here to wish you a long life of wedded happiness and to regret that your future home is not to be among us. Your lives have been spent in our midst. You have been active workers in our church and community, therefore we feel that the community to which you go, will be enriched by your presence.

"We regret your leaving us, but we are much more interested in your romance and marriage.

"May God's richest blessings attend you. As proof of our affection we ask you to accept these gifts, (Signed on behalf of the Community)— Misses Freda McCann; Gladys Martin; Grace Robinson; Elsie Fox; Jennie Ketcheson, Genevieve Holland."

Mr. Vernon Strebe president of the Young People's Society then read the following address:—

"Dear Leda and Clifford,

"We the members of the Eldorado and Union Young People's Society are gathered together to express our appreciations of your work in our society.

"It is with sadness that we learn of your intended departure from our community. We shall surely miss you. You Leda have been always ready to use your musical talent unstintedly, and you Clifford, have served us in a manly fashion. You both have been president of the society and have guided it through trying years, and when you were not in the president's chair, you gave your services to help others willingly and cheerfully.

"You will no doubt, continue to serve your fellow men in the new community.

Their social welfare will be greatly enriched by your talents.

"Talents are seeds by Heaven's gifts bestowed.

"To render back their increase unto God.

"Talents are deeds to do, or duties done.

"Whate'er their number be, five, two or one".

"We sincerely hope your life together may be very long and happy and that you often come to visit our society.

(Signed in behalf of the Y.P.S.)

—Vernon Strebe, president;

Miss Grace Robinson and Gordon Pigden, then presented them with a lovely Bible and magazine rack.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Chambers made suitable replies, thanking all for the lovely gifts, the parcels were then opened and many useful gifts displayed.

Lunch was then served by the ladies, and a social half hour enjoyed after which a number of the young people, retreated outside and by the noise made, it would seem that a charivari was being enacted. At a late hour all wended their way homeward feeling that a very happy time had been spent.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. A. Fox and Miss Mary and Margaret Craig visited relatives and friends here during the week end.

Miss Lily Wright of Camden East, spent the week end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright.

UNWANTED DOG SAVES FAMILY!

"Bob" may be just a mongrel bulldog and not eligible for kennel exhibition, but when it comes to watchfulness, he takes the cups! He's been earmarked for a spot in the canine hall of fame for, because of him, a family of 12 is alive today. In the little settlement of Kingsville, near Saint John, N.B., the house of Charles Phillips was in the grip of quickly-spreading flames in the middle of the night when "Bob" leaped on the face of his master, letting him know of the danger threatening. The family escaped from the inferno by leaping from windows. Nothing was saved except the night clothes they were wearing. The picture, above, shows what remains of the house and sturdy old "Bob", bowlegs and all. And to think that his master was going to get rid of him because he had a penchant for fighting.

READY FOR JUBILEE CELEBRATIONS

His Majesty's Canadian Ship Champlain is shown steaming up the Delaware river past the Navy Yard during her visit to Philadelphia. With a sister destroyer, H.M.C.S. Saguenay, they stopped off at the Pennsylvania metropolis en route to St. John, New Brunswick, where they will take part in the silver jubilee display.

HIS MAJESTY JUMBO II

Bearing on his huge bulk the distinction of being the only African elephant with any circus, Jumbo II is pictured in Chicago during his first American tour with Cole Brothers-Clyde Beatty circus. Jumbo II is 12 years old, and more than nine feet tall. He is named after the famous giant brought to America by the late Phineas T. Barnum, in 1882, and killed in 1885 while crossing a railroad track in Canada. The original Jumbos skeleton is preserved in the American Museum of Natural History at New York, and his skin is mounted and stands in the Barnum museum at Tufts college.

AYE, 'TWAS A BONNIE TRRRIP!

Here is two-year-old Willie McManus, who travelled all the way from Glasgow to Canada by himself on the liner Athenia. Willie arrived at Montreal this week none the worse for his adventure. He was photographed just before leaving for Toronto where he will visit his aunt and grandmother.

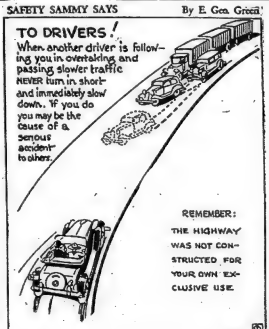
Whitney's "Today" Becomes Derby Favorite

Crack three-year-old thoroughbred owned by C. V. "Sonny" Whitney (right), departs from New York (top) in a private car headed for Louisville, Kentucky and the classic Derby. He rose to position of pre-race favorite to take the Churchill Downs gallop by his handy victory in the Wood Memorial which he is seen winning at the left.



Romance Invades Kentucky Derby Trials

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES H. HAINSWORTH

Marriage of the owner and jockey of Blackbirder, Kentucky Derby entry, adds a note of romance to the coming Blue Grass classic. The bride, former Mrs. Hollis Wright of Ryder, of Syracuse, N.Y., and bridegroom, Charles H. Hainsworth, are pictured with the horse at Syracuse. Hainsworth also is trainer of the horse.

Daily Short Story

Fate Takes a Hand

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Yes, sir, fishing is about the best in sports, yet, it is the strangest. I mean by that, it has more new ideas and more new inventions than any other sport. Of course, other sports haven't the outlet for inventions and ideas like fishing but I still maintain that fishing is the strangest.

Now you take the new idea that some smart fisherman originated last summer. An idea to coax the fish to the bait by using electric light bulb lowered into the water. The feller says that the light would attract the fish right up to the bait—and the—well, I guess, the fish would just have to bite.

Now, with ideas like that coming into the game from time to time, you get a rough idea why I say fishing is strange. Who'd ever think of using an electric light bulb to coax a fish to eat onto the racquet—you see—well you get what I mean.

And further strange things happen while you're fishing that can't happen in any other sport. That about brings us up to our story.

There sir, strange things happen in love and in fishing. Of course, there's nothing new—I mean interactions or such can happen in love. Love has been the same since the beginning of time, but little twists of fate can change the life of two people.

Now take the case of that cute kid, Rita Williams—old man Williams' only daughter. Her folks were the wealthiest family around these parts, but that didn't make any difference to Rita, no sir. Why that girl would don an old pair of overalls and come right out fishing with me—just like that. No sir, there wasn't nothing high hat about Rita.

Different With Tom

Not with Tom Davis it was different. He sorta elected himself as a committee of one to take over Rita's very disgraceful manners. However, he didn't get very far because Rita would avoid him at every occasion.

Then Tom thought that it would be a good "match" but Rita being the principal one, thought different.

Well, it was about this time that a feller named Carl Hankins drifted into town. Seemed to me I saw him some place before but for the life of me I just couldn't place him. We're all friendly in a small town like ours so I went up and introduced myself.

Carl was a pleasant chap, too. Soon as he heard that the weakfish was running in the cove, he took pole out of his grip and away we went. And could that man fish! Zowie! The second day as we were preparing to take another crack at the "weaks" Rita came over to the shack. Boy, she looked mighty pretty in the old outfit she had on. They say that clothes make the man—or women—but Rita couldn't have looked more charming. I introduced her to Carl and well—Rita's green eyes popped out of her head.

She said she'd like to go with us and before I could say aye, yea, or no, Carl had invited her. All that day he just seemed to gaze at her and she liked it too because I saw her sneaking glances at him, too. I could see as we came back to the landing that Carl wanted to ask her out, but for some reason or other didn't. Kinda tactfully I figured—by—I might be mistaken—the finances were low. Well, I couldn't stand it and see that—so I slipped him five and told him to go ahead. He didn't want to take it but I forced it on him.

The next evening Carl comes in and returns the money, says that they just went walking around the park—but I learned that they went to dinner and a show and I just wondered. It was still in the back of my mind that I'd seen him before. So I asked him. He just said, "Lots of people look alike Bill," and let it go at that.

Attractions

Each day Rita would come over to my shack now and I knew for a fact that the attraction wasn't me. Yes sir, Rita and Carl were getting pretty chummy. I felt kinda sorry for the lad because—well—it looked serious to me. Oh, I could tell. An old timer in the game like me knows. He didn't seem to have any money, though he gave my five back.

It was about a month later when I was getting ready for the fishing trip—straightening things when a knock sounded. A boy handed me a note. A slip of paper fell to the table when I opened it. The note read:

"Dear Bill: By the time you get this Rita and I will be married. Incidentally I owe you an apology. You were right when you said you had seen me before. You saw my photo in the paper when I inherited that million from my uncle, Carl to you.

Now, I'm wondering about that river I loaned him. Guess it wasn't money that was worrying him! Kids are funny.

MR. AND MRS—

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair, and ma said, O dear, you men, I suppose you're all alike, if that's any dreadful consolation.

Why, what have I gone and done now? My conscience felt clearer, pop said, and ma said, I was thinking about the evening when you came home empty handed and blank minded, with no more idear that it was our 34th wedding anniversity than a child in its first cradle. O dear, I could of dropped through the floor never to return. I'll never forget my disappointed cheek, she said.

But yer gods today is no anniversity, is it? pop said, and ma said, No it's not, and if it had been you would of been the last to remember it and the first to forget it, but a woman doesn't forget so easily when her utmost feelings are wounded beyond recall.

For Pete sake I'll make a pledge here and now to remember our 50th anniversary, and ever our 75th if necessery, pop said, and ma said, The future doesn't berry the passed unfortunately. It hole not of here so bad if it had been the 9th or the 14th anniversity, but the 15th was so important because it had a 5 in it. O dear.

Well then be gollies I'll remember the 16th all over again, pop said, I'll remember it tomorrow, I'll send you home a bunich of roses and you can meet me downtown and we'll dine on the Ritz roof and then go to a show, how's that? he said, and ma said, O William that will be lovely, it will erase the whole dismal picture from my mind forever to think that you're doing all that on the spur of the moment on your own spontaneous volition, I'll call you up in the morning of your office and remind you, she said.

And I'll call you pix back and tell you that I haven't the dough, pop said.

And he took her to the movies as a exter indooserment.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Olga, turning from the river, gave a half-stifled scream and shrank back from the menacing figure looming before her, blocking the way back to the hut. Zu-b'yat, the king-ape, hunting apart from his tribe, had seen the woman go for water.

It was he who now confronted her. The king-ape was not a pretty creature judged by human standards. But the sheg of his tribe and Zu-b'yat himself, considered his glossy coat, shot with silver, quite handsome.

His dangling arms and bullet head, sunk between mighty shoulders, were marks of great personal beauty. In his little savage brain was a conviction that this strange she, belonging to the Tarmangani, must look with admiration upon him.

Zu-b'yat felt that surely his beauty entirely eclipsed such as the hairless white ape who owned her, might lay claim to. But Olga saw only a hideous beast, a fierce and terrible caricature of man, as it lumbered toward her!

"Adopt a Child" Week Announced By Hon. D. Croll

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—The week of May 26, first anniversary of the birth of the Dionne quintuplets, will be "adopt a child" week in Ontario, according to an announcement today by Minister of Welfare David Croll, who represents His Majesty King George VI as guardianship of the famous Callander, Ontario, babies.

"Expressing the hope the movement would extend beyond this province, Mr. Croll urged childless couples or those whose children have grown up to visit children's shelters during the week with a view to adopting a child who needed a father and mother.

"Birthday festivities of the quints will be broadcast throughout the North American," said Mr. Croll, "and the quints themselves will take part in the program." Tentative plans for the celebration at Callander have been formed by the three guardians of the infants with the approval of the provincial government.

Mr. Croll, whose department has jurisdiction over 1,000 children in Ontario Children's Shelters, felt there could be no better occasion for increased interest in these children than the birthday of the quintuplets' daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne.

Statement.

The minister's statement follows:

"On May 26 the Dionne babies will be one year old. I know the whole province, yes, the whole world will rejoice that they have passed their most critical period and are approaching their birthday in such sturdy health. So certain has been the care lavished on them that we can look forward confidently to their continued development as normal, happy children, and such beautiful babies.

"We are proud of the quints. They are an asset to Ontario and in no way more than in making everyone, married or single, young or old, intensely interested in that corner of Ontario in particular and babies in general. I am sure they have awakened wider interest in child welfare.

"So it has occurred to me that in May when we are thinking of Yvonne, Annette, Marie, Cecile and Emilie, we might well spare some attention for children who are not famous but fortunate. There are nearly 1,000 children who, through no fault of their own, are missing the best things in childhood—the things that all of us look back upon with such happiness. They have no home but the white walls of an institution, no father or mother to turn to, none of that freedom which belongs to youth.

Not Own Choice.

"They are occupants of the Children's Shelter, boys, girls and babies who, through someone's neglect, have become wards of the Children's Aid Society. In most instances they are being treated with all the kindness of which superintendents and matrons are capable, but, unfortunately, we haven't been able to raise all these officers to the level we hope ultimately to attain. The fact remains that the children are not living normal lives, the years they are spending in institutions will leave them unfit to cope with the everyday trials and humble world into which they will finally be thrown.

"What they need are mothers and fathers and homes. And, as it happens, there are thousands of childless couples who could supply just this need. They simply have never thought of adopting a baby—or if they have, they do not appreciate the measure which the law has set to protect both adoptive parents and adopted child from possible mistakes.

"So on one side are children who need homes and on the other are homes that need children. Couldn't we, when the Dionne babies are having their first birthday and people are thinking of the deep joy which a child brings—couldn't we get these two groups together? Why shouldn't we have an "adopt a child week?" Let us try to take these children out of the shelters and give them a chance for a normal, happy home life. Make them not wards but sons and daughters."

Dressed as Boy Her Dogs Win at The Boys' Fair

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—Slim, dark-haired Adele Davies, 14-year-old daughter of one of Toronto's leading sportsmen, didn't mind one bit when she had dressed as a boy and taken her two dogs, Sandy and Nipper, into the Broadview Boys' Fair last week and won prizes with both of them.

Adele, whose interest in four times have won the coveted King's Plate, and whose pets include two spotless overalls to the uniform she wears in the exclusive girls' school, admitted she was very much in hoodwinking the fair officials.

"Of course I was nervous," she said. "But nobody knew me. I didn't even pass off the impersonation. Silly old Nipper wouldn't do all his tricks. The other boys made their dogs sit by signs, but Nipper has to be shouted at, and I had to shout at the top of my voice."

Ginger won first prize and Nipper had second and third place honors on him. Both dogs are Doberman. Nipper won his honors in the Doberman Pincher's class, and in obedience.

ST. PAUL'S W.M.S. SPONSORS TEA

Interesting Social Afternoon Enjoyed by Many Guests

Stirling—On Thursday afternoon the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's United Church held a delightful tea and social afternoon for the ladies of the congregation. This was a novel affair adopted by the organization and resulted in a large number of the women of the congregation being present.

The church parlors were artistically decorated with Japanese lanterns and parasols. Twenty seven small tables were arranged to correspond with the other decorations. Two of the classrooms were converted into Japanese tea rooms. The committee in charge of these tea rooms was composed of Mrs. W. Fox, Convener, Mrs. Bamforth, Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Chester. The novel ideas of entertainment were supplied in a progressive manner and proved very interesting to all who took part. Mrs. H. C. Martin was in charge of the first of these which was a peanut speaking contest. Mrs. Nina Morton was in charge of a contest wherein the guests were called upon to identify by a number of photographs of members. This was very interesting and the gathering thoroughly enjoyed it.

At the conclusion of the contest period a very dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. W. S. Martin and Mrs. Mayhew pouring tea. As the guests entered they were received by the President and the First Vice President, Mrs. Lawlor and Mrs. Rowland, respectively.

This was a delightful affair and the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of ladies who attended. Those of the committee responsible for the program, the decorations, and the lunch, certainly did their work in a fine manner and everything went through without the slightest confusion which was a task in view of the large attendance.

The many friends of Mr. George Mason will be glad to learn that he has sufficiently recovered from his serious operation on Tuesday as to be removed to his home and is now progressing quite favorably along the road to good health. Mr. Mason returned to his home on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Fred Dewery of Toronto, who has been attending a convention in Belleville is spending a few days at the home of his mother, Mrs. Geo. Dewery.

Mr. Ivan Martin has returned to his home here after completing his studies at Queen's University, Kingston.

Mr. Frank McGrath is busily transporting the necessary equipment to the farm from which he has recently become the property of his father, Mr. Frank McGrath. He will operate the farm upon which he will take up residence at an early date.

Mr. Bert Osborne of the Bank of Montreal staff at Delhi, Ontario, is spending a few days with his mother Mrs. Charlotte Osborne.

Friends throughout the district will be glad to learn that Mrs. Ernie Munro who has been quite ill for the past two months is gaining rapidly in health and is now able to be about her home and attend to some of the lighter household duties.

Mr. Ritchie Mason of Oshawa, Ontario is spending a few days with his family at the homestead and also with his brother Mr. Geo. Mason of Stirling.

Miss Hazel Carswell of Madoc was a Wednesday visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mason.

Dr. and Mrs. John Shea and daughter of Belleville, Ontario, are visitors at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shea this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roundtree and daughter of Kingston were visiting Mrs. Roundtree's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bird, Wednesday.

St. Paul's W. A.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held on Wednesday, May 1st, in the auditorium, and was opened by the President, Mrs. Arthur Gordanier opened the meeting with a hymn. The scripture lesson was read, and this was followed by the report of the secretary.

The first number on the program was a solo by Mrs. Lawlor, "Most Beautiful Garden of Prayer." Mrs. W. Wallace next rendered a splendid reading "The Good Financier." Mrs. Claud Tucker also gave a fine reading entitled, "The Cities of a farmer's wife." Both of these readings were exceptionally well given and very entertaining. At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Lawlor announced that an interesting apple contest. The meeting was brought to a close by singing another hymn and the Mispah Benediction.

Y. P. S. Visiting Day

Monday and Tuesday of this week were visiting days for St. Paul's Missionary Society, and a large number of callers under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Gordanier and Mrs. Bird arranged plan of visitation whereby each lady member of the congregation on the occasion was called upon. Although the weather was unfavorable each member fulfilled her part of the plan, completing the work in the allotted time.

The Young People's Society of St. Paul's Church was the gathering place of many friends and relatives from all parts of the county of Hastings, who assembled to pay their final tributes at the funeral of the late Lily Jarvis Bronson, who passed away at her home on Sunday, April 28th, in her seventy-fourth year.

The service was conducted by pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland with three ministers of the Standard Church assisting, Rev. W. Shadbolt of Stirling delivered an inspiring message based upon the 5th, 7th, ST PAULS GAL TWO 16 Life of and 8th verses of the fourth chapter of 2nd Timothy, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing." This text was especially chosen by the deceased in her last hours. Prayers were offered by Rev. J. Smith of Madoc and Rev. George Kelly of Ivanhoe.

During the service, Mr. Arthur Dolan offered as a solo "The City Four Square", "Will the Circle be Unbroken" was rendered in a fine manner by a trio, Miss Hazel Stevenson, Mrs. J. Smith and Mrs. C. Kelly, unaccompanied.

Surviving to mourn her passing are the husband, Joseph Bronson, three daughters, Mrs. Russell Stapley, Stirling; Mrs. Chas. Brintnell, Cortyville; Mrs. Florence Krausmann, Detroit, Mich., and fourteen grand children. There are also two sisters and six brothers.

The pallbearers were Messrs Clinton McGee, William Whitty, Robt. Chambers, Hamilton Johnson, Harry Potter, J. M. McGee.-Interment was made in Clark's cemetery.

Church Societies

W.M.S. OF JOHN ST. CHURCH

The Women's Missionary Society of John St. United Church held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, May 1st.

The President, Mrs. Harry Hill, who was in charge, conducted the devotional period, after which a most inspiring talk was given by Mrs. Parnsworth on "Mothers". Prefacing her address with an explanation of the inauguration of "Mothers' Day", the speaker pointed out the influence of mothers in the lives of great men, and how religion, music, art, and all the best things of life, have been developed by the hands of mothers.

A solo by Mrs. Geo. Foster was very much enjoyed.

The repeating of the Lord's Prayer brought the meeting to a close.

MOIRA W.A.

The March meeting of the W.A. of Moira United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Emerson in the form of a quilting and dinner.

The remainder of the meeting was business discussions. The proceeds of the dinner amounted to $3.80.

LOCARNO OF AIR IS BRITISH PLAN

Germany Will Still Find Door Open For Entry

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 3 (C.P. Cable)—Governments of Great Britain, France and Italy are drafting an air Locarno. This is the plan providing for swift reprisals against aggression from the skies contemplated in the Anglo-French communique of London, February 3, to which Italy subsequently subscribed.

The proposed signatories are the same signatories of the Locarno Treaty, Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Belgium. In one particular the Air Locarno now under consideration goes farther than the original Locarno treaties. These guaranteed frontiers but not Britain and Germany and Belgium and France and Germany and Britain and Germany. Britain and Italy appear in these merely as guarantors. They themselves are not guaranteed against aggression.

Protection from Aggression

But in the Air Locarno protection against aggression is extended by both Italy and Britain.

Just what the draft is now under preparation for the Air Locarno and Rome there is no intention, it is emphasized in British circles of the impending Germany with a fait accompli in the shape of a completed draft.

Behind the insistent theme of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's declaration yesterday, when although he announced Britain considered it necessary to expand her already increased air force program to maintain parity in the air, the door is still open to Germany to enter into a collective security system.

Germany Will be Invited

If Germany is willing to join she will be invited to participate fully in the negotiations, just as Prime Minister MacDonald said Germany or any other power wishing to keep the peace was able to enter the "free companionship" of the League between Britain, France and Italy.

The British further contemplate the Air Locarno shall be accompanied by a general convention limiting armaments, including aircraft.

Germany is to be invited to accept representatives to the Rome Conference which is to endeavor to devise some definite scheme for maintaining the independence of Austria and preserving the peace of Central Europe.

In Eastern Europe the plan will be in other various non-aggression pacts into one wide multi-lateral pact. Germany already has non-aggression pacts with Poland, Russia and the Baltic States except Lithuania. These, it is thought, could be gathered into one multi-lateral pact covering a wider area.

SEEDING GENERAL BUT QUITE LATE

Slight Reduction in Acreage Sown to Wheat Noted

Winnipeg, May 3 (CP)—Ten to fourteen days later than usual seeding is general in the Prairie Provinces except in some northern districts where rain and snow has further delayed spring work, the first weekly crop report of the Canadian National Railways Agricultural Department shows today.

A slight reduction in acreage sown to wheat is indicated in the report, but increases in the acreage of barley and oats are shown.

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—H. Poulter, editor of a trade paper dealing with radio, said today the Canadian Performing Right Society inquiry that Canada has 1,266,000 radio receiving sets in use. JUBILEE THRONGS STORM ANCIENT LONDON

Metropolis of Empire Gay With Merry Crowds Resembles Festival

City of London Flagged as Never Since Armistice

SEATS AT $10

Crown Symbol of Empire Says Lord President of Council

BY OSCAR LEIDING

London, May 4—(AP)—Jubilee visitors stormed London today and captured the city's streets with a barrage of merriment unparalleled since the signing of the armistice.

The old metropolis, reflagged to celebrate the 25th anniversary of King George's accession to the throne Monday, was a great beloved in Latin American festival and a North American harvest festival.

Visitors from all parts of the globe—300,000 were estimated to be here already—choked the city. Many more were expected before Monday's great celebration.

Traffic conditions were a nightmare for the police. Taxicabs did well to travel three miles an hour in the jammed streets. Pedestrians trod on each other's heels.

Violence Is Rare

The visitors made most of the noise. Londoners, for the most part, meandered agape at the transformation of the city into a far-reaching bower of color.

Weather conditions were unexcelled, with unsettled skies forecast for tomorrow and possible rain for Monday. The ceremonies will go ahead However, rain or shine.

Placards reminded the merry-makers that there still is time to get a gold seats for the procession as late as god MO.

Thousands ceaselessly milled about Buckingham Palace, inside the royal residence the staffs were busy opening letters and telegrams. Most of them were addressed formally, but a few, in childish scrawls, were sent to "The King, London." Over here the King's full titles laboriously copied from a reference book.

Crown Symbol of Vitality

"If in any cataclysm the crown vanished, the empire would vanish with it," Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council asserted in a tribute to the King.

"When we watch the contemporary history around us," he said, "we realize in these islands the enormous value of that steadying influence of our people in the throne and we see other countries with their difficulties with their privileges and power being usurped by dictators and tyrants."

The celebration found the government energetically boasting of its accomplishments and touching up its national recovery program in preparation for the political tussles ahead.

Kept Interest in Men

Viscount Hailsham, Secretary for War, in an address at Cardiff announced he plans that King George's best jubilee gift is the reduction of unemployment figures which the government announced last week.

"Next week," Lord Hailsham said, "he will be receiving gifts of ap-

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR INVESTIGATION

Entire Education System of Province to be Studied

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—A Committee named by the Ontario government will start shortly a widespread investigation into the province's entire education system below the universities with the main lines of inquiry directed towards school taxation, grants and administration.

Seven men representing various sections and interests of the province, acting under the chairmanship of Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education, will have charge of the survey which was announced last night by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn.

The Premier said the committee would make no recommendations respecting the request of Separate Schools for a greater share of corporation and utility taxes but the government would take responsibility for any settlement of the school question.

Members of the committee will be: Dr. George F. Rogers, Toronto, Chief Inspector of Secondary Schools; V. S. Greer, Toronto, Chief Inspector of Public and Separate Schools; T. L. Longmore, Timmins; E. C. Desmoreaux, Ottawa; John Stuart, London; B. B. Pallen, Dunbiton Township, Brant County, and W. T. Kernahan, Toronto.

STORY IS DENIED FERGUSON TO QUIT LONDON OFFICE

High Commissioner in London Suffering From Anaemia

MAY MOVE HERRIDGE

Also Possibility Ferguson May Remain Until After Election

London, May 4 (CP Cable)—The Canadian Press was assured today by an authoritative source today there was no foundation for a report, appearing abroad, to the effect Hon. G. Howard Ferguson would resign as Canadian High Commissioner on grounds of ill-health and would be succeeded by Hon. W. J. Herridge, new Canadian Minister to Washington.

London, May 4 (C.P.-Havas)—Officials at Canada House today denied Howard Ferguson would resign, when told of an Ottawa report the official was suffering from anaemia and had been advised to retire.

"He has been ill since February with influenza, but he will not resign," officials declared.

Ottawa, May 4—Rumors persist in Government circles here of a change at an early date in the Canadian high commissionership in London, but at present concealed by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Premier of Ontario.

The rumors are attributed to Hon. Mr. Ferguson's condition of health in recent months. Advices from London state that he has been unable to attend his official duties and the physicians have counselled him that he must retire or they will not be answerable for the consequences. The high commissioner's ailment is reported to be an obstinate condition of anaemia.

The expectation in the Government circles is that Premier R. B. Bennett will discuss Mr. Ferguson's situation with him while in London. The belief .. that if a change is made at an early date, as rumor indicate, Hon. W. D. Herridge, present Canadian minister to Washington, will be moved to the Court of St. James. It will be recalled that Vincent Massey, who was Mr. Ferguson's predecessor in the London appointment, gained it by promotion from the Washington post.

The alternate suggestion to this arrangement which is being discussed is that in view of the nearness of the general election and of

All Classes in All Climes To Share in Medals Given For His Majesty's Jubilee

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—Eskimo in o Canada's lonely northland, professors in snug studies, charwomen, policemen, nurses, philanthropists, light-housekeepers, farmers, newspapermen, industrialists, judges, civil servants, soldiers and artists will share next Monday 10,000 silver medals from King George.

The King, celebrating the 25th anniversary of his accession, will give the medals to persons who have performed services to their country such as scrubbing floors, making lays, administering them, arresting criminals, tending the sick, writing and publishing the news, catching furs, teaching youth and keeping shop on their counters.

His Majesty compiled the list himself, all but one name, that of a woman philanthropist, which was added at the request of the Canadian Government. The Government will not say who she is.

Quite Democratic

The medals, heavy silver discs made of metal provided by the mint, will be hung on the recipients at Jubilee celebrations throughout the Dominion. They may be red, white and blue ribbons with the red, in the centre, maroon, predominating. Those for women are the same size as the men's but the ribbon is tied in a bow.

Medals will be give to all Dominion Civil servants, who have served thirty years, including charwomen, messengers and others not doing manual work. Executives of Government departments will get them as will Dominion Cabinet Ministers and their wives, Lieutenant-Governors and their wives representatives of churches, persons in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Provincial Cabinet ministers, Provincial Premiers and their wives.

Representatives in Canada of Foreign Government will be given medals, Senators and their wives will get them, so will members of the House of Commons and their wives, police chiefs in towns of more than 5,000 inhabitants and mayors of the same towns. Thousands will be given medals to receive them.

Returned soldiers will not get medals for war service but those who have rehabilitated themselves in civil life will succeed well.

A list of 10,000 Canadian men and women who will receive Jubilee medals from the King to commemorate the 25th anniversary of Their Majesties' accession to the throne was published today. The medals will be presented by the municipalities at the Jubilee celebration on Monday.

The list can be classed as decorations, and should be worn on appropriate occasions by the veteran, for instance, should add the medal to those he won in the army.

Those from Belleville and vicinity who will be honored are as follows: Lieut. Col. D. Barrazat, Lt. Col. E. A. Owen, Judge C. R. Deroche of this city; Rt. Rev. C. A. Seager, London; Most Rev. M. A. J. Spratt, Kingston; Judge H. R. McLean, Picton; Judge J. E. Madden, Napanee; Judge L. V. O'Connor, Cobourg.

No Issue of Paper On Monday May 6th

On Monday May 6th, when the 25th anniversary of King George's accession to the throne is observed throughout the Empire there will be no issue of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

Our King and Queen

IT IS very meet, right, and our bounden duty that we should give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, Holy Father, Almighty, Everlasting God, for that Thou wast pleased as on this day to set Thy servant our Sovereign Lord, King George, upon the Throne of this Realm and has profited him in days of sickness and of health throughout his reign of five and twenty years.

FOR the example of unceasing service set by him and by our gracious Queen Mary; for strength and steadfastness bestowed on him and for the love and loyalty borne to him by a great family of peoples and in all parts of the world, we laud and magnify Thy glorious Name.

WE BLESS THEE for increase in the knowledge of Thy marvellous works, in care for those who suffer from sickness or the lack of work, in desire that all men everywhere may live in peace and enjoy the fruits of their labour.

FOR these and all Thy mercies vouchsafed to us, O Father, Almighty, we yield Thee unfeigned thanks; through Jesus Christ our Lord, to whom with Thee in the Unity of the Holy Spirit be all honour and glory now and for evermore.

This is the Church of England's Official Jubilee Prayer which will be heard in churches throughout the Empire.

Canada's Oldest Postmaster Gets Silver Jubilee Medal

By Central Press Canadian

Peterboro, May 4—In the entire history of the community of Lakefield, which dates back more than 100 years, there have been but two postmasters. The first appointed when the village was incorporated in 1847 was Robert Casement and he was succeeded in 1875 by his nephew, William Henry Casement, who occupies the position to-day.

The present postmaster was appointed in the days of the government of Sir Alexander Mackenzie, and now in his 81st year he is probably the oldest in the postal service of the Dominion for practically his entire life he has been engaged in the post office. As a boy he helped his uncle sort the mails.

He is one of the civil servants who have been honored by King George on his silver jubilee.

Sixty years ago when Mr. Casement was appointed there was not penny postage and the mails were light indeed. The total revenue of the office was the $160 a year.

ALL REVENUE OF AMUSEMENT TAX TO PAY RELIEF

Estimate $1,500,000 Per Year Can be Raised By New Impost

EFFECTIVE JUNE 1ST

Churches And Fairs Are Exempt From New Order

Toronto, May 4.—In need of every cent it can get, the Hepburn government has by order-in-council effected a drastic revision of Ontario Amusement Tax Act rates that is expected to bring to the treasury an additional $1,500,000 annually.

The former exemption on admissions to all places of amusement up to and including 25 cents, has also been eliminated, and amusements tax will now apply on all prices charged to places of amusement. Rates of tax, which up to the present have been of sixteen different denominations, have been reduced to nine, eliminating the payment by patrons of amusement places of odd coppers in a great many of the prices touched. One and two cent denominations will be in effect to provide for a low amusements tax payable by patrons of the lesser priced places of amusement.

The revised rates, as effective on and from June 1, and Announced this evening by Premier and Treasurer Hepburn, are as follows:

Admissions not more than nine cents—one cent tax.

Admissions not more than 19 cents—two cent tax.

Admissions not more than 48 cents—five cent tax.

Admissions not more than 85 cents—ten cent tax.

Admissions not more than $1.50—15 cent tax.

Admissions not more than $2.00—25 cent tax.

Admissions not more than $2.50—30 cent tax.

Admissions not more than $3.00—40 cent tax.

Admissions more than $3.00—50 cent tax.

With the tax now applying on all prices of admission, all prizes, shows and rides at summer parks, travelling carnival shows, fairs and exhibitions will be affected, said Mr. Hepburn.

Any person attending a race meeting where running races are held, irrespective of the price of such admission, or whether admitted free, will be required, the Premier stated, to pay, as heretofore, no amusements tax of twenty-five cents.

Hotel Functions Taxed

Entertainments and dinner dances held at hotels, dining rooms and similar places will be required to pay the same rate of tax as theatres and halls, except where the system of charges made to patrons is such that it would be impracticable to have the tax collected in the usual way, when permission may be granted to such places to collect the amusements tax at the rate of ten per centum of the gross charge per person.

With the exception of hotels, as noted in the above paragraph, an amusements tax ticket of the proper denomination must be sold and delivered for each person of a place of amusement, and it is a violation of the regulations to contravene this act, Mr. Hepburn pointed out, to attend a place of amusement in which an admission is charged, without being sold and delivered a proper tax ticket.

"Due to the relief problem," said the Premier, by way of comment on the new policy, "it is required to secure additional revenue, and the amusements tax will be used for relief purposes. All amusements tax tickets now being printed will have on the face on the face thereof, 'Ontario Amusements Tax for Relief Purposes,' so that patrons attending places of amusement, and who are fortunate enough to afford such amusement, will realize that the tax they are paying is to help the province in its heavy commitment toward alleviating relief."

Religious organizations, the Premier said, were still provided, as the provisions of the act did not apply to religious exercises, and by church organizations where the entire gross proceeds were devoted to church work. Exemptions also applied, he stated, on admission fees charged at the entrance to the grounds at the annual exhibitions held by the Canadian National Exhibition Association, the Western Fair Association, the Royal Winter Fair and to the annual fairs held by any society under the Agricultural Societies Act.

Mr. William Aris of this city, is today receiving congratulations from his many friends upon his 81st birthday. Mr. Aris celebrated the occasion last evening by staging two old fashioned parties at the local A.N.V. in C. club rooms. Mr. Aris is one of the few living Britishers who took part in the Northwest Rebellion. Last night he sang to his comrades "The Boys of the Old Brigade" and "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue" incidentally Mr. Aris intends to participate in the military parade during the King's Jubilee celebration on Monday.

THREE TRANSIENTS ON MAY THIRD

A coincidence that seldom would be duplicated in a lifetime happened at the local police station last night, when three tramdents applied for a night's lodging. There is nothing really strange in regards to three homeless men seeking a warm night's lodging in the same building on the same night, but when that night happens to be May 3rd.

REPRIMAND BOYS FOR THEIR ACTIONS

Four local boys were removed from the rear of the Belleville Arena last evening by local police during the progress of the Kiwanis Club's evening bouts. The lads were taken to the police station and reprimanded severely for their actions. It is followed their theft of the warm hours, but will be summoned to return to the court. Charges preferred by local police divided were at a rather low rate, no arrests being necessary in the city during the past 24 hours. Local authorities look anxiously toward a quiet week end owing to the King's Jubilee celebration.

TRAILER IS BURNED ON BRIDGE ROAD

A Bankwith trailer filled with new batteries suddenly burst into flames on the bay bridge road early today completely destroying the vehicle and its contents. The fire is believed to have been started when a wire crossed two terminals on one of the batteries being transported, causing a short circuit and resulting in the blaze. Fortunately the driver was able to disconnect the tractor of the vehicle, leaving the trailer a mass of flames. The local fire department was called to the scene of the fire and with the aid of chemicals saved the trailer from destruction, although before they were pulled the fire had done a complete loss. Traffic Officer Irvine was investigating the accident and its cause.

WOMAN IS HIT BY CAR CRANK

A rather peculiar accident was committed on Front St., shortly before noon today, when the crank of a local taxi struck a woman pedestrian in the face. According to eye witnesses the taximan was in the act of cranking his automobile when the crank became disengaged, flying out of his hands and striking the lady on the right cheek. The lady was accompanied by Fr. C. Thompson, escorted the injured woman home. No serious injuries were reported, her face only being bruised.

Scenes at Coronation in 1911 Described by Major Green

While the Jubilee of the Crowning of His Majesty King George V. and Queen Mary is being celebrated in May 6th the Coronation ceremony actually took place on June 22nd, 1911 and Major L. F. Green along with Sergeant James S. Harber and Sergeant John M. Boyd, officially represented the local 33rd Regiment Argyll Light Infantry at the Coronation, in England, in 1911. In an interview with the Ontario Intelligencer, Major Green today described the ceremony.

"Amid unparalleled scenes of popular enthusiasm and in the most gorgeous setting imaginable, the King and Queen were crowned in Westminster Abbey on June 22nd, 1911. His Majesty took the oaths to the nation and to the Established Church in firm, clear tones, and his Coronation by the primate and subsequent enthronement was a most solemn and impressive ceremony. The Royal progress to and return from the venerable edifice was one long triumph, and King George and his consort were visibly affected by the vociferous acclamations of their subjects. Foreign and colonial representatives figuring in the State procession were also the recipients of hearty demonstrations. "A striking incident of the day occurred after Their Majesties' return to Buckingham Palace. When the King, wearing the robes and Coronation Robes, appeared on the balcony hand in hand with the Queen, the crowd greeted them with a tremendous roar of applause, which was re-echoed by thousands in the parks and in distant Piccadilly. Colonial and Indian troops posted outside the Palace, swayed by the enthusiasm of the multitude, burst through all discipline and joined in the cheering, many waving their rifles aloft. The demonstration spread, to the officers, who waved their swords and joined heartily in the chorus, the whole forming an unparalleled scene."

Thumbnail Sketches of Officiants

By THOS. T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
LONDON, May 4 (C.P. Cable) — Here are thumbnail sketches of the chief officiants at Monday's great thanksgiving service for the King's Jubilee in St. Paul's Cathedral on Monday:

The Archbishop of Canterbury: Cosmo Gordon Lang. Aged 69, he was translated from the Archbishopric of York on the resignation of Randall Davidson in 1928. The translation was unusual but was probably promoted because Archbishop Lang was deemed the most suitable to smooth out the difficulties created through Parliament's rejection of the new prayer book.

The Bishop of London: Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram. Aged 77 he has been Bishop of London for 34 years, a record for centuries. He declares only an act of parliament will cause him to retire. According to popular rumor his address to the clergy assembled in "Old Chap." His snowhill towards all men is patient. Although many influential persons deplore the "lack of discipline" in the London Diocese. He is well known in Canada.

The Dean of St. Paul's: Rev. Dr. Walter Matthews, aged 54, came from the Deanery of Exeter when Dean Inge retired last year. Obviously it is very difficult to follow in the footsteps of the noted Dean but Dr. Matthews has handsome presence, excellent delivery and an abundance of scholarship, all of which he has already shown in his readiness to place freely at the service of London's citizens.

The Canon: Rev. S. A. Alexander is 68, and he has been Treasurer of the cathedral for 30 years. His fine head for business is as valuable as his scholarship. He has raised nearly half a million pounds (£2,500,000) for the restoration and preservation of the fabric, and has mainly responsible for the details of the ceremonial ritual for Monday's service.

The Organist: Stanley Marchant. Aged 52, he previously was sub-organist. He worthily upholds St. Paul's musical tradition, established and maintained by predecessors like Attwood, Goss, Stainer and Martin, which brought from Gounod the declaration: "I have heard and played the finest communion service in London."

Dr. Sydney Malcolm Berry, who will read the lesson, is aged 53. He participated as a volunteer in the Federal Council of Evangelical Free Churches. He writes with eloquence and administrative ability and counts him one of the most influential leaders of the Free Church movement. He has held many pastorates, including Carrs' Lane Chapel at Birmingham where he succeeded such eminent preachers as Dale and Jowett.

FAKE BILLS REPORTED

Ottawa, May 4—The Bank of Canada disclosed that "rather clumsy" attempts at counterfeiting the new $1 and $2 notes of the issue of 1935 had been discovered in Western Canada.

Blind Committee Ready for Drive

At an enthusiastic meeting held at the T.M.C.A. last evening, a large group of canvassers made their final plans for the effort which is to be made beginning Tuesday of next week to raise a fund of $7,000 for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Belleville. Representatives of the Rotary Club, the Kinsmen, the Kiwanis, Y's Men's, Kinsmen and Rotary Club conferred with the Executive Committee under the Presidency of Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, and made the various districts to be covered by the canvassing teams.

No cause could be more deserving, and the Committee are confident in their effort in appealing confidently to the Belleville public for a generous response to this appeal.

Persons who may through inadvertence be overlooked and yet wish to be asked to hand any donations to The Canadian Bank of Commerce, where the Treasurer of the fund will be glad to suitably acknowledge such gifts.

preciation but the Jubilee gift which he will appreciate more highly than any other is the gift of fixtures we have been able to produce."

Another indirect gift to the King literally to be welcome was the "Jubilee Trust" sponsored by the Prince of Wales to help Britain's youth which today passed the £500,000 (almost $2,500,000) mark as tarnished farthings from children and four and five-figure cheques from the wealthy poured in.

The goal for the "living and permanent memorial" of the King's Jubilee is £4,000,000 and those exchanged with receiving contributions said they anticipated an increase in contributions over the week-end due to the approach of Monday's accession Day celebration.

BRITISH, RUSSIANS ARE TEA DRINKERS

Old Country People Top Bill Consuming 10 Lbs. Per Head Per Year

The greatest tea drinking people in the world are the British and the Russians. The British, whether Canadian, Old Country, or Australian are inveterate tea drinkers —their consumption varying only in degree.

Old Country people top the bill consuming an average of 10 lbs. per head per year. When we consider that from one pound of tea we can brew 300 cups, the average person in the Old Country drinks 3000 cups of tea per year—which is about 24 cups per day. The Old Country man would rather do without his breakfast than miss his early morning cup of tea—and that does not apply only to the better classes who have it served to them before they rise in the morning—but equally to the working man who makes his early cup of tea before dressing.

In Australia the per capita is 8 lbs. per annum. Probably the most hardened tea drinkers in the world are the Australian bushmen who rank as the tallest of any of the civilized races. They drink the strongest kind of tea on every possible occasion and remain among the smartest, healthiest men in the world. The "billy can" known "down under" as "Waltilla" is familiar throughout the Commonwealth, the song "Waltzing Matilda" being as well known as the National Anthem.

The bushman drinks his tea very black, very strong—but ever with sugar and relish.

Served at all Hours

In the cities eleven o'clock in the morning is just as popular a time for tea as is four in the afternoon and it is served at these hours in offices and factories as well as in the homes.

New Zealand customs are much the same. About 80 per cent. of the population drink from one to three cups of tea seven times a day. Although they are one of the largest producers of mutton in the world, New Zealanders prefer milk with their tea.

Canadians are by far the greatest tea drinkers on the American continent although in point of consumption they are away behind their Old Country and Australian cousins. Here in Canada we consume roughly about 4 lbs. of tea per head annually. Tea always has been and still it the drink of the pioneer; men of the northland always including tea in their rations.

During the summer iced tea is one of the most popular beverages in the Dominion. In both town and country alike.

Before the war one of the greatest tea drinking countries was Russia, the consumption approximating 190,000,000 lbs. annually. After the revolution in 1917 the Russian market collapsed entirely but since 1930 it has gradually been recovering. In 1932 the imports of tea amounted to 23,000,000 lbs. increasing to 42,564,000 lbs. in 1933.

Tea was first introduced into Russia in 1618 when a Chinese ambassador brought several chests of tea to the Imperial Court at Moscow as a gift from his Emperor. The new drink did not find favour with the Russian people at first, but it gradually superseded all other beverages in popularity.

The samovar is not a species of tea pot but a large urn over a charcoal burner in which the water is heated. On top of the urn or samovar is a place for the teapot which is kept hot by steam. The Russian peasant drinks tea on all

His Most Excellent Majesty, King Georg V.

GEORGE THE FIFTH, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, to give King George his official titles, was born at Marlborough House on the third of June, 1865, and succeeded to the throne on the sixth of May, 1910, as the only surviving son of King Edward VII. His childhood was a happy one, shared with his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence, and two sisters. An early account describes him as "full of fun and not too fond of lessons."

It was decided quite early that Prince George should follow a naval career and his travels to all parts of the world cashed him to be known as the "sailor King."

According to the throne in 1910, twenty-five years later, and the Coronation did not take place until June 22, 1911. That was followed official state visits to Ireland, Scotland and India.

Once settled down, King George displayed fine qualities of statesmanship just prior to the war when he was faced with a number of political and industrial problems. When war broke out he was at once recognized as the nation's rallying point in its hour of supreme testing.

We have already reviewed the splendid work of the Sovereign during and immediately after the war; the many sacrifices, the titanic work he did to alleviate suffering and aid in the period of readjustment. It was during this period that the British people came to really know their King.

Where his boyhood had been carefree and buoyant, manhood was reserved and unassuming in the King. He is not the dominating, colorful figure his father was, but, like the Queen, his character is best judged by his actions. Kindly sympathetic, understanding and human, he likes nothing better than to be surrounded one of the people; he likes his hobbies; he lead a quiet life.

King George is, however, no mere, figurehead. He is a constitutional monarch, it is true, governing through his ministers, but within that definition his powers are very considerable. He is a skilled observer of foreign politics. He has the right to advise party politics and acts on the advice of his ministers; but in time of crisis, he is capable of arising to the occasion and exercising his influence along channels which have proved in the past to have been the best. His generality was never more clearly shown than during his serious illness in 1928 and 1929, when the whole Empire fervently prayed for his recovery.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession on Monday, May 6, will be the occasion for heartfelt rejoicing and will usher in a long series of festivities throughout the Empire in honor of the sailor, a shrewd statesman and a great King.

"Long live our noble King!

IT'S DERBY DAY 'IN OLD KENTUCK'

Storm Clouds Roll by And Crowds Roll in at Downs

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

Louisville, Ky., May 4—(AP)—The storm clouds have rolled by, the crowds are rolling in and it's derby day again in old Kentucky, with all its fanfare and furor, the headaches and heart-throbs, that go to make this event more magnetic to sports-followers than any other horse race in the United States.

By way of giving the form-players a final jolt, it developed overnight, that C. V. Whitney's colt, Today, the favorite and one of the easi's two best bets to turn back the challenge of the crack western filly, Nellie Flag, and rolled in yesterday with a slight bruise on one hind foot, after a fast workout.

The mishap to the derby's 3 to 1 choice, mild Trainer Jack Healy, who has charge of Mr. Whitney's colt's running or damage his prospects but it caused others in the Whitney camp, long-pursued by a derby "jinx", and put the favorite on the shelf. The previous choice J. E. Widener's Chance Sun, with Jess Maddry and was withdrawn this week.

All Serene at Downs

Otherwise, all was outwardly serene in the barns at Churchill Downs and the flat running of the three-year-old classic "wide open" for a surprise finish.

Nellie Flag, the strapping grandaughter of Man O'War, shared the principal public attention with the seemingly ill-fated Today. William Woodward's fast-finishing Omaha Col. E. Bradley's candidate for a fifth winner, Brotherton, but it appeared as if Mead seven horses had a chance to wear the victor's wreath of roses and receive the acclaim of a record-breaking crowd.

An unprecedented outpouring, expected to number more than 70,000 spectators, offered a spectacle in sports-following enthusiasm contrasting sharply with the top-hatted, hoop-skirted gathering of barely 10,000 that witnessed the launching of a national institution 60 years ago, when the little red horse Aristides won the first Kentucky Derby.

Track Fast

A cool, clear afternoon and a fast track were forecast today for the sixty-first running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

Work has been pushed to get the track in readiness after rains earlier in the week reduced it to mud. Only unexpected showers could undo the work, attendants said.

REVIEW NATIONAL WORK OF V.O.N.

Belleville Branch Represented at Annual Meeting in Ottawa

Highest commendation of the splendid health and nursing services of the Victorian Order of Nurses was voiced by their Excellencies the Governor General and Lady Bessborough at the annual meeting of that organization in Ottawa this past week. The meeting was attended by Mrs. Thos. Holland, president of the local committee and Miss Soutar, nurse in charge of this district. Sessions were held in Government House at the invitation of their Excellencies after which the delegates were entertained at tea.

The Governor General expressed the best wishes for the successful future of the organization of which Lady Bessborough is the Patroness. "We regard our connection with the Order as a pleasure and not as a duty," he said. "In these days the organization of this sort does more than infinite good. You have one of the finest presiding officers I have ever met, in the person of Senator Graham, and in Miss Snell-ling, a presiding genius, and I feel all is well with the Order, and always will be."

Re-Elected President

Senator Graham was re-elected president for the seventh term. "The Order is not at the peak of its importance," Senator Graham said in his opening remarks. "The national work is being developed, agreements are joining in stands in regard to public health nursing. The chief object of the Order is bedside nursing, and it is our duty to improve its position in Canada as a nursing organization."

Mrs. Wood service of nursing and educational services of the Order was reviewed by Miss Elizabeth Smellie, R.R.C. C.B.E., Chief Superintendent of the Order in her annual report, in addition, it has to be undertaken by the Order and publicity given to it. It is inevitable, she said, that there must be greater recognition financially by official bodies for the tremendous growth in the provision of relief.

The Victorian Order of Nurses has completed 37 years of service to Canada. One of the primary objects of the Order from its earliest days has been to maintain the self respect of the nursing sister and to encourage people to help themselves. This object has been to develop and maintain a supervised nursing service carried on by professional nurses, from the outstanding contribution which the Victorian Order is its practical demonstration of what can be accomplished through voluntary and professional co-operation in the general field of community service.

78,374 Patients Visited

Figures presented by Miss Snelling showed a steady effort the Order's nurses had increased considerably in the year. Patients numbering 78,374 received visits from 1,000 number of purely health educatior visits were proportionately greater. Free visits increased from 29.9 pe cent. in 1930 to 62.6 per cent. in 1934.

"The Trend of Professional Responsibility" was the subject of a address by Dr. T. C. Routley, ge eral secretary of the Canadia Medical Association. Other speakers were Dr. R. E. Wodehouse, Deputy Minister of Health, Dr. William E. Blatz, professor of psychology of the University of Toronto, who spoke on "The New Child and the Old Social Order."

Mrs. Holland was luncheon at which Rt. Hon. George P. Graham and Lady Bessborough were guests. Miss Soutar was held in the banquet hall of the Chateau Laurier. The special speaker was the Minister of Health, Colonel the Hon. D. M. Sutherland, M.P. Miss Soutar could be congratulated on having more health conscious and taking more interest in the promotion of efficient nursing service in Canada.

Reports Presented

At the business sessions of the meeting officers' reports were presented and a round table conference was held which was of great value to the delegates.

Hon. Carrine Wilson entertained a number of the delegates at a dinner party at her home, the Manor House, Rockcliffe Park.

From all points comes news of the success of taffeta for daytime as well as for evening. A most useful little frock is of checked blue and white taffeta with a skirt marked by groups of pleats. The bodice has ruches down the front and marking the center of the straight silver sleeves. The ruches are dark blue taffeta.

A nice description is the coat dress that looks like a redingote with printed dress beneath. This model is made in many combinations, one of the nicest is a navy sheer crepe with printed taffeta in navy, green and white making the panel from revers and cuffs.

HUNDREDS LIBERATED

Prisoners except lifers have already learned that the Silver Jubilee of Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary have brought them an amnesty of time in their sentences. On Friday a good many men walked out of institutions, the term reduction in terms having made it that their release was automatic. Others whose terms with the amnesty did not expire for months had received periods to serve as a result of the decision to give the prisoners some mark of grace.

This should help the prisoner and the ex-prisoner to realize that the law believes that these men and young men have an opportunity to make good as they pass out into freedom again. Possibly the amnesty may lead numbers to make more than ordinary effort to live their lives so close to the golden rule that they never again come under the law after their terms end with the prison bars ever find them behind them.

It is generous and can do no harm and possibly much good to have the prisoner learn that in the general rejoicing of the end of the first quarter of a century of the King's rule was that men who have offended society are not forgotten, be their offences light or more serious.

BROKEN-DOWN CARS

Everyone realizes what an old wagon wired up in its broken pieces looks like and how ill-fitted it is for the use of the roads. The old motorcar which is worn out or rusted out is in the way in many places as a like anomaly on the roads.

The ancient, dilapidated vintage car is most dangerous. There is a very real menace in these old cars operated by persons who can afford to carry no protection against the injury of others, which only makes the need more imperative that only responsible persons should drive cars, not because of any desire to deprive the poor of motoring but to protect the public against injury and loss through vehicles which cannot but be unsafe, and which do not provide any guarantee in the form of insurance against causing loss to others.

The other day in Toronto, a car sold for seven dollars, was driven by a person with a beginner's permit and with no insurance and without brakes, struck a girl. It was said the driver had been drinking. This car was sixteen years old. The car's condition is to be imagined.

Old cars are also mechanically imperfect may be taken off the highways and it is expected that the Minister of Highways will widen the powers of police to handle such matters.

BIRTHDAY OF POSTAGE STAMP

It was on May 6, 1840, that the adhesive postage stamp was first issued in Britain. Two months later it had been found so useful that it was adopted by the United States. Its use has become practically universal with the passing of the years.

The new era was ushered by Sir Rowland Hill's advocacy of penny postage for Britain, for—to use a modern term—the balancing of budgets. His penny postage law was passed in Britain on August 17, 1839, and became effective the following January. Completed by the introduction of the postage stamp a little later, it really inaugurated the world's present postal system. The postage stamp for prepaying postage was explained by Mr. Hill as follows: "Perhaps the difficulty might be obviated by using a bit of paper, just large enough to bear the stamp, and covered at the back with a glutinous wash which by applying a little moisture might be attached to the back of the letter." Regarding the adhesive stamp there was some dispute as to the inventor, a James Chalmers, of Dundee, claiming a part of the honor generally attributed to Mr. Hill. —Mail and Empire.

TRAGIC DEATHS DECLINE

It isn't often that one can get any encouragement out of a study of automobile traffic death figures.

Nevertheless, the National Safety Council reveals that traffic deaths in North America decreased by 11 per cent during January and February of this year, as compared with the same two months of 1934.

Here is a development as welcome as it is unexpected. No one seems to know just why the toll should have dropped.

The experts will have to study the statistics pretty carefully to tell us just what we have done, or refrained from doing to make traffic safer.

Meanwhile, before we rejoice too much, we might remember that even with this reduction we managed to kill 4,310 people during those two months.

An improvement has been made, but there is certainly room for a great deal more before we can begin patting ourselves on the back.—Vancouver Sun.

TALE OF TWO CATS

People say cats have less affection than dogs and that they are attached to places rather than people. I have not found it so. When I was packing to go to England any two cats, Pongo and Santiago de Cuba, seemed to know that more than a mere trip to Melbourne was in the air. They each chose a cabin trunk and got into it, and each time they were lifted out they watched their chance and got in again. When I had gone both cats disappeared. My mother thought they must be dead and did not tell me for fear of grieving me. But the day I returned, after a year's absence, they were both there waiting on the front doorstep to greet me as I drove up.—Australian Magazine.

GOD SAVE THE KING

Throughout the British Empire on Monday, May 6, all will be rejoicing with His Majesty King George and with Her Majesty Queen Mary in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession to the British Throne. In the Homeland and in the far-flung Dominions the prayers and best wishes from millions who love and honor Their Majesties will ascend for their welfare and for their happiness as they enter the twenty-sixth year of the reign.

While the complexion of the world has greatly changed since the time the death of King Edward Seventh called his son, the then Duke of York to the Throne, Britain's place today remains the bright spot in an anxious world. Britain and the Empire which have led the world in many fields, are now leading in the effort to guarantee peace and security. The nations have built to regard the part which Britain is playing today in the counsels of nations at a time when there is grave anxiety over the future.

The limited monarchy is a development which suits the character of the British race. In it the people find full liberty and in the King a constitutional head who has the storms of politics national or international. No form of government has ever been devised that quite equals this system of rule. In the elevated position the King may yet render services which mould the destinies of the race and of mankind.

But today the people are not thinking so much of the throne in its impersonal character as on the occupants of the two thrones, His Majesty the King and Her Majesty the Queen who have served the nation, the empire and the world with distinction, rendering a service which it may be is without parallel. It is the personal side that touches the intimates the minds of most of their people.

The character of the King and his consort is true to the spirit of the British race. There is not a fine human motive but finds in them a noblest exemplar. Though there is a heavy burden which rests upon the kingship, with all that the monarch remains the gentleman, in touch and close contact with the hearts of men and women. He is very much the King and yet the man. The Queen in her sphere also enjoys the esteem of an Empire for her womanly qualities.

King George came to the Throne after King Edward Seventh who had played a prominent part as Peacemaker in the world of that time. It fell to his son, the present king, to see the world pass through the greatest maelstrom of modern times, perhaps of all history, with endless problems demanding solution in a world which scarcely knows itself. But to the office of kingship King George had brought a loyalty and devotion which have perhaps never been equalled, certainly never excelled in the whole history of modern times. What part these factors have played in the course of history will some day be known.

How close the King comes to his people was revealed not many months ago on the occasions of the wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina and of his Christmas Day address. There the clear alliance and partnership of the King and the people was felt, he was one of the people, a gentleman of the first degree. He spoke on Christmas Day as the father of a large family which had spread throughout the Empire.

That is the secret of the honor and love with which he is surrounded. It is the relationship of a father and his family. Every Britisher in the world knows what that relationship implies.

And the Queen shows this same womanliness which has endeared her to a large portion of the population of the world while in her work of opportunity in the philanthropies and charities, she is doing service which only a queen and a noble woman can perform.

So for these and their family on this silver jubilee of rejoicing on the accession all heartily and loyally sing "God Save Our Gracious King."

How strangely high endeavors may be blessed, where piety and valor jointly go. —Dryden.

The world is a comedy to those who think, a tragedy to those who feel.—Horace Walpole.

All the world's ends, arrangements, changes, disappointments, hopes and fears are without meaning, if not seen in the light of eternity.—Tryon Edwards.

Knowledge of the world is dearly bought if at the price of moral purity.—Wiggleswerth.

GENE, A PORTRAIT

Gene is like a sea-breeze
Blowing fresh and sweet
From green ocean-meadows
Down a dusty street.

She should tread on paths where
Mellow sunlight flows,
Undertones of song are
Hinted where she goes.

Gene is like a sea-breeze
Whispering of deeps
Where in careless beauty
Strength unbounded sleeps.

To her happy nature
All glad things belong;
She was made for laughter,
As a flute for song!

AND LIKE A GARDEN is the beauty of women. Tended, it sings with glory; one catches his breath at the sight of it, he becomes a poet, and lifts a poem. Neglected, weeds creep in, and no longer is the garden a romance and a delight, but one grieves over it—that a rose should have a weed choking out its beauty—that lovely eyes should be marred by lines, a charming mouth by a double chin or a "scraggley throat beneath." The foregoing is a sample paragraph from a booklet advertising a program of beauty treatments. What chance has poor man against this entrenched new womanhood, backed up by a thousand different beauty treatments —all meant to keep the dear girls in the angel class—indefinitely, abolishing age, wrinkles and all forms of decrepitude with face lifters, mud packs, skin foods and all that sort of thing. About time the men were given a turn and prettied up for the edification of the women—but perhaps the dear critters prefer us in the way we are —just the big rough stuff that moves mountains.

HERE'S A FISH STORY with a Business Moral: "A Naturalist divided an aquarium with a clear glass partition. He put a lusty bass in one section and minnows in the other. The bass would strike every time a minnow approached the glass partition. After three days of fruitless lunging, which nutted him only bruises, he ceased his efforts and subsisted on the food that was dropped in. Then the Naturalist removed the glass partition. The minnows swam all around the bass but he did not strike at a single one. He was thoroughly sold on the idea that business was bad."

You may have heard that story before but it bears repeating, and here is the MORAL:

TAKE ANOTHER SHOT AT THE GLASS PARTITION. MAYBE IT ISN'T THERE ANY MORE.

MAY DAY IS MOVING DAY when many families decide to move new surroundings. In Montreal this is emphasized in remarkable fashion with many movings. Once a year it seems that half the renting population moves and, the other half moves in, and vice versa, making May Day Moving Day an important occasion. A change of surroundings and neighbors may be a good thing after all—both for the movers and the neighbors.

BRITISH STOCK IS WANING in Canada, according to a writer in a current magazine who claims that the French will dominate by 1999. Sez he, "Montcalm lost Canada to the British in 1759. Dr. Stork bids fair to win it back again for the French of 1959. The small group of 80,000 French remaining under British rule in Canada in 1763 has grown to a total of 2,900,000. Canada's birth rate in 1921 was 29.4 per thousand. In 1934 it had declined to 20.9, a 30 per cent loss in thirteen years. While the Canadian birth rate is increasing, but that of British stock is decreasing. There is only one answer to that. Colonizing experiments which have been going on for years in Ontario reveal a determined effort to increase French Canadian population, prestige and influence in this province with the retention of the French language jealously guarded. Nipissing has been one of the most successful fields for French Canadian activity, there being communities there with not a single resident of British stock. However, a super-healthy birth rate is encouraged in all French Canadian communities, large families are the rule and this has been vividly illustrated to the world by the birth of quintuplets to French Canadian parents in Nipissing.

Concludes 12 Years' Ministry Of Rawdon U. C. Circuit

Rawdon—The beloved pastor of Rawdon Circuit in the person of Rev. F. G. Joblin and family have severed their connections with Rawdon circuit of the United Church. Rev. Mr. Joblin has been pastor of Rawdon Circuit for the past 12 years and he has a host of friends who deeply regret his departure and who will feel absolutely lost without his genial smile wherever they gather for a social event as well as church services. Rev. Mr. Joblin was a man of rare ability, as outside of the pulpit he could ably fill the role of master of ceremonies and always kept a program rolling without any dull moments. Among the young people he was a delightful friend and his genial smile and kindly nature did much to keep the three Young People's Societies on the circuit in a flourishing condition. A large percentage of the young people of the circuit have grown up under his tutelage without knowing any other pastor. Then too, a large number have been married and many new babies christened during these years, along with this comes to many sad memories of dear ones who have laid down their work and gone home to glory and always the pastor held out a message of comfort to the bereaved.

The circuit has also been greatly benefitted by the services of Mrs. Joblin, who as long as health permitted was a staunch worker in the Women's Missionary Society and Mission Band and assisted wherever possible with her service of song. And now the circuit has come to the parting of the ways and Rev. J. R. Bechtel of Bay Chenicuit has been officially engaged as the new pastor and friends everywhere are hoping that the Joblin family will enjoy many new friendships wherever they take up their abode. At the present time Mr. Joblin has not accepted any call but he hopes to be located nearer Toronto as four of the family, Messrs. Elgie, Kingsley, Freddie and Miss Gladys are attending Victoria University and Miss Dorothy Joblin is teaching near Wallbridge, Messrs Elgie and Kingsley Joblin hope to graduate as ministers in another year.

The bride was becomingly attired in a Maiaga brown ensemble of navy and white with brown hat and accessories and wore a corsage of Sweetheart Roses and lily of the valley. Mrs. James K. Corr, of Elmira, N. Y., was her sister's bridesmaid. She was attired in a costume of mixed brown shades and wore a corsage of Butterfly roses. Mr. Jack Braiden of Belleville assisted the groom.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the King Edward Hotel to the immediate family. Later the bride and groom left by motor for a trip to Washington and Atlantic City and on their return will take up residence in Elmira, N.Y.

Much credit is due the choristers, as each ably rendered their parts. An enjoyable evening was spent by all present. Lunch was served to the visitors at the close.

Trust Wins Confidence Of Child

Sympathy Parents Lose Their Influence Authority Abates

By LISA GRENELLE

Mrs. Smith opened all of her daughter's mail. She believed in keeping an eye on things. You could never tell what a girl might be up to these days.

When Jane came to see a friend, she often would call up to be sure they were really there. All of Ethel and Evelyn's letters were opened over carefully by mamma. And in the case of a few rather vague and ludicious interruptions might be expected if the visitor stayed too long or appeared ill-mannered. Ethel and Evelyn didn't have many callers—that was the main reason.

They were pretty, vivacious girls, however, and popular, in spite of all their mother's watching to get into trouble eventually. Evelyn with a boy friend, and Ethel with a girl friend, after school. Quite serious trouble, too. Both cases. It was due, apparently, to the fact that neither of the girls, ever told her mother anything and for that they were both a pair of rather unscrupulous little liars.

Taught Them to Lie

Instead of protecting her daughters Mrs. Smith, by her watching and snooping, had only taught her girls to lie, hide and deceive. It always works out that way.

In the first place, even a watchful parent can only protect a child after boyhood, if the child himself allows himself to be protected. And only a child whose confidence has been won in early childhood by the parent will submit to advice from him later on.

Trust grows only from trust, belief only from belief. If a parent proves, as did Mrs. Smith, that she did not trust her children, it immediately arouses the children's suspicion of her.

Mrs. Smith Ethel soon learned to tell their mother nothing. By her distrust of them she had convinced them that they must have some thing to hide, that they were capable of wickedness. By her own example she had also justified them in doing some smacking and snooping on their own account.

Gain Child's Trust

A wise parent often may divert a catastrophe if he knows the situation beforehand. And it is possible sometimes to gather valuable information from personal letters and such. But by far the most telling story of conditions can only come voluntarily from the lips of the child himself. And by employing the first method of obtaining information a parent invariably sacrifices the second.

Only the parent who has gained and retained his child's confidence and Respect can exert any real and lasting influence over his character and activities. Any confidence is never gained through mistrust and spying.

Healthy Skin Behind the Make-Up?

(The Beauty Box)

Kold Gallian

She knows she must keep her complexion healthy, beautiful.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Girls who do a lot of hiazy thinking about pulchritude problems find ways of solving them. They realize makeup is just the frosting on the beauty cake. The real substance is the complexion, which must be kept in a state of health and vitality.

Powder is no help to a dry skin, but the dry-skinned girls use it just the same because that is the good old American custom. Let them ply the cold cream and friction in a massage emollient at night. When dead scales fluff off too rapidly, lubricants will make them see the error of their ways.

Enthusiastic gardeners who are preparing for the summer crop of blooms find that their hobby is hard on hands. We must remind them of the soap suds and corn meal cleansing process which takes black marks out of little knuckles.

Fluff up the suds, add a tablespoon of corn meal, rub the hands together, friction the fingers with the thumb. Then on with the lotion. At night massage with cocoanut oil.

Now that bangs are all the go, you can buy them. You can get them in the form of fringes if you like. Or you can buy real bangsters sewed to wires. The wires are tucked back under your finger waves. You can get permission to bobpins.

There can be no definite rules about the hours of sleep that are required for complete refreshment. Every girl must find out what suits her. The idle individual will be rested after six or seven.

Girls of high school age need nine hours, not one minute less. If they don't get them, their eyes won't sparkle, complexions will go gray, and cosmetics won't be worth half what is paid for them.

CANADIENS MAY DISBAND

Montreal, May'4 (CP)—The hockey world received a shock here last night when Leo Dandurand announced that Montreal Canadiens, local professional hockey club in existence, might ask permission to suspend operations next winter.

The Bleu-Blanc-Rouge this year celebrated its 25th anniversary—it with a loss estimated by Dandurand of between $10,000 and $40,000. Cost of operation this year was cut considerably since 1920 when they purchased the franchise from the late George Kennedy for $11,000. Dandurand said that unless the club is given permission to negotiate with Cleveland or Boston it will ask permission to suspend for a year.

The information had been sent to President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League, Dandurand added.

Each year for the last three seasons the club had lost $10,000 to $40,000, Dandurand said. He considered the contract with the Montreal Forum calling for 40 per cent. had much to do with the losses.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DOES REAL LOVE MAKE JEALOUSY INEVITABLE?

Copyright 1935

King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Can love exist without jealousy? If not, can jealousy be controlled, or must it remain a more or less shrewd poison for both lover and lover

I know that many excellent persons believe that jealousy is a quite unnecessary evil. They will tell you that if you love in the right way, with calmness and self-restraint, the ugly passion of jealousy need never boil up and overflow in its troublesome and messy way.

Perhaps — if you have a sufficiently cool and reasonable temperament. If you haven't, and if you are genuinely in love, my guess is that sooner or later you are sure to experience a few of the celebrated stings of this pitiless monster. It's better, I think, to know this in advance, so as to be able to put up a fight against the monster when the time comes.

The trouble with "Heartsick", whose case I am going to tell you about, is that the poor girl seems to be unable to put up any sort of a fight whatever. Jealousy, therefore, like some hideous disease, is eating her life away.

"I've been married three years," she tells me, "long enough to feel settled and contented. On the contrary, I am restless, miserable, desperate.

"Don't think for a moment I want to be divorced. I adore my husband. I love him in a common times less, I might have no problem. But this is the way things are—

"Jack is salesman for a company that sells electric wares. Half of every week he is away from me. I have no proof that he isn't perfectly faithful. But every minute he is gone, but I cannot make myself trust him. He is too good-looking. Girls like him too much. It is too easy to deceive me.

"Then all the time that he is away I imagine him making love to other women. He is killing me. I have an idea that other people know the truth about this. I imagine that I see it in their faces. Now and then I have a scene with Jack and force him to confess everything. Does that help things? Of course, it doesn't.

"Shall I leave him? Or shall I insist on his giving up this job, even though I know he probably couldn't get another? I beg you to help me."

Baseless jealousy of this sort will in time convert the happiest marriage into an unendurable torture. No man can continue to love a girl who shows continual signs of this nature. The unhappy child is undermining her own house of life.

For occasional spasms of jealousy, anybody may be forgiven. Perhaps they are flattering rather than insulting. But habitual suspicion is another matter.

Since there is nothing of which "Heartsick" can accuse her husband, it is her own reform that she must undertake. If she cannot succeed in immediately routing all suspicion out of her heart, she must at least act as if she had. Why give up a fine husband and a happy marriage because she herself has formed a bad habit?

I am sure that when she once faces things in this way, "Heartsick's" intelligence and character will see her through.

Correct Manners

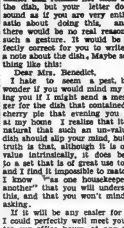
TACTFUL NOTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Over six months ago I invited a young lady to dinner and when she left, I gave her something to take home with her, and mentioned that I would like her to return the dish. Up to date she has not done so. The dish has no money value but belongs to a set of serving dishes which I would like to keep intact. Now should I write a letter to her? Could I suggest meeting her after work, (we both are employed), or would that be too much trouble to my home I met her in a very unusual way and she is hard to talk to.

H.



Of course you could invite her to dinner and remind her then about the dish, but your letter doesn't sound as if you are very enthusiastic about doing this, and so there would be no real reason for such a gesture. It would be perfectly correct for you to write her a note about the dish, Maybe something like this:

Dear Mrs. Benedict,

I hate to seem a pest, but I wonder if you would send me my serving pie if I might send a messenger for it. I am so ashamed the cherry pie that evening you were at my home I realize that it was natural that I should use a medium dish should slip your mind, but the truth is that, although it is of no value intrinsically, it does belong to a set that is of great use to me. And if I find it impossible to call for it I know you are housekeeper to appreciate why I am undertaking this, and that you won't mind my asking.

If it will be any easier for you, I could perfectly well meet you after one of your office hours, at any place and time that are convenient to you.

And please, Mrs. Benedict, do forgive me for asking about this, so

How to Curb Anxiety in A Child

Writer Tells Parents Apprehension May Often Be Harmful

By LISA GRENELLE

Anxiety, like anger, creates and releases poisonous fluids through out the body. It is not a question of sensitiveness but of science that worry is definitely detrimental to physical as well as mental health.

Children who worry do not sleep soundly and is inclined to nightmares. He gives way easily to nerves, irritability and temper.

Children are born apprehensive. Some sensitive children require an apprehensive habit of mind; apparently small provocation, but never without any provocation at all.

The initial cause of a child's anxiety is sometimes hard to trace. Children are often retentive. Then too, the reason for a child's apprehension often will seem absurd and trifle to an adult.

Reasure Him

If your child shows a tendency to undue anxiety, either by the trend of his questions, his actions or his response to any small daily happenings, give him calm and reassurance to reassure him. Coax back his sense of security by your own calm. Do not underestimate though the initial cause for his habit of worry may be discovered.

Frequently children are instructed not to "worry mother" by commands, by quote, or by taking their departure without leaving word as to their destination and hour of return. The yet how seldom does it occur to any parent to offer similar comfort and ease to his child?

Most adults, even devoted and otherwise intelligent parents, seem to suffer under the illusion that children don't worry about such things. If mother or father is not coming home for dinner, often it is considered important that their grandmother and the maid be informed of the fact in good season. No one thinks to pass on the news to Jimmie or Janie.

Avoid Apprehension

Of course, under ordinary circumstances it would be absurd and unnecessary for mother to be obliged to inform eight-year-old Jimmie or eleven-year-old Janie of her every destination and hour of return. It is a child's business.

But every parent should show his children that the habit of detailing them know, as they would any adult, if their expected hours-come mother must be delayed.

If a child asks his parent where he is going and what time expects to return, unless he is obviously being impertinent, answer him fully. This is especially important in the evening, when all children are more inclined to apprehension.

MILITARY NOTES

The turnout of the Argyll Light Infantry last night was the largest since the present drilling commenced. Nearly 200 were on parade. Lt.-Col. Geen was in command. The drill was chiefly in preparation for the turnout on Monday to assist in the commemoration of the Jubilee of the King's Jubilee.

On Monday evening the Sergeants of the Regiment will be at home in the officers' and sergeants' and sergeants at their commodious room in the Armouries. A special programme of entertainment is being prepared.

The regiment will leave here on Friday the 31st. inst., for a four days' camp at Coboburg. This camp is eagerly anticipated by officers and men of the regiment.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"The Winning Ticket"
The story of a man who won a fortune, but couldn't buy his happiness in!

The Irish and the Italians get together in a big way in the hilarious pot-pourri of trial and tribulation that marks "The Winning Ticket," uproarious comedy-drama revolving about the Irish Sweepstakes.

The picture, which opens Monday at the Capitol Theatre, introduces a new comedy team in the persons of Lee Carrillo and Louise Fazenda, with Pat Healy adding to the fun in the role of a shiftless Irishman.

The action of "The Winning Ticket," begins with the purchase by Carrillo and Miss Fazenda of a sweepstakes ticket which turns out to be the prize winner. The lady loses the ticket and then the fun becomes fast and furious as the Italian barber and his family hunt for the missing cardboard, borrow against it, fight for it and then solve their problems in a hilarious denouement.

The highlights include the secret purchase of the ticket, Carrillo's frantic search for it, the delight, then Miss Fazenda, the loss of the ticket by the barber, the financial reconstruction of this, the romance between Miss Fazenda and Healy, the quarrels between Miss Fazenda and her brother-in-law as played by Pat Healy, the finding of the ticket, the screamingly funny jail denouement.

"Successful Failure"

In these days of communist sedition, strikes, strife and general economic unrest, it is refreshing for a change to see a motion picture that gives a sympathetic interpretation to the aims of institutions, and individuals that are the target of the radical element.

Such a picture is "A Successful Failure", the amusing feature will be shown as a companion feature on this week program with William Collier, Sr. and Lucille Gleason heading the cast.

AT THE BELLE
"Clive of India"

Select Attractions Secured For Belle, Patrons During Jubilee Week

Manager Forhan has announced that the Belle Theatre is making special plans to co-operate with the local committee in commemorating the Silver Jubilee of Their Most Gracious Majesties King George V and Queen Mary.

The management of the theatre is preparing a lavish feast of entertainment for Jubilee week which will bring enjoyment to all. The theatre is co-operating with other local organizations in planning a week of gay festivities and all citizens will be given an opportunity of expressing their loyalty and devotion to King and Queen and the glorious empire of which we are proud to be an important part. As a tribute to this joyous occasion the Belle Theatre is presenting their program for Jubilee week: Ronald Colman and Loretta Young in the romantic adventure story "Clive of India" which is the feature offering at the Belle today, Monday and Tuesday, matinee and evening. It is a stirring historical picture of engrossing interest and thrilling drama and other shorts treats.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, "Chums", another delightful British Miniature has been booked by Manager Forhan as the most sensational musical offerings ever presented in the Belle, and it must be remembered that the popular playhouse holds and enviable reputation for presenting only attractions in the past, the latest is Gaumont British's production starring Clive Chevalier, Ann Sothern and Merle Oberon, manager Forhan promises a real entertainment treat this attraction. Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen are scheduled for the same program in "Under Pressure" a drama-packed picture of a submarine crew that will be appeared in.

It is anticipated the Royal-Jubilee celebrations will be the greatest in the history of the Belle Theatre of any nation. The achievements of our great Empire will be given extensive publicity and will receive pride and praise. Their Majesties have been on the throne of Great Britain throughout the most critical quarter of a century in the history of the commonwealth of nations and their unswerving devotion to duty has won the admiration of all their subjects.

The commemoration of this occasion Manager Forhan and the staff of the Belle Theatre have caused to be prepared a collection to be displayed elsewhere in this newspaper. "Let us not forget" and "Let us for the sterling achievements of our Rulers, Their Most Gracious Majesties King George V and Queen Mary,—who have so nobly served the British Empire, and exemplified the traditions of Empire and helped us toward a lasting prosperity and the preservation of peace." This is signed by the management and staff of the Belle Theatre.

The institutions come in for their share of praise when Collier, as Elmer Cudlipp, a prosperous father, comes to the fore to rescue his wife and daughter from the evil devices of a group of radical agitators who had used the young man's innocent artistry to lead a mob to violence.

Nor is the cast the only member of the family who feels Kirby's kindly repercussions. Baby Jane, seven years old, is given much opportunity to display her talents in humor, he persuades his beautiful daughter to forego a first with Broadway fame and settle down with a hard working newspaper reporter.

The whole thing comes about when Elmer loses his job as a news writer, and, afraid to tell his family of his misfortune, goes to work as a day laborer, but he spends his time in a frantic search for employment. Finally, through a streak of good luck he accidently finds himself a famous radio speaker, and proceeds to bring about the gradual reform in his home environment.

WESTERN CROP REPORT

Winnipeg, Man., May 4.—Spring has arrived over the whole of the crop growing area of Western Canada is from 48 to 14 days later than at the same time last year. Seeding, however, became general on May 1, and in some districts in the south and north central parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, where the season is more than as east as last seeding about four or five days. Moisture conditions are good, with a slight reduction in acreage sown to wheat but about the same total acreage sown to barley and oats. Horsepower is a problem in many districts, although there is no scarcity in numbers, horses are generally reported to stand a strenuous seeding season, according to the first weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railways, Canadian National Railways, Manitoba seeding is now in full swing. Moisture conditions reported from practically all areas, both surface and sub-soil, are good to excellent as last year and are considered sufficient to start germination of seed. Control measures in preparation for any grasshopper infestation are being undertaken and there has been cool with frosts and in more northerly districts some snowflurries have prevailed.

Weather Variable

In southern Saskatchewan weather has been variable. A severe frost storm was reported last week from a district bordering on Carlyle in the east to Swift Current on the west. Snow fell equalled in intensity any of the worst ones of last winter. There was general movement in this territory this year. From other districts some rain has been reported.

Though Central Saskatchewan seeding is from 5 to 10 days later than average and from this territory come reports that it is too wet to make a start, comparison in wheat acreage between this year and last. From Asquith through Waterous to Biggar a general rain has fallen and seeding will likely be turned to snow on the morning of May 5.

This will delay seeding operations for a further 4 or 5 days. Similar rains and snow is reported from Battleford, Rosetown, Kroose, Kindersley and Consuper subdivisions. Surface moisture is therefore ample for the present.

Prospects Unreasonable

Along all subdivisions constituting the Peace River country winter has been cold and unseasonable. Little work has been done on the land as yet and seeding as a general for a week or ten days. Fall wheat in the Spirit River block wintered well and feed supplies are ample.

Around the Drumheller, Oyen, Stettler, Three Hills subdivisions of Alberta weather has been cold and cloudy with scattered light showers and snow. Spring work is backward and moisture conditions are better than for some years. In Central Alberta weather has been very cold with frosty nights. Snow has just recently melted and the ground in many places is not dry enough to work. In others, moisture conditions are excellent.

From the Peace River country come reports that land generally is blanketed with from six inches to two feet of snow and spring work has been done as yet and as only ten percent of ploughing was done last year. Fall wheat is considerable seed will be stubbled in this spring.

Cattle markets in Western Canada showed a slight lowering in prices last week due to pulling cattle into a week ago. Supplies this week have been light and the demand and if receipts maintain their present dimensions there can be no doubt of price movement except for good weighty well-finished lambs and sheep. The hog market is a little more optimistic with a price strengthening of ten cent per hundredweight.

Automobile Accidents

Are frequent and while at the rate of about one in every day does not mean that there are men constantly employed in the district adjusting these accidents, and they have been quite busy. They can generally be found at home. Telephone us and we will see that you are covered at once.

BLOSSOM SUNDAY DELAYED

St. Catharine, May 4—(CP)—Continued cold weather has forced postponement of Blossom Sunday in the Niagara fruit district one week until May 13, it was announced today Ordinarily to Queenston agreeing that, will be no blossoms out this week-end.

This is, perhaps, the question most frequently asked by the investor today. A correct answer is vital to the holder of bonds in this period; therefore it will be well to look well over the past few years—from 1928 on to the present day.

A clear picture of the movement of bond prices compared with that of stock prices is seen in the graph above. Observe that bond prices reached a high in February 1932 and thereafter declined, reaching the low point for this period in September 1929. This declining period corresponded precisely with the period of excessive stock prices.

The period in which business was plainly top-heavy. In 1930 there was another upward movement in bond prices, which corresponded with declining money rates. The decline in money rates and the rise in bond prices were interrupted in the autumn of 1931 by disturbed international affairs which, for a time, so demoralized security markets that normal laws did not apply. However, by spring in 1932 the downward swing in money rates and accompanying rise in prices of fixed interest bearing securities is again apparent. These trends have continued until Canadian bond prices have now reached an ALL TIME HIGH.

Examples follow:

	Price 1932	Price 1935	Rise in % age Approx.
Dominion of Canada 4½% 1960	92.65	111.75	19.10	20.6
Can. Nat. Pwr. Dom. Gtd 4½% 1957	86.75	113.75	26.00	27.96
T. Eaton Realty Co. Ltd., 5% 1946	81.00	100.50	19.50	24.07
Hamilton By-Products Coke Co. 7% 1943	64.00	100.50	36.50	57.03
Canada Cement Co. 5½% 1947	64.00	100.50	36.50	57.03
Wabasso Cotton Co. 7% 1943	62.50	108.50	44.00	70.40
Howard Smith Paper Mills, 5½% 1950	69.50	101.25	44.00	63.76

Note in the graph that when stock prices were at their peak, bond prices were at their bottom. Today, with bonds at an all-time high, stock prices are still relatively low. The conclusion must be reached that bonds cannot go much higher relatively at present levels but will ultimately decline as the increase in industrial activity, which is now being felt, becomes more general. As recovery progresses, bond prices will continue to advance.

The above information relates only one of the influences affecting bond prices, and takes no account of the threatened inflationary movements —another very important factor.

Never in the past have conditions been so favourable for the bondholder to commit his funds into well entrenched equities. Proper equities are those companies in certain basic industries more favourably situated than others which will thereby be less handicapped by definitely adverse backgrounds. The conservative investor, therefore, gradually lighten any preponderance of bond investments and accumulate equities of our well managed conservatively operated companies.

Bigger and Fennell Limited, Limited prepared the above for Corporate Investors Limited, Toronto.

Blinding headlights are attributed to be the cause of a motor accident, that occurred about one mile west of Belleville about 11.00 p. m. last night. Traffic Officer Harris investigated and found that a motor car being driving east driven by L. W. McClennan of Hamilton collided with an automobile being driven in the opposite direction by Mr. D. May of Toronto. Mr. McClennan claimed he was blinded by the headlights on the oncoming vehicle. The two left from wheels of the motor cars crashed. HOPE IS FORESEEN OF GERMAN PACT

Berlin Reaction to Words of MacDonald Lacks Bitterness

By GEO. HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 4 (C.P. Cable) — After the storm and stress of the last few weeks, hopes which grew today—on the eve of the Royal Jubilee—as an agreement with Germany.

Hamblin's calm reaction to Prime Minister MacDonald's statement in parliament is in marked contrast with previous events.

The Times points out while Premier MacDonald was urging an agreement on air strength General Hermann Goering, Reich Minister of Air, spontaneously expressed entire concurrence.

"Here," said the Times, "is one of the points of agreement of which it is hoped the British Government will not fail to take advantage by the utmost possible frankness all around essential."

E.W. MORSE WINS BENNETT AWARD

Kingston Graduate of Queen's Will go to Geneva

Kingston, May 4.—(CP)—Graduates in Arts and Science, totalling approximately 300, were announced as Queen's University today.

Principal Taylor announced as if they could talk our language. You take care of your own case and we will take care of ours."

You would naturally suppose that a camp of one hundred and fifty men with a workshop two miles long and a business that requires the terrific noise of blasting work continually, to say nothing of scattering it over the surrounding landscape as well as the hundreds of other noises heretofore foreign to the region. I say you would naturally suppose that the wild creatures would run us like the plague. Not so with our birds and small animals.

Birds Build Nest.

Black birds are now busy building their nests in the big willows and dogwood bordering the swamp as close to the men working as they can get. Robins are continually pecking to get ready to raise a family saying, "make all the disturbance you like, this is our home" meer camping ground and you can't have us anywhere.

A pair of naturally timid little phoebes have chosen the top of a brick out chimney where operations to build their nest. Robins are building right in the camp and a pair of groundhogs have not shown any disposition to desert their comfortable home in the side of a hill exactly twelve feet from the rear wall of the bunkhouse. Even a pair of old "Porkie" continues to dine sumptuously every day on the tender bark of the topmost limbs of a tree beside the work saying "shoot away if you like, I am not going up for the rocks to hit me." Partridge just walk or hop out of our way and seem to know that we have not one ack man in camp.

Bury the Hatchet.

Camp rivals buried the hatchet on Sunday and selected a baseball team up of both Ottawa Senators and Wellington House Bear Cats to oppose the St. Ola Club Hopper, the leading team of North Hastings. Each team in full uniform made the beautiful diamond at St. Ola and we are happy to report that the camp boys gave a brilliant exhibition against a team of no mean ability. It would be hard to single out any particular player for special mention although Al Schwager probably distinguished himself most noticeably by virtue of a brilliant double play executed behind the home run.

Jack Sawault and Rene Gouraze also distinguished themselves at bat. The pitching assignals was well handled by Wesley Benn (just recovered from the measles) and Slim Harris.

The final score after the full nine innings was twenty-one to nil in favor of good old camp No. 3.

P.S.—Mind Murray of course was the brilliant catcher of the camp team.

NEGOTIATIONS ARE WANTED FIRST

Striking Workers Adamant as to Action to be Taken

Toledo, Ohio., May 4.—(AP)—Union strike leaders stood firmly on their demand for negotiations with Chevrolet Motor officials before striking workers return to the factories, which have been closed nearly two weeks ago, throwing 32,000 auto workers in the United States out of work.

Edward F. McGrady, first Assistant Secretary of Labor in Washington and Thomas J. Williams, Federal Conciliator, moved their offices to Toledo operations here from Detroit today.

Union leaders heard their proposal for ending the strikes last night, but took no action.

J. Dillon, organizer for the American Federation of Labor in the automobile Industry, said the proposal provided for the resumption of negotiations when the men return to work. Strike leaders demand the negotiations first.

Nature Unfolds at The Northern Road Camps

Steenburg, May 4 (Special)—The most wonderful object lesson in the study of birds and animals is daily by the wild creatures of the woods and fields. Fire Never Reached Quarters Where She Resided Quebec, May 4— (CP) — Panic stricken as fire raced through the flat beneath her home, Mrs. J. Lamontagne, 60, leaped from a third story window today and was fatally injured. Her flame never reached the Lamontagne's quarters on the second and third storeys of the building.

Mrs. Lamontagne died of internal injuries as she reached a hospital. Armand had a broken leg and Robert only a sprained ankle.

The fire broke out in the groundfloor flat of J. Blanchet. Mrs. Lamontagne and her sons were awakened by the sharp small of wood smoke. Firemen reported they had shouted up to the Lamontagnes not to jump as they would erect ladders in a moment to bring them down, but the woman and her sons were apparently in the grip of a panic and jumped.

PREMIER BENNETT NON-COMMITTAL

Fresh Interest Created in European Situation by Statement

London, May 3 (CP Cable) — Canada has not undertaken, and is not undertaking, any new commitments in Europe, that, it is learned, is Prime Minister R. B. Bennett's general attitude in discussions with members of the British cabinet on the international situation.

Fresh interest in the extent to which the Dominion are ready to support Great Britain in her efforts to keep the peace of Europe was aroused today by the remark of Sir Austen Chamberlain, former Foreign Secretary.

He said if Germany refused to return to the family of nations and sought to impose her will, "she will find this country in her path and with this country, that great free Commonwealth . . . which centres around it, and she will have met a force, that once again will be her master."

Prime Minister Bennett himself has made no public statement on the matter since the Empire Premiers met members of the cabinet and were informed of British foreign policy. Since the treaty of Versailles and subsequent creation of the League of Nations, the traditional policy of successive Canadian Governments has been not to accept obligations additional to those assumed by all adhering to the League Government. Prime Minister Bennett, it is understood, is following the same policy.

WOMAN'S DEATH RESULT OF FALL

Coroner's Inquest Render Verdict in Death on Friday

Death as the result of an accident was the substance of the coroner's inquest jury called to look into the death of Mrs. Elvinia Scale, 55, of Toronto, who fell from an abutment at the C.N.R. station at Trenton, on the night of April 27th, last and subsequently died in the Belleville General Hospital. The inquest was held at the police court room by Coroner Dr. R. W. Tennent last night under the direction of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

Following the identification of the body by the deceased woman's husband, Dr. J. W. Farley told of being called to the Trenton C.N.R. station on the evening of April 27th, where he found Mrs. Scale "sitting" on the side of an embankment. "She was apparently badly injured but conscious, when I arrived. She told me she started down the cement abutment, but that she did not remember anything further. I had her removed to the Belleville Hospital, after rendering what assistance possible," concluded Dr. Farley.

Dr. W. C. Morgan was the next witness and told of the cause of death. "The deceased had five ribs broken, all close to the spinal column. She died as the result of a shock," stated Dr. Morgan. Other material evidence was submitted by persons who found the deceased woman lying unconscious at the foot of the abutment.

The coroner's jury was impanelled by Sergeant Arthur Booth and consisted of the following:—Messrs. Ed. George, Chas. Walters, A. Schryver, Thos. Hutchinson, Thos. Holland, Wm. Harden, Rich. Philbin and Robt. Moore.

HOLLOWAY STREET W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of Holloway Street W.M.S. was held Wednesday, May 1st, in the church parlour with a goodly crowd in attendance regardless of inclement weather manifesting the keen interest felt by all.

The opening hymn, "Spirit of God descend upon our heart" was followed with prayer by Mrs. Newman. Various items of business occupied and business disposed of as Mrs. Harold Woodley, leader of Group 3 took the chair, calling the meeting to order by use of hymn, "Jesus calls us o'er the tumult." The prayer and scripture lesson found in Matthew, 5th chapter, 1-16 verses was given by the leader.

Mrs. Newman, the peace secretary gave some facts showing the study and thought put into this subject to gain the information best suited for the needs of today. The devotional leaflet "The Circle of Friendship" was beautifully portrayed by Mrs. Moynes.

Mrs. Harold Howard sang "My Mother's Prayer" very effectively at this time as the guest speaker gave her address as follows:

Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth explained the origin of Mothers' Day, giving the name of Miss Anna Jains who had been the first to observe it, 1908. She expressed a beautiful thought that we may well pause to pay honour to her, who next to Jesus Christ is "God's best gift to man—Mothers". The object of the day is declared to be, first, to honour the memory of mothers who have passed on; second, to brighten the lives of those who remain. Some great men have great fathers but all great men have great mothers. Tribute was paid by an aged minister in his 90th year to Mother.

"God came to me first in my mother. He could not come in any other way to bless me, so He put his love and tenderness and purity and sweetness into my mother and she revealed Him to me." The vote of thanks moved by Mrs. Denton expressed the gratitude of the Society for the interesting talk so graciously given by Mrs. Farnsworth. The closing hymn "I need Thee every hour" was followed by the Benediction pronounced by Mrs. Woodley as the social half-hour was enjoyed with Group 3 serving refreshments.

Calgary, May 4 (CP) — The "meanest man in town" was sought today. He set fire last night to a huge pile of timber Calgary Boy Scouts had gathered to burn Monday night as one of a chain of bonfires across Canada in celebration of the King George Silver Jubilee.

If you want a truly modern car at the lowest cost, be wise—choose a Master Chevrolet! Here is why:

Chevrolet is the only lowest-priced car of 1935 that gives you a full complement of 1935 features!

The new TURRET TOP roof construction, for example.—Do you realize that no other car in Chevrolet's class offers you this modern, overhead protection of solid, seamless steel?

Then there's KNEE-ACTION. Do you know that the Master Chevrolet is the only low-priced automobile that gives you the Knee-Action "gliding ride"—and balanced weight in the rear?

That is only mentioning two of Chevrolet's five outstanding, and exclusive features. We could go on to talk about Cable-Controlled Brakes—Fisher No-Draft Ventilation—and the Blue Flame Engine.

But if you will simply demand the modern protection of a solid steel roof above you—and the modern riding ease of Knee-Action wheels under you—you can't go wrong in choosing your next new car. You'll choose a Master Chevrolet, for quality that is all the more modern because the cost is so low!

Wrestlers, Fans and Referee Mix Freely Outside Ring as 'Bad Man' Dunlop Wins Bout

Walter Parnell Works in Last Fall With Broken Thumb

PEARL IS WINNER

In Preliminary 'Go' Slavik is Best Against Wilkins

Al Dunlop retained his villain wrestling title in Belleville last night when he beat Walter Parnell in the main bout of the Kiwanis Club's charity wrestling show at the arena, but not until the feature attraction of the night had terminated in a free-for-all. Even after Dunlop had pinned Parnell's shoulders to the mat for the final fall, the former still continued his rough style attitude and with a gesture of indifference kicked Parnell as he lay prone on the canvas. Referee Wells intervened and Dunlop turned his attacks upon him in his effort to official bodily across the ring. Parnell, realizing his foe, attempted to assist the official and all three tumbled from the ring, the bout being over, and backed into the three-way fracas. Dunlop, the villain of the fastest and roughest exhibitions of wrestling seen locally in some time, Jack Pearl, the Canadio favorite, won the semi-final bout against Sed Dalla, the Italian Bandsman. Pearl taking the odd fall of three in an exciting fray.

Main Bout Opens Show.

The main bout opened with both Dunlop and Parnell going methodically about their duties and demonstrating many orthodox holds. Subsequently Dunlop reverted to his rough tactics using illegal holds such as the strangle hold, when Referee Parnell became angered and tossed Dunlop bodily from the ring and when he returned Parnell again picked the burly villain up in a "giant swing" pinned Dunlop to the mat with a body slam. Dunlop opened the second fall with a flying look that Referee Wells was forced to break through. Legal procedure and Dunlop becoming enraged punched the official and later threw him bodily from the ring. Parnell followed and a general free-for-all, including spectators, ensued. Here but eventually the gladiators returned to the canvas and renewed activities to have Dunlop take the second fall following a series of heavy body slams left Parnell practically helpless on the mat and nursing a dislocated thumb. The final round opened rather pugnaciously with both men using elbow smashes interspersed with the odd well placed fist. Parnell tried to bolt Dunlop's stomach without success and then picked the badman up bodily with an aeroplane spin, but his balance as he dashed Dunlop to the mat, with Badman Al Dunlop reversing the fall to slam Parnell's shoulders to the mat for the last fall. It was following this that Dunlop ticked the prostrate Parnell, Referee Wells intervened and the donnybrook ensued.

Pearl Shows Class.

The semi-final bout of the evening saw Jack Pearl, the people's favorite, take the odd fall in three over Jack Dallas, the pudgy Italian villain. Pearl won the initial fall with the aeroplane scissors while Dalla took the second fall with a leg lock and toe hold. Both grapplers tried hard to get the final fall and battled without caution, although Dallas repeatedly demonstrated outward feelings of disgust when Pearl used his well-planned holds. Pearl eventually won the final fall with a punishing leg scissors.

Jim Wilkins of Montreal not only lost the applause of the fans but the opening bout against Frank Slavik of Hungary when the former resorted to villain tactics while the suave Slavik methodically resorted to orthodox holds to win with the famous "Indian Death Lock" hold, the first time it was ever demonstrated in a local ring. These boys gave a pleasant display of modern wrestling and left the ring amid loud applause, their bout resulting in many (the hole being exemplified, but the Dunlop-Parnell main bout literally had the fans standing in their seats with excitement, especially as the gladiators in the main fracas resorted to rough punishing tactics. Despite the fact that Dunlop retained his undefeated string of local victories a return match between the two would be a major attraction for the Kiwanis Club's return bout next Friday.

Not content to commit mayhem under the guise of wrestling without the aid of lethal weapons, they're starting to toss the ring-side "props" when they go into a clinch in Pacific coast wrestling circles. For instance, in the center of this Hollywood ring—the left—is Victor Jabby Trichy trying to crack the luckless pate of "Lord" Landswove with a chair. Lane to probe a bit downe, who claims to be a British nobleman, and enters the ring with a monocle, is being restrained by the referee after an exchange of "chair" amenities. Just playful little sidelights to a slash by the contestors, but the resulting commission decided that the bout was not on the up and up, and they are going

If local wrestling fans desire action they surely were treated to a real exhibition of rough, free-for-all antics last night at the arena. When the local Kiwanis Club signed Walter Parnell to meet that villain Al Dunlop they made little mistake despite the fact Dunlop retained his rough-house title locally. Incidentally the main bout furnished in a donnybrook, into which even the fans were drawn as well as Referee Wells and the two contestants who battled it out with fists outside the ring after Dunlop had gained the final fall. Two serious injuries were sustained by the grappling duo, Parnell dislocated his thumb and Dunlop received a handful of sand in his eye, delivered from the hands of an irritated fan. (This last practice should not be tolerated as more serious trouble may result from this sand-throwing.) All in all last night's bouts were "red hot" and proved a much better following than they originally afforded, judging from their reception, a return bout between Parnell and Dunlop would be the most acceptable by the fans.

Young Slovik is also a crowd pleaser as is Pearl.

At the last minute the Peterboro "Sea Horses" engaged the Toronto Yachtsmen for a double-header on May 6, that is when the Smith's Falls series blew up and now we hear the Kingston boys are angling for a pre-season series with the same calimber of opposite. If the Pires could not meet the financial arrangements demanded by the Smith's Falls club we cannot see how the Ponies can. But then, yes never can tell. In the meantime and if weather conditions permit, the Belleville crowd will stage an impromptu game at the Fair Grounds here on Monday in a straight contest between the Regulars and the Yannigans. Now it seems Coach Bradshaw and Manager Young will divide the club into two teams, one consisting of the tried and proven players and the other of aspiring players, but the latter will have the services of the team's two best hurlers and catcher Jim Barclay. The Regulars will be composed of such players as Sonny Green, Dean Ford, Alex Weir, Cecil McIlroy, Lionel Blaker, Earl Darrah, Earl Gray and a couple of others while Jack Williams and A. Calhoun will step to the mound to hurl against these players. If you're nothing more to do and it's not too cold drop to the ball yard and look the 1935 edition of the Stewart-Warners over.

Out in Peterboro their sport scribe is just bubbling over with enthusiasm and optimism, as a matter of fact he informs his readers of both their nickel and dimes until next fall when the Petes (pardon, the Sea Horses) are a sure bet to be the O.B.A.A. senior finals. Our little city contemporary informs his readers that it's all over except the shouting, as he can see no opposition for their "hitting, fielding, pitching team" as he dubs them. Of course he admits the Peterboro club has been building, constructing and what not for the past five years and now are counting their chickens before they are hatched. "It looks as though it's going to be a rough road to the O.O.B.A. pennant this year, so we be careful you don't puncture a tire enroute and then there will be no banquet at the Empress",

"Open house" has been declared at the Y.M.C.A. for the showing of the bathing pictures "Bathing" by courtesy of the General Motors tonight. Each and every detail of the picture is announced by Ted Hussing as the narrator in his accustomed manner regarding the art of baseball. All of those interested in witnessing the showing of this unique galaxy of big league diamond stars in their various acts are advised to be on hand promptly at 7 p.m. as the picture only runs 30 minutes. All baseball minded people in this community should make a special effort to be present and wish this really worth-while picture, grats. Although the picture is sponsored by General Motors, it was through the efforts of President Hugh Brown of the Oshawa club that the showing was made possible.

Commencing at 3 p.m. this afternoon the C.O.B.I. executive open their last league meeting before the season gets under way on May 24. Some time ago the Peterboro meeting expressed a desire to open the season at home versus the Stewart-Warners. Naturally the latter resented anything that might deprive them of their opening game and have promptly nothing more was heard from the littlest city, but the matter passed out of existence so rapidly we have been wondering if the Petes intend to suddenly reopen the matter today. 'Tis hoped not, as the "Tigers" will battle any such suggestion to the last ditch. Besides the question of a schedule don't be at all surprised if a change in the system of umpires also takes place and the league will adopt the old method of neutral umpires.

In order to complete their schedule before Victoria Day, the Wall Street Leaguers are playing a double header on Monday at the College Field, one game in the morning and the other in the evening. Incidentally the College Hill Club will be busy during in both contests on Monday, first versus the Leaders and then in a twilight fixture against the S.R.A.C. The play-offs of the Wall Street loop will take place on May 20 and 23 while the regular senior district league in the O.A.S.A. will open on May 24.

Matchmaker Clem Allen had Howard Wheeler taper off his training last night and the "little atom of energy" is quite ready to step Kingston bout with Mel Gilonna on Monday night. Incidentally Clem Allen is bringing a real top-notcher to Belleville for Wheeler on May 15.

In connection with the local King's Jubilee holiday celebration in Belleville the local baseball teams are unofficially ushering in the season Monday morning, at the Fair Grounds all four local junior teams will play in a double header, while in the afternoon the seniors will hold sway in an impromptu game.

Pirates Skid to Seventh Place While Brooklyn Dodgers Cling To Second Rung Behind Giants

Dodgers Need More Hurling to be Pennant Possibility

GIANTS WIN

Nearly All Scheduled Games in Both Loops Rained Out

Casey Stengel, who lacks much of the professional optimism of a baseball manager, admits that his Dodgers need a lot more good pitching than they have now if they're going places in the National League this season. But considering their limitations, they've done pretty well so far, leading the pack and now holding firmly to second place.

Even if they don't stay up there, the Dodgers seem prone to make trouble for the other clubs when Van Lingle Mungo is on the mound. So far this spring the mighty right hander has gone the full route five times, winning three games and losing two.

Walton Clark has been the only other consistent member of the Brooklyn flinging corps, chalking up three straight victories in his relief and spot starting effort. Johnny Babich has formed in a couple of good efforts and Cot ver Penn, while Dutch Leonard and Ray Benge have failed to produce as starting pitchers.

Mungo had his troubles yesterday when the Dodgers met the Pittsburgh Pirates at the start of the western invasion of the league's eastern members, but came through impressively. Not only did the big Southern Carolinian outpitch the even bigger Jim Weaver but he took matters into his own hands to drive in the winning run.

Pirates Now Seventh.

The Pirates, skidding into seventh place, collected only six hits off Mungo but they beat Lee Handley a single by Babe Herman, the former Dodger hero, a force-out and Fred Vaughn's double for a fourth inning run. That looked like enough to win it, however, when Weaver began to wabble in the seventh. Danny Taylor and Joe Stripp opened the inning with a pass to the former scored after Al Lopez's fly. Mungo then smashed a base hit through Cookie Lavagetto to bring Stripp in from second.

It still took a great heave by Russ Boyle in the ninth to keep the Bucs down. With one out and runners on first and third, Boyle grabbed Tommy Thevenow's fly and made a perfect peg to double Gus Suhr at the plate. Despite the victory the Dodgers couldn't gain on the idle Chicago Cubs who walloped Cincinnati 8-3 in the only other major league game. Lon Warneke pitched hurling a six-hit game that might have been even better but for a double in the final inning, the Giants cut loose with a 16-hit barrage against Benny Frey, Hal Kelleher and Leroy Herrmann that brought an easy victory. The blows included Mel Ott's sixth home run of the season, tying him with Dolph Camilli and Johnny Moore of the Phillies and Zeke Bonura of the White Sox for the big league lead, and Joe Moore's fourth.

Rain and cold weather wiped out the remaining National League games and the full American League schedule, giving some teams a welcome opportunity to get over the siege of illness and injuries that has laid up two pennant aces, Joe McCarthy of the Yankees and Jimmy Wilson of the Phils and a good many of their hired hands.

STRIKERS REJECT AGREEMENT MADE

Return to Work When Agreement For Season Concluded

LEAD ALL STRIKERS . . . . . .

Ottawa, May 4 (CP)—Minister of Labor W. A. Gordon announced today the dispute between longshoremen in the port of Montreal and the Shipping Federation, which resulted in the men going on strike on Wednesday, was settled at a conference in Montreal this morning.

Montreal, May 4 (CP)—A provincial agreement reached last night by ship owners and representatives of 2200 longshoremen, who walked out from their jobs Wednesday was emphatically rejected when submitted to the membership at large of the Union at a meeting today.

The temporary agreement was to run till May 26, while negotiations went on for a contract covering the entire shipping season. The striking members of the syndicalist longshoremen of Montreal howled their decision at the proposal at the meeting today and declared that they would not return to work till an agreement for the whole season was concluded.

The vote against the provincial agreement was unanimous.

Gale want all our demands, and we'll give them our first offer later," C. Bugold, Secretary of the Union, announced at the close of the meeting.

Decision Forwarded

The latest decision of the men not to return to work was immediately forwarded to the ship owners, who are losing $60,000 a day through the walkout. It has been unofficially estimated that if delayed the owners would call another meeting to decide on possibility of new proposals to be placed before the longshoremen.

One passenger liner, the Ascania, sailed for England this morning, but the thousands of tons of foodstuffs and freighters were tied at their docks, unable to load or discharge cargoes because of the complete tie-up of the waterfront.

ADDRESSES CLUB ON CONVENTION

Reports Discussions at Home and School Clubs' Meeting

Picton—Mrs. Murphy, President of the Women's Council, Kingston, who attended the Easter Convention of the Ontario Home and School Association in Toronto, gave an splendid report of the convention at the meeting of the local Home and School club on Thursday afternoon.

She recommended to the local club the "Travel Talk Slides provided free by the Department of Education for use by the Home and School clubs.

She explained that the convention favored "centralized education" such as is seen in the counties of England. Here we have too many township school boards, directed often by trustees who are not well informed on educational matters. County school boards with members carefully chosen could be expected to function much more satisfactorily for the child, whose welfare we must always have in mind.

Mrs. Murphy gave in detail Dr. Long's plan for a new curriculum. At present the High School curriculum is forced by the universities, although only a small fraction of High School pupils attend university. Business men must be educated not to require "Matriculation standing" of those entering the department.

Dr. Long thought Household Economics would benefit girl students particularly more than Latin. He thought that advanced Grammar and the harder problems in arithmetic should be left until the Public School Curriculum and transferred to the High School curriculum. These studies are too difficult for senior public school pupils, and makes them dislike going to school.

Mrs. Scott moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Murphy for the very interesting report. Mrs. McLean, the retiring President, was then presented with a lovely shaw and flowers by Mrs. Webster, in appreciation of the deep interest she has taken in the work of the club during the past year.

Mrs. J. H. Fox then took charge of the meeting, and installed the following officers for the coming year:

President — Mrs. Ern. Ward.
Vice President — Mrs. F. Webster.
Treasurer — Mrs. Harold Knapman.
Secretary — Mrs. D. A. Fourth.
Auditor — Mrs. J. Fox.

The Convenors of Committees will be:

Membership — Mrs. Walton.
Programme — Mrs. B. McMullen.
Finance — Mrs. Ern. Wright.
Social — Mrs. Reg. Hourie.
Membership — Mrs. Thos. Jones.

Miss Catherine Cook gave a very much enjoyed solo "Lullaby (My Sleep" with accompaniment by Mrs. Webster. A motion was then passed disbanding the club until October 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Rawlins have the sympathy of friends and neighbors in the passing of their year old baby son on Wednesday with pneumonia. The funeral was largely attended at the home Bridge St., on Friday afternoon, and interment made in Glenwood Cemetery.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, May 3, 1935

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

I have been following with great interest the letters for and against the Cadet Training appearing in your paper.

Of course this is a subject which can be discussed at great length, and still one would be no farther ahead in the end. This is a free country, and everyone is entitled to his (or her) opinion on the subject. I am writing this to express my own thought on the matter.

Regarding the letter written by Jno. R. Bristol, and another by an Ex-Cadet, I reply: Cadet Training does teach good that cannot be taught in physical training. Take a look at a class of boys prepared for physical training, now take a look at a cadet corps. Yes, there is a vast difference. The cadets teaches a youth to stand erect, hold his head up, walk like a man, and to wear his clothes as they should be worn, and not to continually look like something "the cat dragged in". Where physical training, teach a youth anything about his military appearance? Cadet training leads to better manhood—not to war. Boys are not taught the glory of war—war is never mentioned. Our cadet instructor is careful to see the boys are not over-disciplined.

I don't mind saying that I too have only a limited time to attend High School. I also work after school hours and I am not a brilliant student. However I do not see how cadet training interferes so much with the school education, unless the student has been shirking all year and tries to use the fact that he has taken a few hours cadet drill as an excuse. Personally I feel that I am obtaining something just as beneficial as the education, and that is to learn to act as a true Canadian man.

As for students not taking cadet drill but being given physical exercises instead, all I have to say is: The boys are under a physical instructor who is well qualified to do so, and knows what he is doing. He gives them a minimum of very elementary exercises, and have never hurt anyone yet but which have proved beneficial to every one's most delicate youth.

When boys or to quote the letter "mere children" are taught a few simple movements and to wear khaki, this by no means makes soldiers of them. Any person will realize that marching in step with a drum and carrying a harmless gun will not win a battle. Why only a very limited number of boys even know how to shoot a gun straight. Can a student with intelligence enough to go to school get the idea that he is a soldier?

What does the khaki represent? The King's uniform or course. Doesn't that immediately prove patriotism. After all aren't we true Canadians, loyal to the King and members of the British Commonwealth of Nations? Aren't we always ready to stand firmly behind our blind our Mother Land? Certainly. The khaki doesn't represent fear, it makes us think of our King and our Mother country, and our own country. What bond of human friendship is greater than the British Empire.

You are quite right Jno. R. Bristol, I doubt if there are many who have the desire to be butchered in another war, if we can honorably avoid it. I had my share in the last war and I am still in my teens, so I should know something of the terrible effects of war.

Cadet training will not cause war, nor will the stopping of cadet training prevent war, nor will hair brained disarmament. The only thing that will prevent war is to stop private munities factories from supplying both sides with munitions. The people of the world on the whole want peace. It is the owners of the munitions factories who are to blame. To them it is "big business". Can't something be done to stop these gluttonous (???) from growing rich by coining money out of with innocent human lives? That war, cadet training does not.

I am a
R.C.I.V.S. Cadet.

THE number of children killed and injured by automobiles in Ontario is appalling!

Children by nature are carefree. You must think for them, and for other pedestrians, constantly. Be sure your brakes, tires and lights are effective. Drive slowly and be particularly careful wherever there may be children . . . especially on holidays and week-ends. Train yourself so that safe driving becomes second nature to you

If you don't, some day you may find yourself not only severely penalized but also minus a driver's license . . . for life!

BRIG.-GEN. C. F. KILBOURNE

BRIG.-GEN. F. M. ANDREWS

Following testimony by Brig.-Gen. F. M. Andrews and Brig.-Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, which was given before the House military committee and made public, President Roosevelt (inset) sent an unprecedented and sharply worded protest to the committee, threatening to censor any military secrets that may be sought by congress. Reported revelations concerning secret Canadian border air base and preparations to seize certain British and French islands occasioned the President's decisive action.

Daily Short Story

Artist's Model

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Fred Bernard put a few finishing touches with his pencil to the sketch he had hastily drawn and looked it over with an approving eye. Not so good and not so bad, he thought, but the girl really was terribly attractive. He glanced again at his unwitting model sitting several tables away in the Village restaurant. Even more beautiful than the sketch he had made of her. He beckoned to the waiter.

"Would you mind giving this to that girl?" He handed the sketch to the waiter.

Fred watched the transaction between the waiter and the busty coil of the corner of his eye. He saw the girl glance at the picture at first impatiently, then set it down, then pick it up again with new interest, and then turn to the waiter to ask who made it. Then Fred turned away because he knew the waiter and the girl's eyes were on him. The next he knew the girl with the sketch in her hands, was before him.

"This is very sweet," she was saying. "Are you an artist by profession?"

"Well, you might call it that," he replied.

"I'd like to keep it, May I?"

"Oh, of course. You are a sweet model—and I—I—" He hesitated as if to muster courage. "I might do much better work with a model like you."

"Do you really think so?" she inquired with an amused smile. "If you do I might add I'd like to try it."

Fred laughed. "You certainly are obliging," he said. "I don't pay any models, I can't."

Gas Fades Out

The best Fred could do was to put together twenty-two cents in a search of all his pockets, and twenty-two cents do not spend one quarter—so his meter was unsupplied and the gas was off. He pulled his jacket closer about him and rubbed his hands to warm them. These shabby out interests he and Ruth Whlock was coming up, too. One any minute. And as his mind reverted to the art of the restaurant, there came a knock on the door.

With obvious pleasure, Fred admitted Ruth.

"It's a little chilly in here. Do you catch cold easily?" he asked.

"Why isn't there any heat?" she responded as she touched the cold gas heater.

"There was until just a little while ago—only something must have gone wrong with that confounded meter there." He pointed at the outcast contraption.

"Well, I don't mind a little cold," she said determinedly. "I'll pop away—but not entirely in the nude."

"Why, here's an idea! Suppose you pose in winter apparel—as you are, with your coat on."

"Swell," she agreed, as he helped her on with the coat she had only a moment before taken off.

Fred worked on a simple crayon drawing of Ruth until he completed it. "I just want to get a better understanding of my subject before I do a more thorough work," he told her as he showed her the sketch. "So this will be all for today."

Fred looked hard at the picture in the magazine.

"If it isn't Ruth, it's her ghost," he muttered to himself. "And if it is Ruth then what the devil is she doing up here, posing for me?"

At that moment there came the old familiar sound—three taps on the door, and he admitted Ruth. He could hardly contain himself, blurting out with—

"What's your name, Ruth — I mean what's your real name?"

"Why, why——"

"Well then, are you the girl posing in this magazine?" He pointed at the picture he had stared at for almost an hour before she arrived. tapped me, Mr. Bernard. I confess, I am it!"

"Then you are Marian Morgan, the famous model?"

"I'm afraid I am," she grinned.

"And you get paid a fortune to sit for other artists?"

"Well—sometimes."

"And you're posed for me for nothing!"

"Uh, but Mr. Bernard——"

But he interrupted her protest with——"Why?

"Because I think you have real talent and, besides, I just wanted to, anyway, I think it was lots of fun."

"I'd call it charity." He grinned, and turned to look out the window.

He felt her hand on his shoulder. "Don't be a fool, Fred," she cooed, but what struck him in her words was that it was the first time she had called him by his first name. "Please let's not have any false pride and let's get to work again as if nothing happened. She then went into the other room to divest herself of her apparel and don her posing outfit. And by the time she was ready to pose again Fred had realized she was right and decided to continue with his painting.

For a half hour he worked—all the time tormented by one thought. Finally, he summoned up courage enough to put the brush aside and speak up.

"Ruth—uh, I mean Marian," he began. "I've been having gas in this place ever since the first time you came to pose for me. And it's been a mystery to me all along. Was it you who put quarters in that gas meter of mine? The best I've been on and I've never even touched it.

No answer.

Marian was merely hanging her head.

Fred went over to her and lifted her head up. And he read all he wanted to know in her eyes.

If the people living across the street could have looked into Fred Bernard's studio they would have seen an artist kissing his model and blushing furiously.

The Junior Athaletic and Social Club had their regular meeting around the corner last night. Among the intriting subjecks discussed being if you spent a week in the desert without a drop of water whether it would be better to see a mirage and feel relieved for a while or just keep on dying of thirst without any extra disappointments, and if you had to be shot at sunrise for any reason would you prefer to be waked up first or would you rather see what was going on so as not to miss anything.

More apes arrived. Some of the shes plucked at Olga's garments, commanding upon them to one another. "You must not show fear," Paran called to her. "You will often be surrounded by these apes. But then you will be safest.

"Few jungle creatures dare attack the great apes when several are together. When I am gone I advise you to seek their society. But if you let them know you are afraid they will take advantage of it.

"Your life will be constantly menaced." "I will try," said the girl, "but they are the most frightful creatures I ever have seen." Tarzan replied: "No doubt they think the same of you!" Olga had to exercise all her will-power.

She succeeded in passing through the ordeal of inspection by the she-apes without showing the terror or revulsion she felt. Tarzan watched her closely, realizing the torture she was undergoing. Suddenly he addressed the apes.

THE LOVE FLIGHT

by Jean Dixon

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Three days after Maida's visit to Anne at Hole Sol front pages carried Gladstone Van Investors' press send Bess Third Oldest Firm In Wall Street, Crashes!

Anne did not read beyond the screaming headlines She was prepared for it. There had been a scene when Maida came from Madame's answer to her frantic plea. Maida collapsed and demanded that Jock somehow is nerve specialist by airplane from New York.

Jock snapped out of it. Jock was all right. Anne had smuggled him into Hole Sol two nights before and there had been a conference with "Papa" Hoag, in papa's own ballwick, over sausages and beer.

"He's a dandy," Jock told Anne. "He's taking me on as soon as I can get straightened out Anne. I've seen it coming. I tried to put out my fires. Not a job for me and not only for me, but no jobs. I'm sorry about Maida's money, I didn't want to take it on. She raised the deuce until I did. She thought I could help it. So did I. We made the wrong guess."

"Most of us do," Anne said.

"You're a great pal," Jock said. "For me attention to Maida. She's had too many gold spoons. Now she's going to see a tin one and like it."

• • • •

"The top o' the mornin' to you, Pfil," Madame greeted Anne a day or two later, "I got good news for you. That young nephew of mine, Dolph, won't bother you any more."

"Madame—you mean—there's been an accident!" Anne was all sympathy.

"I don't think so." Madame chuckled. "Though it might have been an accident at that. Maybe she got him while he was in his cups. He's married that big hunky that was down here—the pants one."

"The pants one?" Anne's thoughts flew to the day in the garden she had overheard a conversation, the day Dolph had been ugly because he believed she was eavesdropping.

"Yep, the pants one. The one they called Biff. Don't care for the pants so much but I like her for Dolph, They can use the same tailor. She's the only one I've seen can manage him. When he gets too smart alecky she walops him. She's got a wallop like a mule's heel."

"I'm glad, Madame. Maybe he'll settle down, now that he has responsibilities of his own."

"Um, he'll settled down, all right." Madame wagged her head. "He'll settle down or get knocked down. Write the girl a cheque, Pfil. Tell her to go get a wedding present—something for herself. Make it fifteen thousand. I owe her that much for taking him off my hands."

Anne went to open the desk. "Before you sign that cheque," Madame went on, "ring up the Phoenix Employment Agency. Tell 'em I'm looking for a first-class chauffeur."

"Chauffeur!" Anne did not move. She could not.

"I cant twist my tongue with them French words, Pfil. You call it what you want to only get one for me. I've lost the best shoehur I ever had. That Cesa. You know, the one who drives the blue car."

"You—you mean—something's happened to Cesa?" Anne wheeled. Her eyes were stricken.

It seemed an eternity before Madame answered. She was drinking her third cup of coffee, drinking with maddening deliberation.

"Nothing's happened," she said at last, "except he said he was leaving. He gave notice—let me see—why, yes—it was the day you went to Montreal with Jock. Said he'd had a better offer—another man but the fellow ain't shown up. Try to get some one who'll fit into Cesa's clothes. Them uniforms are expensive."

"Very well."

Anne groped through the morning. Carl Cesa gone! Letters, cheques, bills, all were a jumble. Would the luncheon hour never come?

"Never mind anything more now, Pfil," Madame said. Her sharp old eyes noted the girl's pallor. "You look kind of peak-ed, Pfil. Maybe you'd better take a rest for the day. I'm eatin' with papa, anyhow. We got things to talk over."

Anne went to her room. Her feet were heavy, heavy. When her door was safely closed behind her, one strangled sound escaped her lips. Then she flung herself on her bed and lay there, quiet, inert.

She roused herself at the sound of knocking on her door. The knocking became so insistent she knew it must be answered.

Bats was there, showing unwonted alarm—for Bats.

"I've been rapping here for five minutes at least," Bats said. "Are you worried? Has Cesa brought up your lunch brought it back again. She said there was no answer, that you must be out, I, was sure you didn't go out."

Anne closed the door behind Bats. "I fell—ill in," she said lonely. "I've been resting."

"Maybe so," Bats said, eyeing Anne with disapproval nod. "If you been resting it don't seem to have done you good. You look like a ghost. You better ought to take something on your stomach, say an egg milk shake with a tip of brandy in it." Anne raised icy hands to a burning brow.

"I'll take it, Bats, if you think I should." Easier to accede than argue. She was utterly inadequate, utterly futile, utterly—lost. What was the use? When fate, or God, or turned its face against you—you were—lost.

• • • •

Anne spent the night on the balcony beside her room. There was a wicker reclining chair, which might have been comfortable if there had been comfort in her. She watched and stars without seeking. Listened to the song of the surf without hearing it. She was in a state that knew neither sight nor sound. She had her work. Yes, there was that. Why struggle in an abyss of misery? Why struggle when there's no place to reach? Once she had thought herself safe, in the independence of earning, would be enough. That was before she saw the challenge of love in eyes bluer than the skies—before dear lips swept her cheek—

She rose like a sleep-walker and turned on the bath. The sun was already riding high. At any moment Madame would summon her to the round boudoir.

A hot bath, a cold shower. After all, human streams are made up of red blood, not of ice water. Take up your pack and carry on.

Anne responded to the round boudoir, pale but not pallid. There was a new sharp angle to her chin.

Madame was in fine feilie. "The rest done you good, Pfil," she said, satisfied by a first quick survey. "It done me good, too. It was like old times for papa and me. We got old-time songs on the phonograph and why we even danced a polka."

"It must have been fun." Anne found she could smile. She wished she could have seen the little hook of a nun and Madame the Amazon dancing.

"Why do I gallivant, Pfil," Madam demanded, "when I got papa? Papa's fizzed up a new rose in his garden. He's put a couple of stalks together and he's got a new one. He put the first one from the bush on the table last night for supper. It's pink, but it has a kind of a red heart. He calls it the Maid-am. For me. And I should let phoney counts and barons kiss my hand! I shouldn't bother." Anne said thinking aloud.

"You wouldn't what?"

Anne came back.

"I mean to say—it must be a thrill having your husband name a rose after you—when he loves his roses so much."

"You're right both times." Madame fluffed out her pink hair. "I'm a fool to bother about barons that's none of my business. It makes me feel like sixteen again to have them grow me his own spacial rose. And Pfil, if the Phoenix Agency calls, tell 'em we got a shoehur. The one Cesa sent turned up."

That afternoon Anne had some shopping to do. The new chauffeur drove her. He was not yet in uniform. He was of medium height, dark and gave the impression that clothes restrained his action. A nice fellow, Anne decided. That while he handled the car with certainty and perfect ease, he made only the most perfunctory pretense of any service except that of actual driving. She thought of Carl, tall, slim-waisted, in the blue uniform. Fitting the new chauffeur into Carl's badge of service would be like trying to thrust a size 4-0 shoe into a 6-AA shoe.

Perhaps the new man was a friend of Carl. He might know where Carl had gone.

Anne told herself, "Not that it matters. I can't quite go on pursuing a chauffeur up hill and down dale, can I?"

Nevertheless she leaned forward and said, "I didn't get your name."

"Cleary," the man said. "Cleary." He turned.

Anne subsided into her seat. Cleary was not only terse. He was very terse. There had been a large period at the end of the "y".

When she left the car Anne said, "I won't be long. You'll wait?" She felt almost apologetic.

"Yes ma'am." Tardily, Cleary remembered to touch his hat.

Nothing to be learned from that source. And what was it she wanted to learn? The whereabouts of a lost dream? Would she ever learn to put dreams behind her? To smash through His snatching at opportunity, at things that glitter, at colors in rainbows?

CHAPTER THIRTY

Two weeks passed. Anne was a peanaballist in a treadmill.

Madame was kind and difficult by turns. But always she was fair. Only Anne's loyalty to this strange old lady had bethtended her carried her through. Madame and Phoebe Yon Ender. She had unswerving loyalty to both.

One morning a summons came for Anne at nine o'clock. Madame was abroad early.

"I got news for you, Pfil," Madame was in the old purple bathrobe and was vociferous over a bowl of hot house grapes at her elbow.

"Yes, ma'am?" Anne took account of the fact she was not trembling.

"About you," Madame said. "It's about them pearls. The diamonds of a girl, the flat-faced one—Bertha her name is—hid 'em. She detectives. She's got a confession."

"I didn't know there was a detective," Anne said. She loved being so calm.

"You oughta keep your eyes open, Pfil. It'll do you good. The detective she had new some of detect."

"You mean Cleary, who drives your car?"

"Yeh, so you know him?" Madame boomed.

"Only his name. I asked him. He spelled it for me."

"Um-m," was Madame's response. "You wanted to know—but never mind about that. The idee is the pearls. Fifty thousand dollars' worth of pearls is a mighty lot o' pearls. And when they get lost, it's just as well to know where they went, even after they're found."

"Berta hid them?" Anne's voice was very small.

"Yep. Under a pillow on my chaise lounge. She had a grudge against you, Pfil, and she wanted to make it look like you'd taken 'em. When things got hot she got scared and confessed."

Anne stiffened. "Madame," she said, clinging the words, "do you know what that distorted idea of Berta's has cost me?"

"Sure I know." Madame gripped the sides of her chair. "It's cost you nothing, Pfil. Nothing. What I mean is it's cost you nothing more than you've got. If you didn't have what you've got you'd be whinin' instead of wrestlin'. Don't you worry no more about Berta. I'm getting her shipped back to where she belongs. Cost you jit on a pass and I'm seeing the pass is cancelled. She's a bad lot. Let her follow on the other side look out for her. We got too many dummoxes in this country now. Just like when there are dummox Americans in them Arabrian ever there, they dump 'em back on us."

Anne sat on the stool near Madame. "I'm so happy about the pearls," she said. "I'm sorry for Berta. She isn't thinking she's quite normal, mentally, I mean— not responsible."

"Not responsible!' Madams boomed. "Why she ain't even safe! She went after that detective when he scorned her with a pair of scissors she was carryin' in her pocket. I should have a scissors stabber in my house! So I'm wastin' time feelin' sorry for that one. You got other things to do. There's some one wants to see you."

"To see me" Anne's chin lifted. More battles to be fought?

Madame nodded. "They're down on the terrace, that side one I use for myself. You better go down and see what they want."

"Thanks, I won't be long. There's so much to attend to this morning—an extra lot of letters and Celeste has sent some imports she wants me to see."

"More carpet rags?" Madame was belligerent.

"No, Hals, From Rebour."

"Take your time. The French shoehur didn't suit me, anyhow. Didn't you read me where they owe a lot o' money and they won't pay us, so we don't? Don't gimme no my face."

Anne hurried to the terrace secured to Madame where there had been morning-glories opening their bright chalices to the sun.

Two men sat at one of the stone balustrade. A man with sun in his hair and face that were patches of blue borrowed from tropic skies.

"Anna!"

"Carl!"

For a moment Anna stood in the door, uncertain. Then she was in Carl's arms, murmuring and being murmured over.

"We've got to Bimini, Anna," he said, after a time. "How soon can you be ready?"

"But—it costs money, dear, to go to Bimini—and I couldn't leave Madame, without notice. I owe her so much."

"We both do." He kept her within the circle of his arms. "She's all for it—this, together on our way to Bimini. And maybe I should've broduce you to the lucky dog that's about to be my employer, Anna, in Austin, Texas. I present Carroll Carter."

"Carroll Carter." The name lingered. It was a song on her lips and in her heart.

"Of Maryland." He liked the way she made the name into music. "You may know some of us. We got around quite a bit with the master minds cracked and began making banks look cryptic. You might have met me before the knock-up had it not been for a venerable granduncle whose passion in life was to visit every habitable part of the globe, and who insisted upon dragging me after him."

"Oh, Carl, suppose the crack had not come? Her head was against his shoulder.

"I'd have been in Tasmania, probably, at this moment, and you'd be here, little bird, riding on merry-go-rounds. Instead of which—Anna did you ever hear of a place by the name of Detroit?"

"Yes." She leaned back to scan a dear face. "It's where they make motor cars."

"Right. Think you'd like to live there a while?"

"I don't know. I've never been in Detroit. But — If you mean, would I like living there with you—"

He held her close. "Dee-troit, here we come!" He felt his body tense. "We are in luck, my Anna. Some stocks I thought might be useful for starting kitchen fires have revived. They'll carry us to Bimini and back. Then on to Detroit. Meet that rising mechanical engineer, Carroll Carter, and his charming wife, Mrs. Mechanical Engineer Carter."

"Darling! You've finished your course? You're an engineer!"

"In person. An engineer with a chance to prove he is one. I've just come back from Detroit. buddy of the venerable grandunclo owns most of one of the big motor plants there. He's agreed to give me a chance. Look here, young lady, we're losing time. We have to get a parson and pack our sarongs—"

"But, Carl, thoughtfully, "do you think we should do it— Bimini—well need money—our home—"

"We're going to do it." There was no compromise in that jut of his jaw. "We're going to live while there's living to be done, my Anna. Give the best we have to our work, the best that's in us to our love—and live."

"It was hard to think when lips caressed one's hair. "I'm ready, I'm happy to follow you along any road you choose—but, darling we've got to park ourselves somewhere. We can't stop in your motor shop."

"Surprise!" Carl whirled her into a gypsy dance. "Lady Luck is our fairy godmother. Ask Mister Hoag. She's feathering our nest, little bird—lock stock and barrel. Everything from the chairs in the parlor to the pans in the kitchen. Wedding present."

Anne stopped, breathless.

"Madame knows?" she asked.

Carl lifted Anne into a chair, Madame is chief conspirator of the plot to kidnap you out of captivity," he said. "She wasn't too keen about it when I first called her—the day you came back to Hole Sol. She couldn't bear losing you. Maybe you haven't heard, Anna, that I was held in Miami the night Berta hid the pearls. Had to take care of Madame's nephew. Dolph had too much liquor aboard to drive a car. I came back to find you gone. No trace. That's when I told Madame—all. Who I was, and how much I love you. She said she'd get you back if it took every private detective in the U.S.A. to find you. She made good. You came back, but not to me."

"I thought you'd let me down, deliberately, because of the pearls—because I was in—"

She was in his arms again, smothered there.

"Never mind, dearest. We're both here. We feel too much pep in our youth. Predigested food. Rations for Billy-Bill. Look here, girl, you're going to me far away from the base." Carl fished in the pocket of his vest. "I have the ring. He slipped a ring over her finger. An emerald, flanked it from the venerable grandmuncle. It was in a safety deposit vault. We have it because pawn brokers refused to take the lets. Anna, how about that wedding?"

"Have you chosen your best man?" "I have. Name is Adolph Hoag. And you?"

"Madame and Phoebe Prine. Do you think they'll do it, Carl?"

"I know they'll do it. They're waiting right now for the signal."

"They give them the signal, darling. Here comes the bride!"

Just a Reminder of a springtime custom

There is a great host of people,
From coast to coast of this great country,
Who join in saying
"I always use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the spring."
At this season more than any other
The blood is thin and watery
And the nerves seem to be on the ragged edge.
You find yourself nervous, tired and irritable.
Appetite is fickle and digestion fails,
Because the nerve force required for digestion
Is wasted in cares and worries.
This is just a reminder
Of what this nerve food has done for you in the past,
And of what it will do for you to-day.
By making the blood rich and red
It instils new energy and pep into the system,
And fills you out of the valley
Of fatigue and weakness and low spirits.

WHOLE EMPIRE ACCLAIMS KING AND QUEEN

British Empire Pays Homage to Gracious Royal Pair in Greatest Demonstration Seen in London

Royal Procession Through City to St. Paul's Cathedral for Thanksgiving Marked by Outbursts of Enthusiasm

KING KNEELS IN DEVOUT THANKSGIVING

National Anthem Caught up by Surging Crowds And Wafted For Miles Along Line of Route

London, May 7.—(CP-Havas)—"God save the king," uttered as with one voice by his subjects in a vast outpouring of loyalty, heartiened the sovereign today as he began the 26th year of his reign on the throne of Britain and the Empire.

The 25th Anniversary of the King's Accession was over—but the Silver Jubilee Celebrations were on.

The people of the United Kingdom resumed their customary toil, the memory of a great spectacle fixed living in their minds, but on a lesser scale than yesterday's were scheduled to continue today.

Tomorrow the king will receive representatives of the Diplomatic Corps and of the Empire and a service of thanksgiving will be held in the Albert Hall.

Yesterday St. Paul's Cathedral was thronged twice, but the strains of the National Anthem, the solemn prayers of thanksgiving, the words of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the colorful pageantry as dignitaries and royalty arrived, were still fresh in the minds of those who attended the jubilee services in the morning.

Climaxing the observance, the Duke of York, the king's second son, strolled the empire last night in a message to his people. "I dedicate myself anew to your service for the years that may still be given to me," he said. As the duke concluded his address, the king went on to express his concern for "the numbers of my people who still are without work."

COMMIT MURRAY FOR KIDNAPPING

Identified by J. S. Labatt as One of The Men Taking Part

London, May 7.(CP)—Kingston P. "Piccolo Pete" Murray today was committed for trial on charges in connection with the kidnapping last August of John S. Labatt.

Murray, brought to London from Kingston, was identified at today's preliminary hearing by Labatt as one of three men who stopped his car on a road from Sarnia to London and abducted him.

It is expected Murray will go to trial at the spring assizes which open here the first week in June.

Labatt told of the events surrounding his kidnapping, from the time he was forced from his car until he was released five days later on the outskirts of Toronto. In the interval he was taken to a hideout in the Muskoka section of Northern Ontario, blindfolded, threatened, but, while his abductors negotiated for his release, was well treated.

Canada's first ransom kidnapping resulted in no payment of any part of the $150,000 demanded by authorities said.

Early last February David Meisner, Cincinnati bookmaker, was convicted and sentenced to 10 years in Kingston penitentiary. The third man, alleged to be Albert Pegram, has never been apprehended.

Denies Being There

Pegram had been named by John S. Labatt as one of his three actual kidnappers. Pegram, known as Peter Murray today rose in the prisoner's dock and looking at the Labatt witness remarked dramatically:

"I have only one thing to say. I can look the world in the face and tell him he's making the greatest mistake ever made in this country."

Murray seemed on the verge of tears as he made this declaration.

Labatt sat in front of the spectators' seats, between a Provincial Police inspector and one of his private bodyguards. He met Murray's gaze and then dropped his eyes.

"I've been persecuted now for 20 months," the Kentuckian farmer-agitator declared. Constable Mitchell, reached his side and cautioned him to be quiet.

County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw made the committal for trial under the strenuous objection of defence counsel.

Increased Staff At Corbyville May be Needed

Montreal, May 7.—Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, it was learned in official quarters here last night, has concluded an agreement with Schenley Distillers, a major United States organization, for sale of 2,000,000 gallons of American-type whiskey, which, constitutes approximately one-half of the present warehoused stock of Canadian origin.

Delivery will be made between now and January, 1936, the agreement stipulating that the United States company take delivery of a certain amount each three months, on a graduating scale. The price was not disclosed.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol has also concluded an agreement with the Old Tyne Distillery Company, a United States concern, for delivery over six months of 500,000 gallons of whiskey.

It is understood that a slight increase in staff at the Corbyville plant will be necessary to handle this order. Most of the 500,000 gallons will be shipped in bulk but the smaller order may be bottled.

Saved from Well After 20 Hours

Kamloops, May 7.—(CP)—Twenty-five-year-old Thomas Becker was rescued at 8.50 a.m. today from the 20-inch well-bottom in which he had been trapped for 19 hours and 40 minutes with the constant threat of another gravel slide imperilling his life.

Becker apparently suffered no serious effects from his harrowing experience. He was taken out through a trench dug from a sidehill as it was considered too dangerous to try to reach him from above for fear a fresh slide of sand and gravel would engulf him.

NEAR-EAST POLICY IS CONSIDERED

Britain Assures Bennett U.S. Considered in Any Naval Pact

London, May 7.—(CP-Havas)—Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada was assured today by British cabinet members, it was learned here, that Britain would not arrive at any new agreement with Japan without United States' collaboration. There is no danger, it was added, of decreasing the close relations between Britain and the United States.

These statements, it was learned on reliable authority, were made to the Premiers of the Dominions at the imperial conference held at No 10 Downing Street between the Premiers and the key members of the British cabinet. Today discussions seem to have been principally on the question of British policy in the far east in addition to its policy on the continent.

Britain, it was pointed out, continues to be on friendly terms with the Japanese although this creates fear in England two major problems: the naval agreement of 1922 and the naval question. The first question can find parallel solution, it was agreed by continued patronage from the Dominions of British products in conformity with the agreements made at the Ottawa conference.

700 STIKE AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, May 7.—(CP)—Two hundred employees of the Dominion steel mill of the Steel Company of Canada went on strike today, demanding higher wages. Strikers and employers merely stated a strike had occurred and wages were the matter involved.

FAKE BILLS REPORTED

Ottawa, May 6.—The Bank of Canada reported that "counterfeiting attempt" at counterfeiting the new $1 and $2 notes of the Dominion had been discovered in Western Canada.

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., May 6.—Five persons were burned to death and seven injured or overcome when a fire destroyed three bungalow buildings on the main street of Poughkeepsie today. Officials playing with matches were believed to have set the blaze.

GENERAL HOSPITAL KINGSTON, SEEKS ESTATE RESIDUE

Executors of Schermerhorn Estate Decide on Refuge Home

APPEAL IS HEARD

Lennox and Addington County Contend Step Premature

Toronto, May 7.—(CP)—Kingston General Hospital sought today to obtain from the Ontario Court of Appeal at Osgoode Hall a declaration that that institution, instead of the County of Lennox and Addington, was entitled to the residue of the estate of the late Senator Donald Schermerhorn who died Nov. 18, 1915.

The hospital appealed against a judgment, of Mr. Justice Hope who held the executors of Schermerhorn's will had made a completed gift of the residue of the estate to the County for establishment of a House of Refuge near Napanee.

Power Given Executors

Schermerhorn, by his will, gave the residue of his estate, to such trustees to be applied by them to such charitable purposes or purposes as they might deem wise and proper. He declared the erection of a Poor House or House of Refuge in and for the County of Lennox and Addington or a gift to the Kingston General Hospital to be charitable.

These statements, it was learned on reliable authority, were made to the Premiers of the Dominions at the imperial conference held at No 10 Downing Street between the Premiers and the key members of the British cabinet. Today discussions seem to have been principally on the question of British policy in the far east in addition to its policy on the continent.

Britain, it was pointed out, continues to be on friendly terms with the Japanese although this creates fear in England two major problems: the naval agreement of 1922 and the naval question. The first question can find parallel solution, it was agreed by continued patronage from the Dominions of British products in conformity with the agreements made at the Ottawa conference.

Surviving Executors

Thomas Bird German, and Thomas Albert Martin, surviving executors of the will then, in June 1923, applied to a second judge for construction of the money to the Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Justice Hope found the executors had power to whom Kingston General Hospital appealed and he dismissed the application. It argued before the Court of Appeal by Mr. Hellmuth should hold the executors of the will had power to apply the residue of the estate to such charitable purposes as they deemed fit or that they should pay the money to the hospital in accordance with the declaration of a House of Refuge near Napanee.

Mr. Hellmuth contended the executors would not be making a gift for a charitable purpose if they applied the money for the establishment of a House of Refuge. They would merely be giving it to the County for persons who paid the County taxes.

"It is the charity to relieve the rates," said Mr. Hellmuth.

For the County of Lennox and Addington J. F. Hellmuth, K.C., argued that executors had extended the time within which the city council was to undertake the establishment of the House of Refuge. Therefore, he continued, the step which the Executors took in Hospital took in February 1933, to secure the money was premature.

In the list of science graduates of Queen's University just issued appear the names of two sons of the late J. W. Whyte of Stella, Arthur Grenfell Whyte of Sudbury, Bachelor of Science, in Mining and Metallurgical Engineering, and Mildred Whyte of Stella, Bachelor of Science with honors in electrical engineering. Arthur and Joseph Whyte are grandsons of Mrs. Matilda Arthur, Ann St.

The King's Speech

London, May 7.—Ruler over 480,000,000 people, monarch of the world's greatest Empire, King George V spoke to his subjects Monday in a spirit of humility and gratitude to God for the opportunity of serving them.

The message, which trembled at first with the strain of his emotion, quickly took on characteristic assurance as his Majesty addressed to the children of the British lands an impassioned appeal that they devote to their country "the service of your work, your mind and your hearts."

The King spoke as follows:

"At the close of this memorable day I must speak to my people everywhere. Yet how can I express what is in my heart?

"As I passed this morning through cheering multitudes to and from St. Paul's Cathedral, I thought then of all that these twenty-five years had brought to me and my country and my Empire, how could I fail to be most deeply moved.

"Words cannot express my thoughts and feelings. I can only say to you, my very dear people, that the Queen and I thank you from the depth of our hearts for all the loyalty and, may I say, the love with which this day and always you have surrounded us.

"Your splendid response to your service for the year that may still be given to me. I look back on the past with thankfulness to God. My people and I have come through great trials and difficulties together. They are not over. In the midst of these days of rejoicing I grieve to think of the numbers of my people who are still without work.

"We owe to them, and not least to those suffering from any form of disablement, all the sympathy and help we can give to them. I hope that during this Jubilee Year all who can will do their utmost to find them work and bring them hope.

"Other anxieties may be in store, but I am persuaded that with God's help they may be overcome if we meet them with confidence, courage and unity. So I look forward to the future with faith and hope.

"It is to the young that the future belongs. I trust that through the fund founded during the years of my reign, the Prince of Wales, to commemorate this year, many of them throughout this country may be helped, in body, mind and character, to become useful citizens.

"To the children I would like to send a special message. Let me say this to each of those whom my words may reach: The King is speaking to you, and he wants you to remember that in days to come you will be part of a great Empire. As you grow up always keep this thought before you, and when the time comes be ready and proud to give to your country the service of your work, your mind and your heart.

"I have been greatly touched by all of the greetings which have come to me today from the Dominions and Colonies, from India, and from my home country.

"My heart goes out to all who may be listening to me now, wherever you may be, either here at home, in town or village, or in some far-off corner of the Empire, or maybe on the high seas.

"Let me end these words to you with those that Queen Victoria used after her Diamond Jubilee thirty-eight years ago. No words could more fittingly express my own feelings: 'From my heart I thank my beloved people; may God bless them.'"

Belleville Offers Tribute To King and Throne As Thousands Gather

Twelve Citizens Receive Jubilee Medals at Ceremony

SCHOLARS SING

Stirring Message is Delivered by Col. W. N. Ponton, V.D.

Five thousand citizens of Belleville participated in the local ceremonies on Monday on the occasion of the Silver Jubilee of Their Majesties King George Fifth and Queen Mary. Between three and four thousand children and students of local schools, returned men, members of the Argyll Light Infantry and band, 34th Battery of Field Artillery and legion cadets, the Pipe Band, members of city council, Board of Education and separate School Board and citizens of every walk of life, formed in procession on the collegiate grounds on Monday morning at ten thirty o'clock. Twelve Belleville citizens received King's Jubilee medals.

The scene was a memorable one from the splendor of color in the dress of the military units, the bright-colored berets of the ex-service men, the natty bright red and blue uniforms of the Argyll band, the more subdued coloring of the troops and cadets and the Highland pipers and drummers and the gleam of medals. The scholars had assembled at the school grounds and the military march was from the corner of Bridge and Front streets, bands playing martial and patriotic airs.

FORMER PRINTER OF CITY DIES

William H. White of New York Victim of Stroke

New York, May 7 (CP)—William H White, who first smelled printers ink in Belleville, Ont., and who became a copy handler in the New York Times composing room for close on 50 years, is dead, Thursday, at the age of 74.

When he was 14 "Harry" White went to work for The Daily Ontario, in Belleville. Later his apprenticeship he went to the journal Intelligencer, of the same city, before spending a few years with various New York papers. Then he came to The Times.

His reputation for accuracy won him the assignment of guiding printing apprentices through the blue lights and clinking machines of the Times composing room. In 1924 he performed this office for the Prince of Wales.

Letter Writers' Names

Persons writing letters to the Ontario Intelligencer for publication must in every instance furnish their names as an evidence of good faith.

The letters will not be made public if the writers desire to remain anonymous but the publisher must know who the writers are.

Since writing the above two more letters on the cadet issue have been received without signatures of writers attached.

These letters will not be published until the names are furnished.

Quite often attention has to be brought to this requirement. It does not seem reasonable that writer after writer should neglect to comply with this requirement. Henceforth letters not signed with the writers' names either for publication or not for publication will be absolutely ignored.

It is unlikely any more warnings of this nature will be given.

TRYING TO LEARN HITCH HIKING ART

Striking out to see Canada, three local young girls, all under the age of 18 years, found their plans sadly interrupted after only a few hours of so-called enjoyment. Dismally following their liberation from Sunday school, the three girls secured a ride to Brighton with "a man" they informed the authorities. Later the girls returned to Trenton, where they procured and paid for a room in a hotel. The proprietors became suspicious, owing to their youthful appearance and notified the Trenton police, who in turn notified the local authorities. Detective Laird fastened to Trenton and upon investigating ascertained the identity of the three girls and immediately returned them to their anxious parents. The girls assured the authorities they meant no wrong, but merely wanted to learn the art of "hitch-hiking".

C. W. THOMPSON, STIRLING, DIES

Former Reeve of Rawdon Township and Auditor of County

The village of Stirling and the County of Hastings have lost a well-known and prominent resident in the death of Charles Wellington Thompson, who passed away in the Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning, May 5th, where he had been a patient for three days. For some time he had been in failing health.

To many people in the village of Stirling, where he made his home and throughout the county his passing has brought deep feelings of regret. He was a man possessing many fine qualities of character and by all, who knew him he was most highly regarded. He took a deep interest in the welfare of the county as a whole, being at one time a member of the Hastings County Council as Reeve of the township of Rawdon. For some years he also filled most efficiently the office of Auditor for the county. He was a good citizen and will be missed by many friends.

The late Mr. Thompson, who had reached the age of 76 years and five months, was born in the township of Rawdon, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thompson. The deceased's maiden name was Miss Alice Brown. For some years he resided in the township of Madoc and for the past 36 years he had been a resident of the Stirling village. Prior to retiring he was engaged in farming.

In religion he was a valued member of the United Church, being an Elder of St. Paul's Church, Stirling. Politically he was a member of the I.O.O.F. Lodge No. 329, Stirling, and L.O.L. No. 1, Stirling. In politics he was a staunch Conservative.

Surviving to mourn his passing and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are the widow, formerly Miss Agnes Blair; three sons, Mr. John B. Thompson of the 2nd concession of the township of Rawdon; the Rev. Robert G. Thompson, Glen Williams, Manitoba; Mr. G. W. Thompson, Toronto, one sister, Mrs. S. Rollins, Killher, Sask.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday at 2.30 p.m.

A.I.I. SERGEANTS BANQUET HOSTS

The sergeants of the Argyll Light Infantry were at home on Monday night to ex-warrant officers and ex-sergeants of the regiment. Invitations were extended to many ex-members and the response was gratifying to those in charge. The gathering was held in the spacious Sergeants' Mess room which was filled. The tables were decorated with potted plants donated by Mr. Wm. Glover. In opening the proceedings Company Sergeant Major R. Johnson, president of the mess, extended a hearty welcome to the visitors stating the object of the gathering was to induce some of the ex-members to become once more members. The president then turned the meeting over to Mr. G. Dobbs who acted as chairman for the remainder of the evening.

Toast Proposed

The toast to the King was eloquently proposed by Col. Ponton, K.C., who referred to the day they were commemorating, namely the Silver Jubilee of His Majesty's accession to the throne. The toast was enthusiastically received, the National Anthem sung and lusty cheers for the King.

During the evening Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, chaplain of the regiment, was called upon and gave an address relative to the King and Queen referring especially to His Majesty's visit to France during the Great War. Col. Ponton also gave an address.

A male quartette, composed of James Bankier, H. Moorman, H. Howard and A. Evans rendered selections and were compelled to respond to encores. Mr. Lee Rigg played the accompaniment, and also played for solos rendered by R. Mouck, F. Rundle, G. Hanson, and E. Baldwin and others. A flute solo-ist by Mr. Brown was much appreciated.

Refreshments were served and much enjoyed. It proved to be an evening that will be long remembered by all present. Mr. Lee Rigg's genial aid all in their power for the entertainment of their guests.

POLICE COURT

Inability to pay his fine or ten dollars and costs brought a five day sentence to a local inebriate in the day's local police court held before His Worship, Magistrate Butler, later. K.C. The accused man stated he had drinked freely but not well, to celebrate the King's Jubilee. His plea brought no response from the court except the meting out of the sentence. Numerous other cases to have been heard after having been adjourned at a previous court, were dealt with today.

His Worship, Magistrate Butler, will sit at three different courts today. Belleville in the morning, Consecton at 1.00 p.m. to be followed by Picton court in Trenton shortly after 3.30 p.m. It is expected, giving His Worship a rather busy day.

QUIET COURAGE OF KING PRAISED

Impressive Tribute to His Majesty Paid at Tabernacle U. C.

Services in honour of the King's Silver Jubilee were held in Tabernacle United Church, when special hymns and prayers were used at all the services on Sunday. The Rev. S. C. Moore, B. A., B. D., a former minister, preaching in the morning, paid a tribute to King George whose reign had been one of graciousness and quiet courage. Sunday afternoon, the Sunday School under the superintendency of J. E. Walmsley, duly observed the occasion.

Rev. I. B. Naylor conducted the evening worship and spoke on the words, "The King Trusteth in the Lord". The speaker said, "We rejoice today to His Majesty King George the Fifth, the King of Our Empire and the Father of his people." For twenty-five years he has reigned in tranquility and peace, truth, and today the King is loved as few men have been loved in the history of nations. He has been graciously supported by Her Majesty, Queen Mary, whose personality and home-loving qualities have endeared her to the hearts of her people. Of the King it may be said, "The King Trusteth in the Lord", and in all his activities as Your King he has been directed and inspired by deep religious convictions.

"Wherefore we humble and say, "God Save the King"; save him and his far-reaching realm to the service of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

The Choir rendered the anthem, "Land of Hope and Glory", and "The Ninety and Nine", and Mr. Naylor sang as a solo, "Thy Mercy Lord".

Belleville Offers Tribute To King and Throne As Thousands Gather

Badges Worn

Young and older vied in the enthusiasm they threw into the event. The children of all the Belleville schools and the students of the collegiate and St. Michael's high school were silk badges bearing the royal figures and the scroll "Silver Jubilee, 1910, G.M. 1935."

His Worship Mayor George O. Tice was in charge of the program and from the centre of the square where he was in the company of a number of citizens to be decorated with the King's medal of commemoration addressed the large assemblage. "We are here on this memorable occasion", he declared "to commemorate in a fitting way the twenty-fifth or silver jubilee anniversary of the accession of Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary to the British Throne. We are glad for what the reign has meant to this and with Their Majesties The Prince of Wales and all the Royal family a continuance of the blessings which have surrounded them in the past and we pray that the reign of Their Majesties may long continue to be the blessing it has been to the Nation and the world in past quarter of a century.

"The City of Belleville has always been loyal to the Crown and to the Empire and British traditions and institutions to Canada, to the Province and to itself."

"On this day our hearts are glad to pay homage to our gracious King and Queen."

The Argyll Band under Bandmaster Ross Hunter played "Rule Britannia."

Col. Ponton Honored

In the group in the centre of the square was that grand old military figure and public spirited citizen, who has played no small part in the life of education in the city, in civic affairs, in military life of Canada and in matters of concern to the Dominion and Empire in trade development, Col. W. N. Ponton, V.D., who has attended at least three great jubilees, the first at Quebec City where he lived four years as a young boy, and was also saw the twenty-fifth anniversary ceremonies of the coronation of Queen Victoria, in the year 1862, no less than 73 years ago, the next occasion being in 1897 on the occasion of the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria and the latter yesterday's event. In this latter event he was signally honored by being chosen to deliver the address of the day and also by being presented with the King's jubilee medal.

"Sixty-three years ago, declared Col. Ponton, I joined the Queen's Own Regiment in Toronto. Some years later I moved to Belleville and joined the 15th Battalion from this city. I am proud to say that I have served those sixty-three years in an army that is part of the greatest Empire in the world. I am more than proud to be here this day taking part in this great celebration in honor of the Silver Jubilee of His Majesty King George Fifth."

Rule of Wisdom

Turning to the military units present, Colonel Ponton declared he was sure they were proud especially on this great day as King's men to serve under him. In turning to the citizens he asked the latter's opinion and said that he knew that they were proud of their British Canadian citizenship and that they were part of this great Empire. "Every citizen in the uttermost corners of the British Empire and the world is today paying homage and tribute to the man who for twenty-five years has ruled with wisdom and who has held the unstained love of his loyal subjects", stated Col. Ponton.

"For a quarter of a century he has reigned and has held the inspired love of his people. He is not merely a figure-head but he is a ruler of us and it is he who has the great deal to do with holding the unity of this empire, he and our sons and daughters and men of the forces. Elaborate and colorful uniforms have with jealousy and divalry today responded to the rally cry "One Life, One Flag, One Throne, Britain hold your own and God guard all."

During his address which was held in his ringing clearness beyond the large square, Col. Ponton repeated those great classic lines of that great lover of his country William Shakespeare in his theology. Placed a close second, with a prize of ten dollars, was Joe Clarke.

For him always eagerly contested award previously granted in one form or another for ten dollars, by the United Church of Canada, the literary students of Albert are required to read, eight unseen, a chapter of the Scriptures and a Hymn, and to give a ten minute address upon some subject of their own choosing.

Mr. Atkinson's subject was a timely one, "The Thing Called Education and he stressed that such a passive but a militant support of this great institution's worth while movement is necessary to tide over critical world affairs. No, the speaker declared, must one be influenced through the emotives by the vast amount of almost hysterical speech-making and printed literature, whose main purpose seems to be a sadistic glorification of the suffering endured in such conflicts as the late war. It is possible only to achieve ideal pacifism through the head and a wise use of it in fight places.

Mr. Clarke took as his theme the stand made by the heroic band of Christians at Thermopylae and in antiquity-worried, native modern years aliels pointed out, that life worth while depending on the three qualities self-reliance, mental originality, and deliberate retirement of self.

The other contestants, William Lelan and Gerald Ruff, spoke respectively upon the humorous and reflective angles of relief clothing distribution in Saskatchewan, and upon Peace and the Arts of Peace, in which a survey of the League of Nations, its formal and its sinn was involved.

The Judges were K. Bird of Belleville Collegiate Institute Staff; Rev. R. Spencer, B.A., Th.D., pastor of Bridge Street United Church and S. M. Anglin, Teacher of German and Music at Albert College, considering their congratulations to the speakers on the excellence of delivery or their topics and upon their uniformly excellent delivery. Mr. Bird spoke highly of the value of such training in the calling to which the contestants were dedicating themselves.

The sight part of the competition, presided over by Rev. Bert Howard, M.A., principal of Albert College, consisted of readings of the Prodigal Son episode from Luke XV, 11-24; and Whittier's Hymn 497 from the Canadian Hymnal.

Medical and Nursing Services

All Employees periodically undergo Medical Examination at the Factory Hospital.

IN each of its factories, the Imperial Tobacco Company maintains a well-equipped hospital, with one or more nurses constantly in attendance, and a doctor either in attendance or on call. In adopting these precautions to safeguard and conserve the health of its workers, the Company confesses to a personal interest in the well-being of every one of them. At the same time, it has the additional satisfaction of knowing that its course is strictly in line with sound business practice.

Time lost through sickness means earnings lost to the worker, and production lost to the Company. Because there is a mutual advantage in reducing such lost time to a minimum, at the first sign of sickness or of undue fatigue the worker is expected to report immediately to the hospital for examination, treatment, and rest if need be. Hours or even minutes spent in checking incipient trouble may easily mean days, possibly weeks, saved in fighting serious illness.

A complete case history card is kept for every employee, based upon a thorough medical examination that is repeated at varying intervals, depending upon the facts and conditions revealed. Minor conditions needing correction which can be effected without absence from work, are treated in the Company's hospital.

To the hospital, of course, come all emergency cases. Fortunately, accidents are so few that on the average less than one day's work per year is lost for every nine employees. But even the occasional scratch or cut is immediately brought in for dressing, as a precaution against infection. To the hospital too, at mid-morning and mid-afternoon every day, come all underweight cases for their free ration of milk. And to the physician in charge, any employee may come at any time, for free diagnosis, free medical advice.

Any absence from work of more than three days' duration is promptly investigated by a Company nurse, who calls at the employee's home, taking with her any wages earned but unpaid. If sickness of a serious character is found to be the cause, she sees to it that competent medical supervision is provided at once.

It affords the Company real pleasure to serve the interests of its workers in these ways, and none the less so since experience has proven it is mutually beneficial.

THE JUBILEE

Though thousands of miles separated them from the centre of the Empire's festivities in the Royal Jubilee in London on Monday, Canadians still caught the fervor and sweep of the wave of loyalty and the spontaneous outburst of rejoicing for the Kingship of a good King is infectious in the spreading of happiness and goodwill. On this glad occasion the unity of the Homeland and the Dominions and Colonies was felt through the might of the defences of air, sea and land, but also and perhaps in a greater degree, through the spirit of loyalty and devotion to the Throne.

No celebration in history has been just the same as this which has been begun in connection with the Silver Jubilee of His Majesty King George and Her Majesty Queen Mary. Every part of the world knew of it and heard it whether that part was British in foundation or not and it is interesting to muse for a moment on the reaction with which such news would greet any Empire which covered even quarter of the habitable globe, is met in foreign lands. Such a demonstration of unity in diversity of lands and peoples within the Empire is surely the greatest achievement of political sagacity in th world—an Empire bound by the ties of liberty. This Jubilee was a heroine in every home and sang to the farthest bound as well as to the home of the wealthy family and to those who witnessed the royal cavalcade or progress in the City of London. Science through the instrumentality of radio brings the kingship and the people even more closely into relationship than ever.

Brothers believe that the race has the system which is capable of the best government for such a people as the British are, and they show that in the monarchy there is such a rule that is founded on morality and truth.

The last previous great celebration was in 1897, when the Jubilee of the late Queen Victoria marked the diamond jubilee of her reign. That was an occasion that is not forgotten but widespread as were the rejoicings of that period it could not compare with Monday's in the number of subjects to whom the Throne is a very real institution and to whom the King and Queen are very real people. In 1897 there were not the tremendous issues there are today.

Monday's pageantry and services created a scene worthy of emulation by nations and by individuals—because one people could in these momentous days with many unsolved problems, such as unemployment, find a cause of gladness and celebration. It means that the British Empire yet has treasures in the précedents and traditions of its past, that in these it finds solidity and defence, it means that there is yet a race of optimists who find much that is worthwhile and best. If every individual in the British Empire totally as the Empire feels, and if other nations could catch that fervor and inspiration, a changed era would dawn in a brief period and gigantic problems would find automatic solution.

To be free to feel the ties of the race is the explanation.

Today King George sits more securely on his throne than any monarch who has ever governed the light little isle and its Dominions.

BELLEVILLE HAS A PART

Belleville's celebration of the silver jubilee of King George's accession was typical of the people, wholehearted, nothing lacking in enthusiasm and zeal, sincere.

To thousands of children in the schools, to cadets, to veterans, to members of the militia units, to teachers and to citizens of every walk of life, the day as it was spent in the Old Land was brought very close as the people caught inspiration in the monarchy and the present ruler.

It brought a touch of the far-reaching effect of the King's interest as in the presence of thousands. Belleville citizens were presented with jubilee medals from His Majesty for outstanding services to the cause of the nation and Empire and to humanity. In Belleville it was particularly fitting that several women who have been for years in closest touch with philanthropic and charity organizations should receive the King's token. Such a gift does not fall to bring to mind the value of the work that women do which is truly of social, national and empire significance.

What a happy gift was this lovely day of celebration in a Canadian city three thousand miles from London, throbbing in unison and feeling all of the thrill of empire! In this Belleville was typical of every part of the Empire.

Boys and girls who saw this day have learned the greatest political lesson. They know what the Empire means. They may not be able to define it in words but they know,

Poverty often deprives a man of all felt to be so. Doubtless the best way to make our poverty respectable is to seem never to feel it as an evil.—Bovee.

PLAYING ON STREETS

Children playing in the streets are said by one student of accident causes to be the cause of a great many deaths on the roadways of cities.

But there is no law to prevent children playing in the streets. Larger cities have a wealth of parks for children and playgrounds for older boys and girls to a much larger degree than places of the size of Belleville and in this regard cities like Belleville would seem to be at a disadvantage. But even the larger cities have the problem of the children of tender years playing on roadways, for these children are too young to go to parks. They are more likely to play on the roadways in front of their homes. The children of the larger cities have no backyards to play in.

Street playing is extremely dangerous especially in those places where there is a heavy traffic and where many automobiles are parked.

There seems but little that can be done except for drivers to be very careful, for teachers to din home the message day in and day out that the roads are dangerous and for parents to keep a closer supervision if possible over their children, especially when they show a tendency to wander out upon the roads.

MAKING A LIVING

The London Times, not long ago, told of a woman chimneysweep in South Shropshire. The woman belonged to a family of sweeps, and when her brothers went off to the war, she took their place. The boys didn't come back, and the woman has been carrying on ever since. The size of her clientele suggests that she is carrying on efficiently. A curious business in London which came to light some time ago is that of the Thames Lighterwomen who wade for baptismal purposes. An allied business is the importation of soil from Jerusalem to add a touch of sacredness to otherwise unhallowed soil of cemeteries. A few London merchants made a bit of money, in past years, importing mummified cats from Egypt to be ground up for fertilizer.—Vancouver Province.

EMPIRES

It might well be asked what has become of all the heathen empires of the past? From the east to the Rome whose decline and fall have been narrated by Gibbon? They are all dead, and serve as warnings, not as examples. Their worship of physical force has departed. On the other hand, the intellectual influence of little Athens is still felt in the realm of thought and the religion which had its birth or at least its manifestation, in an obscure province of the Roman Empire, is infinitely more powerful than that organization which once ruled with overpowering appearance in the world. We may be discouraged by the occasional triumphs of pagan physical force, but we see all in the triumphs of the mind and the soul that survive. The physical triumphs are only eddies in the stream of human progress. One hopes that continued progress is not in the eddies, but at the stream, by fixing our eyes upon long, not upon short, periods of history.—London Advertiser.

WHEN THE ENGLISH TAKE TEA

Ninety-six per cent. of English families drink tea, according to a census taken at the mid-day meal, only 40 per cent. at the evening meal, but 88 per cent. have afternoon tea. At what other hours the people of Great Britain consume tea is difficult to define with accuracy, but investigations recently made have produced some surprising results.

It was found that in at least one family of every three tea is drunk in bed before getting up in the morning. Each person in Great Britain drinks on an average six cups of tea every day, or 10 pounds a year. Tea is the staple drink of the poorer people, which accounts for the high average consumption per head, but exactly where the consumption falls below average it has been impossible to ascertain. Social habits in Britain vary too much for any accuracy on this subject.

One thing, however, according to a correspondent of Manchester Guardian Commercial, is that very often the poorest people will buy the mots expensive teas, and that among the peasants in the west of Ireland the finest teas in the world are used with appreciable regularity. To a lesser degree this is true of South Wales and also the depressed areas of Yorkshire.

In the Imperial Economic Committee's report, which although published some years ago is still as accurate a guide as it is possible to obtain, it is shown that the English-speaking world, with exception of the United States, in no case drinks less than four pounds of tea per head every year. Consumption in 1933-34 showed a decline in Canada, but is still around four pounds per capita. The people of the United States consume only three-quarters of a pound of tea every year. Indeed, they show no marked preference for any particular beverage, drinking only about twice as much coffee as of tea.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue; it is hard for an empty bag to stand upright.—Franklin.

ROSES

Roses in a garden,
Bird-song, hum of bees.
Golden lights and shadow
Dancing down through trees;
Petals faintly stirring
In the sun-drenched air,
Fragrance of the roses
Drifting everywhere.

Roses in a sick-room
Where the slow refrain
Of the clock is timed to
Mounting waves of pain.
Roses sunk in shadows,
Roses robbed of sky,
Let still spending beauty
While dull hours creep by.

You are like the roses,
Yours, love's fragrant grace.
Yours to scatter beauty
In whatever place.

CELEBRATION OF THE KING'S SILVER JUBILEE Monday surpassed all expectations. It might well have been called Empire Day for the entire Empire rejoiced and in no uncertain voice expressed love and loyalty to King George and the Royal Family. The radio carried greetings and expressions of love and loyalty from every part of the Empire and there was a tone of pride in all at being members of so great a brotherhood of nations. Among the many expressions of loyalty from all parts of the far-flung empire none was more interesting or significant than that of the Premier of South Africa, General Jan Christian Smuts, who is in London for the Jubilee ceremonies. General Smuts expresses his regard for King George as follows:

"With him one never has a sense of position, pose or pomp. The centre of the mightiest and most successful group of countries that ever existed in history, he himself is simplicity itself, and that simple self is composed of sheer humanness, giving him a tact and sympathy and an intuitive understanding of others which are real sources of strength."

This is the same General Jan Christian Smuts, who fought so vigorously against the British troops during the Boer War, and who was among the last to give up the struggle, but among the first to recognize British generosity in the terms of peace, and kindness to a defeated foe, and one of the most effective of Boer leaders in helping to take into the Union of Dominion to a formerly much hated enemy. He became Prime Minister of The Union of South Africa and was in the inner circle of the British Cabinet during the Great War. Hence, when such a tribute to the sovereign comes from this sturdy republican it is no wonder that the entire world applauds with love, loyalty, respect and esteem for the best beloved occupant of a throne of all time.

OMAHA, GALLANT SON OF GALLANT FOX won the Kentucky Derby Saturday in as impressive style as his gallant sire did a few years ago. The Kentucky Derby is one of the classic sporting events of the year and interest in it is world-wide, approaching that of the famous historic event in England, from which the course and the event are named. The English Derby at Churchill Downs. Roman Soldier was second and Whiskolo, third, while Nellie Flag, the only filly in the race and a strong favorite, was fourth. In the fifty-one years of the running of the Kentucky Derby only one filly has finished first, and many looked for Nellie Flag to make it two wins for fillies. However, the filly was seriously interfered with in the race, being bumped several times by other horses and was lucky to finish fourth and win one thousand dollars. Omaha won approximately $40,000, second money being $6,000, and third, $3,000. Eighteen horses started. More than fifty thousand people watched the race in a downpour of rain.

BELLEVILLE'S CELEBRATION OF JUBILEE DAY, was in keeping with the occasion and one which the loyal citizens of this community can have every reason to be proud of. The marching units from the local military units and veterans of the Great War to the school cadets presented a fine appearance and the entire affair was managed with dignity and a deep spirit of loyalty.

DEATH TOLL IN CRASH NOW FIVE

Pilot Sought Emergency Landing Field as Gas Supply Low

Macon, Mo., May 7 (AP) — The death toll in the crash of the big bound airliner near Atlanta, Mo., was increased to five today with the death of Mrs. William Kaplan of West Los Angeles.

Mrs. Kaplan, wife of William Kaplan, Hollywood film studio executive, died today in a hospital after the big dual-motored craft struck the earth when the pilot was seeking an emergency landing field.

The accident brought death to Senator Sheridan Downey of New Mexico.

The condition of Paul Wing, Hollywood, was reported "very low." C. B. Dyer, Santa Monica, Calif., although reported in a critical condition, was said by physicians to be resting easy after a blood transfusion.

Without the information which Pilot Harvey Bolton and co-Pilot Kenneth H. Greason could supply, were they alive, investigators referred repeatedly to Bolton's last words:

"I ran out of gasoline."

Whatever the cause of the crash, fellow pilots agreed he must have tried through the darkness and fog during the time he was seeking an emergency field to find one after the blinding fog and the knowledge his gasoline supply was running low.

Senator Cutting, Greason and Miss Jeanne Anne Millias, 20, Kansas City, were dead when rescuers reached the scene of the crash in a muddy pasture. Bolton died a few hours later.

Everett Wingate, country cheesekeeper, aroused the first to reach the dying pilot, said Bolton expressed concern for the safety of others.

"Get the passengers out of here quick," he told Wingate. "They are all hurt badly. Don't bother about me. Get over there and tear the doors off that baggage car and use them for stretchers. Get those passengers to a hospital."

Kaplan suffered a broken leg; Richard Wallace, Hollywood motion picture director, severe chest injuries and Henry Sharpe, Los Angeles, film cameraman, superficial cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Jean Mcaper of Los Angeles and Port Washington, Long Island, a broken right leg and cuts.

Mrs. D. L. Meeker, Kansas City, wife of a pilot, minor cuts and slight injuries, but her three months old baby daughter, suffered a broken left leg.

The flight of Mr. and Mrs. Kaplan was the beginning of a honeymoon trip, deferred since their marriage last November.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK - By R. J. Scott

British Empire Pays Homage to Gracious Royal Pair in Greatest Demonstration Seen in London

Beautiful Weather

Under a canopy of blue sky, millions of Britons, along a four-mile route in London yesterday accorded to the King and Queen a triumphal jubilee celebration. Flags of the Empire and of many nations decked the "Royal Way" from Buckingham palace to St. Paul's cathedral for a parade of unsurpassed brilliance, enthusiasm and majesty.

The cheers thus began valleyed down the ranks of spectators from the palace, along the Strand, Fleet Street and Ludgate Hill to the cathedral, and then back to Buckingham Palace along the Thames embankment.

The monarch, smiling, waved a white-gloved hand in acknowledgment. The Queen bowed right and left. Ahead of them were carriages bearing the Prince of Wales, the Dukes and Duchess of Kent and York, the Duke of Gloucester and Queen Maud of Norway.

Granted King Right

Separate salvos of applause greeted each royal personage. Reprimed old London decked with bunting and flowers resplendent with memories and sounds of medieval chivalry, became magically transformed into a new, unparalleled field of the cloth of gold.

At the height of gaiety came a snag. As the royal coach reached Marigold Arcus a banner appeared decorated with hammer and sickle and bearing the Communist cry: "Workers of all countries—unite!" Crowds tore down and trampled the offending sign.

The ovation rose to deafening heights as the procession, well down Constitution Arcus, heard the omnipresent Union Jack whipped between the breezes of the dominions and other nations. A climax of splendor and ancient pageantry was reached at the Temple Bar, entrance to the historic City of London, where Sir Charles, Lord Mayor of London, greeted the royal coach, handed to the King the traditional sword and, in accordance with ancient custom, granted to him the right to enter the City of London.

Sang National Anthem

The gold-helmeted gentlemen-at-arms, the gray-bewigged magistrates and the blue-andermid uniformed ambassadors followed the royal coaches and the mile long escorts into Fleet Street. Presently the great dome of St. Paul's cathedral loomed mightily over the procession.

The solemnity of the setting was communicated to the gay, teeming crowds. With bared heads and with one mighty will they joined in the National Anthem—"God Save the King!" The round, inspiring words of the melody were taken up by the four miles of spectators. The song echoed across the Thames and through all London.

Then silence fell—the hush of a multitude. King George, resplendent in the scarlet uniform of a Field Marshal, and Queen Mary, in a blue-and-silver gown, alighted and walked along the rich, lush-decked carpet to the great portal of the Cathedral.

The Prince of Wales wore the scarlet uniform of the Welsh Guards.

The Duke of York wore his uniform of a vice-admiral and the Duke of Kent was in the uniform of a naval commander. Princess Marina, now the Duchess of Kent wore a gown of pale beige and the Duchess of York wore pastel blue.

Archbishop Speaks

Through the shadowy gothic cathedral echoed the National Anthem, played by the mellowed old organ and sung by a white-surpliced choir. Then, in the proud humility of a world-embracing empire, the choir sang a hymn, not for the King, for commonwealth, but for "all people, that on earth do dwell."

In the cathedral were Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, his daughter Ishbel, the Premiers of Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, the members of the Royal Family, the diplomatic corps to the Court of St. James' and countless other dignitaries.

The most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, delivered a short impressive sermon. The Bishop of London offered dignified thanks for safeguarding the King during his 25 years of his reign. Prayers followed, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, wearing the mitre, pronounced the benediction. All rose to sing the National Anthem.

The King and Queen then left, escorted by the Bishop of London and the College of Canons. The procession reformed and moved along the Thames embankment back to Buckingham Palace, amid renewed salvos of far-echoing plaudits.

Sidelights on the jubilee celebrations, grave and gay, were plentiful.

Message Poor in

London tearooms did a roaring trade. Hungry patriots, many of them, began breakfasting at midnight in order to gain vantage points, formed queues for meals at restaurants were crowded.

Stone and brick facades, dusty with the smoke of centuries, were cloaked with fresh flowers as well as bunting along the route of the procession.

Scenes of congratulation poured into Buckingham Palace from all parts of the world.

A great jubilee bonfire, lighted in Hyde Park last night was the culmination of the largest pile of its con fires, the length and breadth of the British Isles, since the Spanish Armada was spotted off Plymouth Hoe.

More than 200,000 persons, the greatest throng since the armistice, milled around Buckingham palace, hoping for another glimpse of their sovereigns. Their patience was rewarded, when the King and Queen appeared on the balcony. The applause was uproarious.

With one voice the 200,000 sang "God Save the King". It was perhaps the mightiest serenade in history.

Till early morning crowds thronged the streets, celebrating the Jubilee.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald tendered the Premiers of the Empire a banquet. He also expressed in a broadcast speech the loyal homage and heartfelt congratulations of the people of Great Britain on the occasion.

Rudyard Kipling issued a warning to build up national defences in an address to the Royal Society of St. George's. Failing this, he said, the possibility, that "before we are aware of it our country may have joined those submerged races of history, who passed their children through fire to moloch in order to win credit with their god."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Helped Miss Kesterke

"We quote from her letter: "Three years ago, I became constipated." I tried many laxatives but found none as I got used to each kind, I began to get the same trouble.

"Last summer I was on my vacation. They served Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I just loved it. I eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every morning, and ever since I have not had to take any more laxatives."—Miss Margaret Kesterke. Address on request.

"Due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN is also rich in vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle. It tends to help you better form the fiber in fruits and vegetables, so it is often more effective.

Isn't this food safer than risking patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. If seriously constipated, use with each meal. See your doctor, if you do not get relief.

Orangemen Send Greetings to Their Majesties

A message of good will to His Majesty King George V on the occasion of his jubilee, was read during the divine service held at the Emmanuel Church on Sunday night last, which the Benjamin L.O.L. No. 274 attended in a body.

The message to His Majesty read:

"Belleville, Ont., Can., "May 5th, 1935.

"To The King's Most Gracious Majesty,

"Buckingham Palace, "London, England:

"Rt. Rev. Bishop Marshall, officers and members of the Reformed Episcopal Church, Belleville, Ontario, Canada, Provincial Grand Master, officers and members of Benjamin Loyal Orange Lodge No. 274 and Brethren of the County of South Hastings, in divine service assembled, beg leave to offer our most loyal congratulations to your Gracious Majesty and Beloved Consort on the anniversary of your accession to the throne of the British Empire. Our prayer is and always will be that your Majesties, by the grace of God, may long be spared to adorn your exalted stations and rule over the destiny of an appreciative and devoted people.

"(Signed) E. F. Reid, Grand Master of Ontario East and Rt. Rev. Bishop Marshall."

Reviews Reign.

A flitting service celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession of His Majesty, King George V, followed the reading of the message with Rt. Rev. Bishop Marshall delivering a message for the occasion. The service was one of prayer and praise commemorating this unique event.

Bishop Marshall in his address took the Bible passage "And all the people rejoiced for all that God had given the king." After welcoming Grand Master E. F. Reid of Peterboro, Grand Master Ritchie of the Black Knights and the attending Orangemen, Bishop Marshall reviewed the past twenty-five years in which His Gracious Sovereign, King George, had reigned. Rev. Marshall referred to the various conditions through which the British Empire had passed before referring to the present economic crisis that faces the Empire and world today. "Our present economic condition must be overhauled, and, if found wanting, scrapped," asserted Bishop Marshall as he intimated that the society of today demanded a change in our present economic set-up. "I tell you the remedy is in our own hands, we must seek divine guidance, something that has been cast aside by the present generation. In the past the British Empire turned to God with prolific results in every incident," added the speaker as he urged the fraternal brethren present to again seek that divine guidance that has been apparently neglected of late.

"God has blessed and prospered the British Empire down through centuries with the result that with each succeeding sovereign ascending the throne the Empire has become stronger. Therefore let our hearts go out to God for His mercies to our Gracious King George and his Consort," requested the speaker in conclusion as he closed with prayers for their Majesties. The National Anthem and other patriotic hymns of praise were included in the paternal service. Rev. Bro. A. L. Geen read the lesson while E. F. Reid, Grand Master of Ontario East of all loyal Orangemen read the message that was later dispatched to their Majesties upon their twenty-fifth anniversary jubilee. The message was sent by cablegram early Monday.

Neighbors Work Desperately to Free Man in Well

Kamloops, B. C., May 7—(CP)—Stout-hearted Thomas Becker was growing weaker today as 20 men dug desperately to rescue him from the well hole, where he was buried up to the waist by a 12-ton ground level at Barriere, 36 miles north of here.

Becker, 32-year-old employee of the Kennedy Lumber Company, was digging the well with two other men when a cave-in occurred Monday. The others got clear but Becker was caught as he scrambled up the ladder.

The well was too narrow to allow shovellers to work and Becker dug himself partially clear by filling pails with dirt with his hands. The pails were drawn up by the rescuers above. By the time Becker had dug down to his waist he was too exhausted to do more.

In the meantime, a short crew is digging a ditch on an incline so as to clear the buried man without causing further slides.

Cities, Towns and Hamlets In Dominion Attest Loyalty

Generally Paraded Held And Thanksgiving Prayers Recited

(By The Canadian Press)

Buoyed by the lingering sentiment of a great Thanksgiving Day, Canada went back to work today as the 26th year of the King's reign opened amid Empire-wide acclaim. Canada celebrated His Majesty's Silver Jubilee yesterday with as much enthusiasm, joy and devotion as any British people.

Thousands assembled in cities, towns and hamlets across the country to join in ceremonies, that had their centre in London and that stretched to every part of the world, that was British or where British men happened to be. "God Save the King" rolled around the world.

A crowd of 30,000 thronged Parliament Hill in Ottawa where the Governor-General, the Right Hon. Bessborough, was the central figure in the national ceremony. He said: "We are here to testify our loyalty and devotion to our sovereign lord King George, and to our gracious Queen Mary, who throughout their lives have been faithful servants of God and of their people, and to render thanks for their service to us all for a quarter of a century."

This event in the capital was but one of scores—hundreds—of similar ceremonies throughout the Dominion. It was a cool, damp day over a great part of the country but only at one point Calgary, where it snowed six inches, was the celebration delayed. Calgary will hold its official ceremony Saturday.

The greatest gathering was at Montreal where 100,000 people watched Mayor Camillien Houde unveil a bronze tablet commemorating the day of thanksgiving. At Quebec, Cardinal Villeneuve was among those to receive one of the King's Jubilee medals. Nearly 10,000 were presented to Canadians.

School Children Parade

Premiers, Cabinet Ministers, leaders in church and social life took part in other outstanding celebrations in Charlottetown, Halifax, Fredericton, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Victoria. At each of these Provincial capitals Lieutenant-Governors played leading roles.

There were booming military salutes at each Government seat. Thousands of school children, in most cases carrying flags, took part in the celebrations not only in the Provincial capitals but in hundreds of other places.

Fifteen thousand persons, including 7,000 school children, paraded at Windsor. Another 15,000 met in London, Ont. Ario. Another 10,000 at Sault Ste. Marie and Kitchener; 5,000 at Stratford and Owen Sound were among those reported.

And after a day of paying tribute, Canada heard His Majesty speak to the Empire. Young Canada heard him say: "The King is speaking to you. I say you to remember in days to come you will be citizens of a great Empire. As you grow up always keep this thought before you and when the time comes be ready and proud to give to your country the service of your work, your mind and your heart."

Radio listeners also heard brief speeches by Lieutenant-Governors as part of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission's special Jubilee program.

Governor General Present When Royal Salute is Fired

MANY ADDRESSES

Acting Premier and Rt. Hon. Mr. King Express Loyalty

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—People of Ottawa turned back to work again cherishing the memory of a great and spectacular tribute to a beloved King and Queen.

The great crowds, the pageantry of military uniforms, gay flags and all that went to make the gigantic on Parliament Hill yesterday one of exceptional interest, had disappeared but the spirit of loyalty and devotion, which animated the celebration of the Silver Jubilee of King George's reign remained strong as ever.

Estimates of those who gathered before the flag-draped pavilion on Parliament Hill yesterday morning varied, but general agreement said the crowd was one of the greatest ever seen there on any occasion. From the official celebration lasted for only about one hour, the entire day and a good part of last night were utilized by visitors and others, who came and went on the green lawns of the stately buildings.

Bonfires, gun salutes, parades, patriotic tunes sung by a large choir recruited from churches and schools, and speeches by the Governor General, the acting Prime Minister, and the leader of the official Opposition, furnished the program for the official ceremony.

It opened at 11 in the morning with the arrival of the Governor General and members of his party. In a gay pavilion specially erected in front of the soaring peace tower of the Parliament Buildings, those persons, who had obtained seats in the reserved enclosure were waiting, below them was the great crowd stretching far in front and to either side.

Royal Salute

A Royal Salute of 21 guns and ringing of church bells all over the city marked the arrival of His Excellency and the opening of the program. Then came the singing of the National Anthem led by the massed bands and choir. The Governor General spoke, in English and in French; and Sir George Perley, acting Prime Minister, as well as Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Opposition Leader, followed also in the two official languages of Canada. Their speeches emphasized the spirit of affection, which flowed between the King and Queen and the people of the British Empire. They referred to the intense interest felt by their Majesties in the welfare of their people. They also reviewed the events of the quarter century during which King George has sat upon the Empire Throne.

Presentation by the Governor General of the King's Silver Jubilee medal to about 30 prominent citizens formed one of the items of the brief official program.

The singing of "O Canada" closed the proceedings, after which the Government House party left the pavilion, and the crowds were given up to the crowd, which listened to the speeches broadcast from various parts of the Empire.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

ESCAPE

CHAPTER ONE

They laid Jim Allen in his grave; and five years later his wife, Nellie, turned her tired young face to the wall and died, too.

All of which really made it very inconvenient for Nellie's young son Ezra. Who but Nellie could contrive to die of pneumonia in the middle of summer? Who but Nellie could, on the cunning season, too, when boil-and-wringer wars are scarce!

Then, too, there was Nellie's daughter to consider. No matter how gifted a man might be in making odds and ends fit into the prosperous scheme of things, a child of seven in a small town hotel can only be regarded in the light of a liability.

Ezra Slade chewed the end of his straggly mustache and felt the full disapproval of the little Joyce dropped to actual dislike.

By the time Joyce had become a useful small drudge around the Riverton Commercial House, her uncle's resentment had become a fixed habit. At 12, Joyce quite understood that she was tolerated merely because her presence saved a waitress' salary to the proprietor of the Commercial House.

Yet Ezra Slade treated her no better now nor any worse than he treated his own.

Fat and slatternly Aunt Clara worked in the dark hotel kitchen from early morning until dark.

Freckle faced Madeline—Maddy—waited on the tables in the ugly dark red dining room. Amelia—Maddy's eldest of the three, did the upstairs work.

Ezra himself was manager and porter and bellboy and janitor of the big rambling frame building which faced the railroad tracks, and spent not one blistered side to the thick white dust of Maple Avenue.

Lashed on relentlessly by their taciturn task master, no one was more overworked than that seasoned himself.

Yet even Ezra had his diversions—his escape from reality. For Ezra, the high adventure of life came in making two nickles grow where no one had ever dreamed of planting a nickle before.

Each Clara found her escape in "canapa," in the middle of the afternoon in that blissful oasis between doing the lunch dishes and peeling the vegetables for dinner she would announce with a windy sigh:

"Well—I think I'll be lying down and takin' a catnap. My feet feel like two bolls."

Maddy's escape consisted of time when traveling evangelists held revival meetings in the old fairgrounds on the outskirts of town. On such occasions Maddy's pale eyes lit with something of burning ardor, and there was finality in her quavering hymns the next day as she pumped up pillows and shook sheets.

Maddy, was perhaps the luckiest of them all. Maddy had discovered boys at an early age. With the Riverton Cannery just across the railroad tracks and the Cameron Paper Mill half a mile down the river, she never lacked a cavalier.

As Joyce grew into young girlhood, her cousin contrived to have her included on the Sunday afternoon excursions. The result was not a hundred percent. Gum chewing youths, at first sluggishly appreciative of Joyce's unusual beauty, lost their enthusiasm before the day was done.

She was all wet. . . . a washout . . . they scoffed to Maddy; and Maddy, who had been inclined to view her cousin with alarm, became cheerfully patronizing.

How were these country town girls accustomed, succumbed to easy, glaring conquests, to guess at the rich ardent nature of the girl? To gaze at the passionate intensity—the flaming spirit which underlay the indifference which she had grown as a shell of protection.

Joyce grew into herself. Silently enduring the sordid surroundings from which she so ardently longed, while she privately searched for escape. . . . Escape then—to one of the summer vacations—as Norman Weaver.

Norman Weaver was the son of Riverton's leading attorney. The average good looking, smartly dressed young fellow one sees strolling around college campuses. He attended—while he was definitely not a big-shot himself.

Yet even Ezra had his dreams—his escape from reality. For Ezra, the high adventure of life came in making two nickles grow where no one had ever dreamed of planting a nickle before.

Each Clara found her escape in "canapa," in the middle of the afternoon in that blissful oasis beton's finest residential district. On summer mornings when Riverton drove by in his low slung car, collar open about his brown throat, flashing smiles as the pretty girls swayed by, Joyce's heart sang within her. She wouldn't sadly have flourished his fraternity pin on the front of her dress. Now, Phalida Cameron herself, for all she was the leader of the younger set, had lived in Dering Cameron house at the head of Valley View Street.

All of which made it the more astonishing that Norman Weaver should be down in the back yard at the Commercial House late this July afternoon, holding Joyce Allen in his arms.

They had slipped into the narrow space between the woodshed and the fence where they were shielded from anyone who might glance from the back of the hotel.

Perfectly inviting a cool hand on the earth after the heat of the day. The iron hard ground was still warm beneath her. The girl's face was white with fatigue, but the eyes she lifted to the young fellow's face were like stars.

"I says you come in on the train this morning. I went upown on an errand and slipped into the station. You didn't see me in the crowd."

"Say, the fatkly hustled me into the taxi before I didn't see hardly anybody! And then a mob kept pouring into the house all afternoon. Gosh, Joyce, I got time to lie down here to see my girl, didn't I? I'm all tuckered."

"Mm you!" Tears suddenly stung the girl's eyes so that she squeezed them shut and clung to him desperately.

Through a white teeth shone an a little triumphant smile. Gee.... to make a girl cry!

Pillowing her chin with one possessive hand and looked at her in the dusk.

He knew his women, this popular young fellow. Knew how to make a spoiled young wives of older men friends. Even chorines of the musical shows that played the college town.

None of them had anything on this little waitress down here in the shabby Commercial House. Not one of them, after six months, Joyce's beauty struck him anew.

Her face was a pure medium height and gracefully slender. Her face was a pure oval, the skin fine grained. Her hair was dark red—not lustrous, but deepening to burnished tones in the sunlight. Her dark brows —oddly straight and of unusual length, shaded eyes and lips gave her that touch of lovely strangeness he had noticed about a few women.

Half forgotten lines of an English poem stirred in his memory.

"I met a lady in the meads. Full beautiful—a faery child—"

It was not often that he thought of such things. It was part of his charm that he could stir him so.

"You're beautiful girl! Lord . . . you're driving me wild. Kiss me. . . ."

The two clung motionless for a moment, so long that the light had faded from the sky before they raised his head.

"I had a car crazy about you, Joyce. There were times—this last half year when I felt I'd give anything to have had you with me.

"Did you think of me?"

"Mm hm." The girl's voice was husky. "I—I think it was just all I thought of. Every single day."

Such savage intensity in the words that he looked at her startled.

Joyce's face was ashen and white. Eyes like coals. He'd never seen such eyes. Like—like a tigress, he thought. The naked adoration which he saw there both frightened and excited him.

"Sometimes—" she went on in that tight choked voice, "I thought I'd die if I didn't come to you. I'd lie at night, thinking about you. Remembering the first time I saw you and the times we met up in Meeker's Woods—"

She had suddenly begun to cry. She reached up and drew his face down to her own. He could taste the salt of her tears while he kissed her.

"Hush, honey . . . hush, Joyce—someone'll hear you."

Fired as he was by her ardor, Norman Weaver was also secretly afraid. Suppose Joyce should scream, then . . . . If this should get around. Gosh, no . . . Good Lord!

'TEN O'CLOCK TONIGHT—'

CHAPTER TWO

After a moment Joyce was still, standing motionless, holding Norman hard to her, wet cheek pressed against his shoulder.

Norman was a trifle dismayed at her fervor. Co-ed passengers young follow—freak from six months of college—were athletes and whooping parties had figured larger than study, how could he guess at the flatness of Joyce Allen's life in the Commercial House?

What could he know of dismal evenings washing dishes in the steamy kitchen? The oppressive heat of the dining room. The food smells which made her slightly sick when they mounted to her bedroom above the kitchen.

Through it all she had clung to the thought of Norman. His love was a cool fountain bubbling in her heart, bracing her through the long days.

And now he was here—holding her in his arms, and from the quietness—the greenness. Norman . . . those love words she had dreamed during comet streaking down the darkness of her skies.

The girl pushed his face in her hair. He murmured: "My girl, aren't you? Gosh, I'll be back on the locally. We'll drive up to the ridge above Meeker's Woods and sit in the car, shall we?"

"Oh, yes!" Adding her —but although her heart had not been full of the thoughts for months.

"Then I'll come back tonight. Shall I pick you up at the same place?"

"Yes," she whispered.

"Kiss me then and I'll go. I said I came down for some cigarettes. They'll wonder what's keeping me. Kiss me. . . . Gee, honey . . . Kiss me like that again and I'll never go!"

They clung together, merged to one in the half light.

It was the sound of her own name called in a high falsetto from the house which startled the girl and made her drop her arms swiftly.

"That's Aunt Clara. I forgot about helping . . . Wait until I'm in the house and then go out the side gate so they won't see you."

"Good-bye, Joyce . . . ten o'clock tonight!" Norman called softly after the slim figure flying across the grey yard.

Joyce left romance behind her in the kitchen. She stepped into the kitchen, Aunt Clara's wet red face bloomed hyperopically through the steam of mashed potatoes.

Where have you been keepin' yourself, Joyce? Here I am doin' your work's well's my own an' your uncle mad'der'n a hatter!"

Maddy, passing by with a full tray, whined broadly:

"Do your share, got in! When you goin' to see him again?" she murmured.

"Ten o'clock tonight!" and it was a tune as Joyce sang it.

The evening wore on interminably. Steamy hot kitchen. Ugly red dining room lit with glaring electric lights. Rows of oilcloth covered tables. Chairs scraping on the worn floor. Crash of dishes. Maddy's shrill giggle and scream as she dropped a tray.

Bold appraising stare of the new head waiter. Leers from several greasy youths trying to trap her when she passed near them. Cruel pity welled on them. Ezra Slade's suspicious scowl behind the cash register.

The scrolid din rising about her like a tide. Ugly, sordid, threatening flowing ahead of her imprisoned body.

Her spirit already waited under the wheels of the chariot.

Eleven-thirty. The muffled bang of the screen door as the last of the diners strolled onto the porch picking his teeth.

Eight-thirty. Well still washing dishes, Maddy and Joyce drying them.

Nine o'clock. The kitchen finished. Ashes raked out of the stove, Ezra's towels slung across the line. In the dining room the rows of oilcloths had been folded and stacked. Time set for the next day. Chipped white pepper and salt shakers filled. Sugar pot. Vinegar and oil cruet. White paper napkins in racks.

Release at last! A couple of hours in which to relax. To live. To love. To dream. That had been in the long, long ago. She did not know how to play. She sat on the steps of the porch for half an hour rocking in the creaking rocker, then went upstairs to bed.

Since there was no revival meeting out at the fairgrounds, Maddy was already in bed.

Joyce slowly undressed about the house with a monkey wrench on the trail of a leaky faucet which was dripping in the water tank.

With a great show of stretching and yawning Maddy and Joyce went up to the bedroom over the kitchen where they slept.

Every freckle twinkling, small grey-green eyes batting with excitement, Maddy confided:

"Ju see that new foreman over the Kelly Construction Co. he's been waited on him tonight? He dated me over to the dance at Brierville. Gee, him is keen. Him's got a job and a flivver."

They understood each other, these two girls. Many a night when Ezra Slade thought they were safely storing up energy for the next day's work they had slipped out the window and down the porch trellis and were formed an easy descent. Stealing their youthful share of life and pleasure!

They hastily took off their house aprons and changed into their best clothes, once pausing to peer into the dark, smothering nervous giggles at Ezra Slade passed to his room.

But Joyce was starry eyed and silent her heart filled with music.

The spotted mirror of the bureau gave back Joyce's radiant image. She knew it was the fruit of the months of many months. She had re-

New York, May 7.—(AP)—A blast of criticism sounded today in the wake of the announcement of the award of the Pulitzer prize play, "Men of Old Maid" by Zoe Akins.

"The drama, adapted from a story by Edith Wharton, was chosen by the Advisory Board of the Columbia School of Journalism as the best American play of 1934.

Clayton Hamilton, who resigned last year after serving 16 years on the Pulitzer Advisory Board and the Board had passed up the "finest play of the year and of many years — "The Children's Hour" for a play which "is not original and which depends for its transference of a novel to the stage."

In Hollywood, Miss Akins replied: "I'm not interested in discussing this. However in all fairness, I must point out that "The Old Maid" a 1930 Pulitzer Prize winner) also was an adaptation."

Miss Akins gave full credit to Mrs. Wharton for the inspiration for the play.

"Certainly she deserves as many bouquets as I," she said. "The character in her story was my inspiration for any exceptional quality the play possesses."

The drama winner was announced by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler,

Canadian Cavalcade

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—Canadians today were reviewing events of the twentieth century during which King George has reigned. With their memories awakened by "Canadian Cavalcade," a review of outstanding events in the past 25 years, broadcast yesterday over a national hook-up by the Canadian Radio Commission, they were the guests of honor in one were thinking of outstanding occurrences which they had forgotten.

All Canada was linked over the air yesterday in the first broadcast program which accompanied speeches from the throne. The world war, acting Prime Minister and others. A series of orchestras in cities from Halifax to Victoria, the city joined in playing "God Save the King" and "O Canada" following the other and each playing a few bars.

Lieutenant-Governors of the nine provinces followed one another on the air in expressing Jubilee sentiments and then a series of brief speeches from prominent Canadians in various fields, Dr. Seager Wheeler, Saskatoon agricultural world's wheat king, a champion Quebec lumberjack, Angus Walters, skipper of the fishing schooner Bluenose, speaking from Lunenburg, N.S., Audrey Brown, Vancouver, youthful poetess from her sickbed at Nanaimo, B.C., Jack Miner from his bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ont., Dr. Augustus Bell, Toronto physician, Miss Miles from Ottawa, and a British Columbia lumberman.

LEAFS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

Earl Cook Hurls Swell Ball For Nine Innings

By The Associated Press

Dick Ward, who won 13 games and lost four with Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League last year, may be just what Rochester Red-Wings need to put them back into the thick of the International League pennant race.

Heard to be not ready for the Majors, St. Louis Cardinals shipped the 24-year-old right-hander to the Wings. He made his first start yesterday and limited Rochester to six fourth place in the standings, three points above Baltimore Orioles in Buffalo.

The Orioles, accustomed to hitting home runs almost as frequently as singles, had to be content with three hits, two of which were doubles as Ward blanked them 5-0. He yielded six bases on balls but struck out four and was effective with pace on the bases.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Albany Senators ended all-square in their doubleheader, played before 6,000 shivering fans.

Take opening

The Senators took the opening game 2-0 in 10 innings behind the three-hit hurling of Jimmy Smith-ers, who allowed only one runner to get as far as third base. The Leafs came back to take the seven-inning nightcap 5-4 when Peacock singled, Oliver sacrificed and Jackman drove out a one bagger to send the former in with the winning run in the final frame.

In the first game, Earl Cook and Gordon Matthews in pitching nine innings but in the 10th Cook tripled and stole home as Don Kellett followed with another three-bagger and scored on Pete Palmer's sacrifice fly.

After Red Grabowski had pitched Albany ball for eight innings Jimmy McCloskey and Clarence Fluhrer had to be called to the rescue in the ninth before Syracuse Chiefs managed to whip Montreal Royals 3-2. The Royals had the winning run on base, when Fluhrer finally stopped the rally.

COLLEGE HILL CUBS ON TOP

Defeat South End 15-11 in Wall Street Loop Game

In a free hitting orgy of softball the College Hill Cubs forged to the leadership of the Wall Street League when they downed the South End 15-11 on the scores of 15 to 11 at the college's field last night, the game being terminated in the 6th inning on account of darkness.

Taking an early inning lead the Cubs blasted Andy Knotz from the hillop with solid hits in the first three frames. Chuck Barrie relieved effectively stemming the tide of battle. Ed Schriver batted in the deciding run on the mound for the victors and was given marvelous support behind the plate by Barrie. Another Wall Street game will be played on the College Hill diamond tonight.

PETES WIN TWO

Peterboro, May 7.—Peterboro C. O. R. L. team celebrated the Jubilee holiday with a Saturday morning and afternoon games from the Valleyviews baseball club. Spotty fielding and hit pitching was too much for the visitors in the morning game and in the afternoon the Valleyviews whiffed while the Petes did some timely hitting to win without much trouble. The afternoon fixture was a see-saw affair with the honours, although close, fairly, finally grabbing the decision.

Chester, England, May 7—(CP Cable)—Sir Abe Bailey's four-year-old colt Valerious won the Chester Vase over the mile and a half course here today. He defeated Lord Glorney's Assignation second and Anthony De Rothschild's Lord Paramount third.

The race is worth approximately $10,000.00.

FISHES AT 92

Toronto, May 7—(CP)—Fishing in a snowstorm in his 92rd year, Rt. Hon. Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice of Ontario, caught 42 speckled trout in his ponds at Holland House, Markdale, near here, during the weekend.

SOCCER

The local soccer football season was unofficially opened with an exhibition game played between the Belleville Rangers and the Trenton soccer club at the Cricket Field last night in connection with the King's Jubilee Celebration. The Belleville squad showed superior form on the attack, eventually defeating their rivals by the score of 3 to 1. A return game before the regular season opens, is contemplated.

The local squad won the toss and kicked off with the wind, scoring the first goal after five minutes of play. Shortly after the opening of the second half the visitors applied a pressure that eventually resulted in their knotting the score, but this advantage was short lived, when the locals turned the tide of battle to score the winning goal a few minutes before full time. M. Campbell was the outstanding man to appear for the locals.

The line-ups:

Belleville, United—Goal, Plummer; full backs, Campbell and Hall; halfbacks, Plummer, Terry and Lillie; forwards, Norridge, Brooks, Doug. Blazonone and Tout.

Trenton—Goal, Hiles; full-backs Richardson and Snedden; halfbacks, Lovegrove and Pratt; forwards, Woodacre, Austin, Nakkin, Mern and McLaughlin.

Referee—J. P. Magill.

Survivor Told Not to Sail on The Lusitania

Albany, N.Y., May 7 (CP)—Solicitor Abramowitz broke 20 years' silence to tell his story today of the Lusitania disaster. He still has the life preserver he wore, when the ship sank off the Irish Coast 20 years ago today.

"Three days before the sailing I was told by Captain Turner of the ship Consul' which said: 'Do not sail on the Lusitania. She will be sunk,' said Abramowitz. "I did not heed the warning because so many people had received similar warnings to the boats.

He described how the great ship shivered, when struck by two torpedoes and began to list. He was assisted by the officer to allow only women and children to pass into the boats.

"A tiny baby wrapped in a blanket was handed to me and I saw by a crying mother, who could not get into the boat," he said. "A three-year-old boy was thrown down the deck by his mother.

"We began screams and a few minutes later when he looked back there were only a few boxes and a few people in the water, where the liner had been."

Former Governor "Al" Smith Helps

New York, May 7—(AP)— Alfred E. Smith, for whom the sidewalks of New York were once childhood environment, gave a helping hand today to the Empire State inhabited them in the famous song:

Where they dirk together...Me and Mamie Rorke.

"Tripped the light fantastic on the sidewalks of New York."

James W. Blake, the man who held him responsible Mamie's hand and danced to hurdy-gurdy music down on East 18th Street years ago, is dangerously ill at Lenox Hill.

Word that he might die unless an X-ray diagnosis of his illness could be made at once reached the former governor.

"Someone should have told me sooner," Smith said. "I am extremely sorry to hear his condition is so serious. Send word that I will see he gets everything he needs."

Smith's personal physician, Dr. Raymond C. Sullivan arranged for Blake to be taken to a hospital today.

"Under Pressure" Gripping

Described by those who have witnessed its filming as being as one of the most thrilling pictures of risk and daring ever produced, "Under Pressure" the feature offering the same program.

Edmund Lowe and Victor Jory, Eagles, one of the most popular teams in the history of the film industry, are seen in their full time unique story, which brings to the screen for the first time the live and spectacular adventures of tunnel workers.

According to advance accounts "Under Pressure" presents a new type of "underworld" story, one combined to a steel-lined tube some 17 feet in diameter, an unreal world of high-pressure air and smoke and fire, where men gasp, choke and die 20 feet of mud and silt, with many feet of water above that, the men of "Under Pressure" live, work and carry on with courage under astonishing and unbelievable conditions.

In addition to the co-starring team in the leading roles a notable cast includes Florence Rice, Marjorie Rambeau, Arthur Hohl, Roscoe Ates, Frederick Roger Imhof and George Walsh.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Only Yesterday"

The Most Absorbing Love Drama Ever Filmed Returns by Special Request Wednesday Only

It is a woman's love does lasting than a man's? What of the man who loves—and forgets? Should a woman keep silent when her happiness is at stake? In the modern view, greed there be any stigma on the unwed mother?

These questions, and many others are prompted by the story of "Only Yesterday," which comes to the Capitol Theatre Wednesday with Margaret Sullavan, and John Boles.

Miss Sullavan and Boles spend together evening of delicious happiness—and his regiment is suddenly called to France. A chill fog settles over Paris, but not when the father returns from the front he fails to recognize the girl who has borne her cross proudly, happy and with confidence of the future. Unable to go to him with her story, she sees him married to another, and waits for the day when recognition shall come. Then it is a tragic story of sacrifice on the altar of love.

But eventually this stage of heartbreak gives way to a startling conclusion, and so comes to an end the story of love and sacrifice and heartache and an unconquerable spirit.

To a love story of surpassing tenderness must be added exceptional artistry in direction and the outstanding cast which is in itself perfect. The work of Margaret Sullavan, in the leading feminine role, will be a revelation to her recently created such a sensation on the stage. Her fine and faithful characterization of the part and her selection for one of the most sought-after parts of the season. Ever since her his screen career has John Boles contributed such a masterly moving performance as he does in the principal male role, and the cast includes a host of well known players.

A rib tickling two reel comedy and a clever cartoon complete the program.

Complete shows 2.30, 7.15, 9.15.

Last Times Tonight

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—Two leading oils, Imperial and International Petroleum, divided the interest with Industrial Alcohol "A" and International Nickel on the industrial section of Toronto Exchange today.

Alcohol showed a morning high of 127½ but sold off to 119½ at the close of ¼. Walkers was off 2, unchanged and Distillers Seagrams off 1¾ and ¼.

Imperial Oil pushed up to 17¼, a new high for the year, and International Petroleum sold at 24, up ⅛, also to a new year's high. Both Supertest and Home down ¼.

Nickel recorded a loss of ¼ to 27½. Brewery stocks were lacking in interest, steady. Foods showed practically no price changes but the construction group was down somewhat.

Higher prices ruled for Cement Preferred and Preferred Metals and minor recessions were boarded for Canadian Vickers, Steel of Canada, Hamilton Bridge Preferred.

Heavy buying of the oils featured the industrials on the list today and new high prices for the year were boarded while Industrial Alcohol "A" and International Nickel also traded in heavy volume on days' trade and movements. The rest of the board was mainly steady but slow.

Alcohol had received a boost of about a point on the New York Board on Saturday when Governor Lehman was closed and at the Toronto opening today the local price made the high of 108 on a heavy trading but soon began to slip and dropped to 119½ on fairly active and steadying. Walkers Common and Distillers Seagrams were mildly heavy.

International Petroleum at 24 had a gain of ¼ and Imperial at 17¼ was up ¼. British American Oil was off slightly. Food, Beer and Utilities were moderately weak.

WAL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 7 (AP)—Most financial centres opened and their fingers crossed today and few showed any disposition to take a long or short position on either side of the price structure.

Minor price changes appeared among shares of Canadian companies. Noranda, Hollinger and the Canadian Pacific ruled virtually unchanged. On the curb Lake Rosseau Power was a shade off. Dominion Government 4's eased.

Curb issues were irregular. Electrical Bond & Share Preferred, Cities Service Preferred and Commonwealth & Southern, N. Y. Central and Chrysler.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—The holiday atmosphere and the mining market's backsliding appearance in their early technical tone today were no lessers.

The advance in the silver price weakened no particular interest aside from the flurry a "bee" which advanced to 4c on the call but backed up 5b for a net gain of 2½. Eldorado sold down to 2.25, Treasury 12 3-8ds, Lobiaw 18 5-8ds.

Lost two cents and Castle three.

Pioneer Gold slipped back to 11.75 before Hollinger got off 10 cents. Dome lost 15 cents, Hollinger 25 cents, Noranda 50 cents. Sullivan and Teck Hughes were slightly stronger.

There were no price changes of consequence in the Base Metals and Noranda, selling at 38.50, up a few cents, was the only trader in quantity. Chemical Research in the gilt edge out at 1.46 unchanged.

The mining list was in a reactionary condition following the holiday, the silvers weakening with the golds despite a bigger London price for the bar silver. Lamaque and Teck Hughes were the main traders of the gold issues, the former losing 20 cents and the latter 8 cents and minor recessions came on for Bralorne, Pioneer, Lake Shore, Bralorne and Dome.

Selling pressure was applied to Pickle Crow and that issue dropped back 18 cents to 2.70 while others losses were recorded for Central Patricia, Cody Central, Kirkland Lake, San Antonio, Sylvanite and Gunnar.

Base Metal shares were inactive and prices maintained a generally steady tone.

SOAKING RAINS HELP FALL WHEAT

Moisture Proves Beneficial to Meadows But Delays Farm Work

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—Soaking rains of the past week throughout Ontario have renewed crop prospects for fall wheat, according to the weekly crop report issued today by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. In the eastern part of the province where there is no fall wheat, the rain held up seeding but was welcomed for its benefit to meadows.

In Western Ontario, Dufferin, Grey, Halton, Huron, Waterloo Counties reported favorable prospects for fall wheat. Rain also somewhat seeding in Wellington but the moisture proved beneficial.

Prospects for a crop of fall wheat in Lambton never looked better at this season, said the section of the report dealing with Southern Ontario. "The fruit district of Wentworth and Lincoln reported fruit buds advancing slowly but cool weather but considered this a benefit because it was a little too early for blossoms.

In the central part of the province, Peterborough's county reporter said if cold weather does not set in, there should be almost a full crop of fall wheat.

Good demand for pure-bred milk cows was reported from Prescott-Russell where United States buyers offered from $80 to $85 a head.

Satisfactory reports came from the north and Timiskaming had a heavy fall of snow last week which was expected to protect over-winter crops from frost.

"I want your money?" was the reply.

Mrs. Wigle then said she leaped from the bed and bore down upon the burglar with exclamation, "you brute, you".

At the same time she shouted for help from assistance from other rooms.

The suddenness of her attack caught the thug unawares and he tripped over a chair, as Mrs. Wigle made for the door he regained his feet and seized her.

Mrs. Wigle said the continued calling for help and the burglar fled through the front door.

FIFTY JUNIORS PARTICIPATE IN DOUBLE HEADER

Kiwanis City Baseball Loop Ushered in on Holiday

4 SMART TEAMS

South End and East Hill Victors in Opening Clashes

With base hits at a premium, the local Kiwanis Junior City Baseball League got under way with a double-header at the Fair Grounds on Monday morning. In the initial game of the current junior season the South End A. C. kids downed the College Hill nine by the score of 6 to 2, while the second game saw the East Hill "Arsenalers" trim the West Hill "Bounders" 10 to 4. Both games were of the nine innings nature.

Joe Kelleher started on the hill-top for the East Hill team and held the Jr.-Wardsmen in check for the first three frames striking out seven in three innings and allowing one hit. A slight streak of wildness, when he passed three men in the third, coupled with Shields's double, gave the losers three of their four runs. McCabe pitched the final two frames for Jack Kidd's East Killers and allowed but two hits. Kidd's men started on the mound for the West Hill team but was derricked in the third in favour of Weeks, who did not allow a single hit. Each team collected an even four safe hits, Kidd leading the parade with a double and a single in three trips. The final count found the East Hillers 10 to 4 victors.

Goyer Shows Form

With Pete Goyer, diminutive left-hander, in rare form, the S.E.A.C. breezed through to a 6 to 2 victory in a tidy battle when bits were scarce. "Shiner" Harris, on the hilltop for the College Hill team, was equally as effective, but was not afforded the support that Goyer's team-mates demonstrated. Snappy fielding on the part of the players was enjoyed by a scattered crowd, who assisted in ushering in the current junior baseball season. The Kiwanis Club announced today that the 1935 Junior City League schedule would be released this week. In the meantime, local clubs will continue practicing on their respective diamonds in preparation for the rest of the season.

"AFTER YOU" IS BEST PUNT

Fifteen Punts Compete in Jubilee Race in Stiff Breeze

Under the auspices of the South End Athletic Association, the local punt sailing season was opened on Monday afternoon off Victoria Park with Maurice Calkins's punt "After You" just nosing out Harry Semark's "Anna G."

The course of the race took the contestants from the starting point at the end of Victoria Park by the government dock and straight across the bay, from there up the bay bridge and thence back to the starting point. Besides the punts covered the three mile outlay going altogether a distance of nine miles.

With good stiff wind blowing the fifteen punts put up a thrilling contest and it was a fight to a finish. The real thrill of the race was at the finish, when the "After You" and "Anna G." were neck and neck from out past the lighthouse to the finishing point. The closest of the race can be judged by the fact, that only two or three seconds elapsed before both crossed the line.

Frank "Duke" Smith chairman of the sports committee was in charge. "King" Rodgers acted as starter, while Charlie Jeffs was time keeper.

"Regulars" Score Shutout in Practice Tilt over 'Yannigans'

Pitchers in Mid Season Form And Hitters Hitting

Coach "Peeney" Mills' Stewart-Warners staged a regular nine innings impromptu baseball game at the Fair Grounds on Monday afternoon during which the "Regulars" defeated out a 2 to 0 victory over the Yannigans in a practice tilt. A goodly number of rail-birds watched the "Stadion" go through their paces and stamped their approval on the 1935 edition of the Belleville entry in the C. O. B. L.

Coach Mills and Manager Young divided the squad into two teams, with the more experienced players being allotted positions on the "Regular" squad, who had Ernie Smith and Bud Wilkins as moundsmen and Jack Kidd, of junior prowess, as their catcher. For the Yannigans, Art Calhoun, late of the Toronto C. and W. seniors and Jack "Ginger" Williams, labored on the hilltop, with Jim Barclay on the receiving end. All of the stalwarts impressed the onlookers as they labored in mid-season form. Calhoun showed a fast ball, that baffled the "regular" batters for three innings as he struck out four in the four innings he worked. An error, a hit batter coupled with a timely hit gave the winners their only runs in the fourth. Williams then ascended the mound and limited the Yannigans to two scattered singles, both of the scratchy nature. Williams, incidentally, showed a mid-season form demonstrating plenty of speed and better control of his curve ball than is usually experienced at this time of the year. With Calhoun breezing a fast ball and a curve, that proved most baffling, Smith, local elongated hurler, proved the strike-out king of the practice as he "whiffed" seven opposing batters during his four innings sojourn on the hilltop. Swift allowed but two hits, while Burl Wilkins, who followed him to the hilltop for the Regulars, fared especially well in the matter of hits allowed, both being given air-tight support. The finish of the day's practice were three fast double-plays, that were completed, two by the Yannigans and one by the Regular squad.

Smith Retires

In the infield of the Regular team Roy Smith returned to his duties at the initial sack with Sonny Gowling pivoting at the keystone bag and Denis Pratt covering the ground around the short field. At third base a new face was seen in Oscar Mellroy, who impressed those present with his all-round dexterity around the hot corner in fielding hot grounders. Earl Darrah in left, Johnnie Kerr in centre and Earl "Soxy" Gray in right patrolled the outer garden for the Mills coached crew. Jim Barclay won his way into the hearts of the fans with his aggressive play behind the plate for the Yannigans and undoubtedly will prove an able substitute for Coach Mills as the regular catcher for the "Radios" in 1935. Barclay is a human "pepper pot" and continually works his pitcher and infield like a busy beaver. He showed up well first base for this team with Mel Little at second, Reyo at short and Chuck Barrage at the hot corner. The outfield was composed mostly of the Yannigans' regulars with Vern Weir, Alex Weir, Allan Meagher and Bennett patrolling the great open spaces for the Yannigans. The practice proved most profitable and brought to light the more finished fielders and better hitters of the two dozen or so players to appear on the lot. With the assurance of a few more practice games before the season opens the Stewart-Warners will be ready to face the strong Kingston Frontenac on May 22nd and 24th.

The game was played as a regular fixture and umpired by H. G. Woodley at the plate and Bud Shipiro on bases. The team will continue to practice every evening this week.

BOSTON RED SOX FINDS SOUTHPAW WHO HAS STUFF

Ostermueller First One to Go The Route This Season

CHICAGO LEADS

Tops American Loop When Cleveland is Defeated

By HERBERT W. BARRY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Joe Cronin finally has found a southpaw who can travel the route. The new lad that statement is that he should have to wait three weeks before one of his Boston Red Sox left-handers pitched a complete game. On paper, at least, the Red Sox have the strongest southpaw pitching contingent in the major leagues.

Fritz Ostermueller, a sophomore member of the Red Sox southpaw staff which also includes Bob Grove, Rube Walberg and George Pipgras, etc., reached that goal yesterday, just in time to outpoint Oral Hildebrand in a pitching duel of equipment, beat Cleveland Indians 2-1 and elevate the Chicago White Sox to the American League lead.

Taken out of the box in three previous starting assignments, Ostermueller limited the Tribe to six hits, fanned six and drove Mel Armanda home with the winning run with a seventh inning single.

Plenty of Staff

Pirate, 46th. in American League pitching percentages last season but ninth in the earned run ratings with an average of 3.46 runs per 9 inning game, had all his stuff against the Indians. A base on balls to Sammy Hale and Bruce Campbell's pop fly double gave Cleveland its lone run in the fifth but Ostermueller was in complete control otherwise. A pass to Max Bishop, a sacrifice and Roy Johnson's single scored Boston's first run in the opening frame.

Not only did Ostermueller become the first Red Sox left-hander to pitch a complete game but the third Boston hurler of any kind to go the route. Previously only Wes Ferrell and Johnny Welch had been able to finish what they started. Ferrell going the route twice.

That defeat sent the Indians into second place with nine victories and one loss, the White Sox losing goose to the top with 11 and 4.

The only other major league game of the day found Pittsburgh Pirates staging another garrison finish to whip Boston Braves 8-6 for their third victory in four starts in the east.

Neither Hurler Finished

Neither starting pitcher, Ralph Birkofer of the Pirates and Pinkey Rhem of the Braves got past the seventh inning. Rhem was started all over again in the third with Hoyt Wilhelm tied at 5-5. Double by Urbanski and Mallon off Waite Hoyt gave the Braves the lead in the seventh but the Corsairs scored three in the ninth to win the ball game.

Three runs came on a pass to Babe Herman, pinch hitting for Hoyt, a double by Lloyd Waner, his fourth hit of the game, a single by Jensen, an error by Al Spohrer and Gus Suhr's long fly. Cy Blanton, Pirate freshman pitching sensation, stopped the Braves cold in the ninth, fanning two men to bring his total strikeouts for the season to 30.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Like a bolt from the blue the Kingston delegation joined the O.C.B.L. meeting, when they requested the 1935 opening baseball game, even more peculiarly coinciding in the cellar last season. Thanks to the forcible oratory of Secretary Howard Byron of the Ponies, they won their point and we find the local Stewart-Warners prying off the C.O.B.L. Ed at Kingston on May 22nd. The wail arising from the cash still will hold sway at the local ball park on May 24th. It's a gala opening day ceremony with the Ponies as their rivals. In the meantime the Kingston and Peterboro clubs will be playing home and home games, leaving each club opening at home. In the hands of Secretary Newton Thompson of Peterboro will be left the task of drawing up a schedule that will please all concerned. Quite a stormy meeting they had at the Queen's Hotel on Saturday, but after the dust had settled it was every person left in good spirits and firmly believed their individual club had gained its point, which is as it should be.

Following the C.O.B.L. Meeting

the talking picture "Pray Kingston" sponsored by the General Motors was flashed on the silver screen at the Capitol Theatre and proved a most educational film from every standpoint. Motorists in this section were glad to see so many local junior players on hand to explain the workings of the car in connection about the pastime as possible. Also shown were the latest methods of batting, bunting, fielding, tagging runners, pitching and catching which were shown to perfection by Ted Husting. It showed Eddie Dyer, manager of the Cards, down the line exhibiting the proper methods of baserunning and in fact the entire hour proved most interesting and were educational for those who are not up on the finer points of baseball and intermediate baseball. Judging from the applause Doubtless to say local baseball players will never again have the opportunity to see such a film as it will be big league celebrities in the role of instructors. The local baseballers were most audible and clearly pointed out the various players, and incidentally the more vital plays were shown in slow motion. The picture is a credit to the General Motors and also to the big league players who gave demonstrations.

Getting back to the afternoon meeting there was practically nothing left in regards to the schedule, or length of a schedule to be adopted, although all present seemed to favour a schedule that opens on a quadruple schedule would be in vogue, thereby giving each club two games, four in each town. After Victoria Day, Jim Stewart's contract will only have one other holiday date, that being Civic Holiday, when he can be lodge from the bat. We are glad to see Vern Weir back in the fold again and firmly believe he would materially assist the club if he was available as apparently his batting eye has not lost any of its old cuteness. After all it's hits that win ball games.

Behind a sprightly stiff wind the local golf season officially got underway by the S.E.A.C. yesterday afternoon at the Belleville links course. Some 45 craft faced the starting gun and a real afternoon's programme of golf was put on display for the spectators to usher in the season, which undoubtedly officially opens on May 24th. we understand.

Mel Gilhooma got sweet revenge for Saturday's defeat when he procured the decision over Howard Wheeler in the local golf event, but not get going.

C.O.B.L. Delegates Approve Three Teams in Playoffs and Opening Dates for the Season

Stewart-Warners to Open Season in Kington May 22nd

APPOINT "UMPS"

Second And Third Teams Playoff to Meet First Team

Three teams will be included in the play-off series of the C.O.B.L. for the first time with a series being played between the final second and third place clubs with that winner meeting the team finishing first in the regular schedule in a final five game series for the 1935 championship of the league was the unanimous vote of the representatives of the Central Ontario Baseball League at their annual spring meeting held at the Queen's Hotel on Saturday, Kingston, Peterboro, Oshawa and Belleville all being duly represented. The opening dates for the league were also allotted and Belleville raising the 1935 baseball curtain at home on May 24th versus the Kingston Ponies pursuant to which the Stewart-Warners journey to Kingston on May 22nd for the opening game of the league.

The executive members and league officers were on hand for one of the finest meetings held in years. Much business was transacted in a meeting, that lasted well over three hours. President Ross Swanston occupying the chair, Secretary Newton Thompson read the minutes, that were adopted. The first question was the matter of umpires for the coming season. Vic Hamilton of Peterboro moved that the same home and home system of umpires as in previous years and a fee of $5.00 and expenses, to be borne by the home club, be adopted, the motion was passed. The umpires submitted by the clubs were Kingston—Cunningham and Walsh of Kingston and Wm. Baker of Gananoque; Peterboro—Johnson, Dempsey, McCarney, Hotrum and Al Hectman; Oshawa—Reg Pair and McDougall; the only entry from Belleville was H. G. Woodley. Moved by Baker and seconded that the Stewart-Warners be allowed an extra player for May 24th to procure other officials, if necessary and this was granted.

The Home Team Fans

It was pointed out by R. A. Elliott, past president of the O.B.A.A. that a government tax of five cents on all baseball admissions over 25c. Any amusement over 25c. The meeting voted unanimously to have the customers assume this added burden owing to the fact that a better class of baseball would be played in the C.O.B.L. in 1935. Upon the request of the Cobourg Club to be refunded another year's leave of absence to play intermediate ball, the unanimous vote was received and Secretary Thompson instructed to inform the Cobourg club in the affirmative. Both the Spalding and Spalding baseballs were adopted as the official baseball for the league.

Considerable discussion was entered into when the matter of the 1935 schedule was entered in upon. The Kingston delegation asked to have the opening date, as did Belleville and Peterboro. After some controversy the delegates decided upon the following opening dates:—May 22nd—Belleville at Kingston; May 24th—Belleville at Peterboro and Oshawa at Peterboro; May 23rd, —Peterboro at Oshawa. Belleville asked for twilight dates, preferably on Tuesdays and Fridays and also July 1st with a double-header with the Oshawa club, while Oshawa asked for Saturday dates and whatever holidays prevailed. The schedule of the league was left in the hands of Secretary Newton Thompson, who will strive the same and submit his schedule to the clubs for approval at a later date.

3 Teams in Playoffs

H. Byron of Kingston moved that three teams be included in the playoffs at the end of the season, following the schedule, adopted. Incorporated in the motion, found that the first place team be awarded a bye into the league finals and the right to the first and possibly fifth game of the league finals. The second and third place clubs will meet in a three game series, with the second place club being awarded the first and possibly third game. The final series being the best three in five. All clubs desirous of playing exhibition games with clubs outside of the C.O.B.L. must first get permission from the O.B.A.A. and then from the C.O.B.L. It was pointed out that the Oshawa club, Senior O.B.A. club, who are contemplating a season with Smith's Falls of the E. O. B. A.

Secretary Newton Thompson reported that at the conclusion of the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. His report of the meeting was unanimously received. President Swanston personally thanked the C.O.B.L. delegates for the very capable manner the executive of the O.B.A.A. in which officiating at the meeting.

Following the meeting the executive adjourned to the Y.M.C.A. business where the showing of a talking baseball picture "Play Ball" was enjoyed by the several members. The pictures presented by Secretary Thompson, were loaned to Belleville through the efforts of Hugh Brown, president of the Oshawa club. Secretary Thompson took occasion to thank Mr. Brown for the privilege, afforded local citizens of witnessing such a picture.

Daily Short Story

THE GLOVES

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Helen was twenty when it happened. She was working in her uncle's office, having coaxed him into giving her a secretarial job when, with a vague idea of a business career, she had decided she ought to be "doing something."

She knew that her uncle Phil numbered several important persons among his clients as a lawyer. But she had no idea, not the slightest, that he even knew Raymond Vandervere. And, then, to have Raymond Vandervere come into the office and sit at her desk and talk to her—

Helen was actually trembling when she went home that night. Just to think of it! The great Raymond Vandervere, Hollywood's greatest star had talked to her for all of ten minutes. True, it was merely to dictate a memorandum about a new contract. But, then, he had been so kind and patient when she made mistakes. As what girl wouldn't have made mistakes?

And he had gone away and left his gloves.

Helen had them with her. She hadn't dared to keep them forever. Perhaps he would call for them, and ask about them and then say, "May I see you again some time?" Anything could happen.

A Headache

But the only thing that happened was that Pete Halliday called her and asked for a date. She decided a headache. The very idea! Pete Halliday asking her to go out with him when she had so much to think about.

She wrapped the gloves in tissue paper and put them in her dresser. Three days later, when her mother was re-arranging the contents of the dresser drawer—though Helen had asked her a THOUSAND TIMES not to do it—they were placed in a glove box with common ordinary, every-day gloves. She rescued them and barely spoke to her mother for two days.

She wished she could tell someone about them. But she couldn't. She wondered what Pete Halliday would think if he knew that she had a pair of Raymond Vandervere's gloves. He would realize then how far she was above him.

Helen lived from day to day but Raymond Vandervere didn't return to her uncle's office. She read all the movie magazines, went to see all the pictures and sometimes slept with the gloves under her pillow.

And then, almost before she realized it, she was twenty-one.

She forgot the gloves that Summer when she went away to the seashore. That is, she forgot to take them with her. When she discovered it she decided not to send back to get them. But somehow other things seemed to occupy her time and attention.

When her vacation was over she found that her mother had again placed the gloves in the glove box. Helen removed them and put them in paper. But she didn't say anything to her mother this time. It was impossible to make mother understand.

A Firm Answer

But she was fully prepared, if her mother should say she was keeping a pair of men's gloves, to tell her firmly and gently that it was a personal and private matter.

Her mother never asked, however. Now and then she would throw away some of Helen's things but she left the gloves alone. Except to move them at times.

And then Helen was twenty-two. Pete Halliday was still calling her and going out with her and quarreling with her, dancing and romancing with her and then, forgetting his own gloves. When that happened Helen would return them to him and say, "Can't you take care of your things? You're always losing them. You ought to tie them around your neck."

And then she was twenty-three, and Pete Halliday was no longer quarreling with her. He had become very gentle and considerate and Helen realized her mother was watching her and was often on the verge of saying something, or thinking something. But she didn't know what to do about it.

Until one Spring afternoon when she came home and found the maid washing the windows, and her mother said, "Helen, I gave Alice that old pair of gloves to wear down to protect her hands. You don't mind, do you."

Helen said, "What pair of gloves?" And, then, Oh, that pair. No, she can have them.

Then, as she went upstairs, she added: "If Pete calls, tell him I'll be ready in a few minutes."

We was listening to the radio and yawking at the same time making them both blurder than either one could of done by itself, and ma said to pop, Willyum, do you think you'd like to try Fluffed Oatdee in the morning for a change?

I cant think of any other reason for trying anything with a name like that, pop said, and ma said, Well there is another reason, just as it happens to chance. They're announcing on their radio hour that they'll send a pigsky geogrifty puzzle to any child who sends in 12 empty 3 times out of 10 he's devoid of anwers, she said.

Aw, O, geogrifty is good nite, ma, hoiey smokes, pop, I said and pop said, Don't send for any geogrifty in my name. Days of changing boundaries when a man may be a North German one day and the opposite the next. I understand that expert boundary makers are very highly payed and socially sought after, he said.

But Mummy Christmas, pop, O snickers ma, look what I can wet if you start buying Sticky Sugaries for 30 Sifted Sugaries labels I can get a Donald Daredevil revolver and cartridge belt. Or how about Twisted Twinkies? If I send in 12 Twisted Twinkie tops I'll get a Chief Bigboy tommahawk and scalping nife. Oooh, there's plenty of kinds you can get without having to think of geogrifty. O wun Wrinkly Ravels for instance all YU need would be 25 Wrinkly Ravels coupons for a swell Captain Cockeye pirate outfass and sling shot. Holey cats, ma, geogrifty, gosh, I said.

We'll keep rite on with Tangled Twirlies and Bent Brownies, ma said.

Which we proberly will.

Right of Religious Freedom Implied in British System

Rt. Rev. Mgsr. Nicholson Lauds Public, Private Life of King, Queen

LOYALTY A VIRTUE

At the conclusion of High Mass on Sunday in St. Michael's Church the "National Anthem" was sung. The Pastor, Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., spoke to the large congregation on the relationship of Canada and the Empire of the Silver Jubilee of His Majesty, King George V. The speaker said, in part: not only the Commonwealth of Nations comprising the British Empire rejoiced, but indeed the whole world." This League of Nations, of which Canada forms a part, exercises a more potent influence for peace and respect for law and order than the one which assembles at Geneva. In outstanding measure the King by his comprehensive scope of world affairs has led the Empire to a position where it excites admiration and respect from other countries. Monarchy has toppled in other climes, but the British Royal House is more securely entrenched in the devoted loyalty of British citizens than in any period of its history. The King has been not only a ruler but a sympathetic kindly father to his subjects. The public and private life of His Majesty and his gracious Consort, Queen Mary has been the example of wholesome family life to all. The riches of a King are the hearts of his subjects, and King George possesses in lavish measure this treasure.

The British system possesses one of the strongest supports in the liberty whieh it concedes a right to every citizen. This liberty includes the right of religious freedom as a fundamental principle. We readily understand what a precious guarantee this is when we gaze on Russia, Mexico and Germany where liberty is downtrodden by licence and tyranny.

This solemn anniversary will stir grateful memories in the hearts of His Catholic subjects. They recall the kingly courtesy and kindly feelings which prompted his official visit to His Holiness the Pope at the Vatican, and they deeply appreciate the many incidences of his consideration for the work of the Catholic Church. Loyalty to King and country is not only a civic duty, but under the inspiration of Religion it is a high Christian virtue. Respect for lawfully constituted authority should be based upon the Divine principle that all power comes from God. Catholics will join with their fellow citizens of the Empire in expressing their cordial congratulations and sincere fealty; above all, they will pray that His Majesty will be granted length of years and happiness to continue his devoted labors for the well-being of the Empire and the peace of the world.

Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. F. Nicholson, M.C. pastor of St. Michael's Church who received the King's Jubilee Medal yesterday at Kingston. Mayor Reynolds made the presentation along with others in the City Council Chamber.

ACCEPTS CALL FOR TENTH TERM

Rev. J. S. McMullen continues as Pastor of Dundas Street Mission

The Rev. J. S. McMullen, who has for the past nine years been in charge of the three churches—Dundas Street, Centre Street, and Rosemore composing The Dundas Street United Church Mission of Belleville, received Sunday, April 28th, an unanimous invitation from each of the above congregations to continue as their pastor for the tenth term.

Mr. McMullen feelingly thanked the people for their appreciation of his efforts, for their cooperation in all the work of the mission and for the unanimous invitation to remain as their pastor for another year, which he accepted at least for the present, because he loved every soul upon the mission field believed that his feeling was reciprocated.

He said that since coming upon the mission he had baptized one hundred and sixty-eight mostly children; had married fifty couples, attended one hundred funerals; averaged five hundred calls each year made many sick and hospital calls; preached three times each Sunday; held more or less evangelistic meetings, each year, and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper regularly in the congregations, and witnessed the membership grow from fifteen to one hundred and forty. He thanked all other United Churches of the city and town, who assisted this needy work in spiritual and material things.

COAL BOAT TAKES FIRE, ONE BURNED

Chatham, Ont., May 7—(CP)—Douglas Ayres, 17, of Kent is dead and two others are in hospital here with burns received in a fire of unknown origin, which broke out early today in the crew's quarters of the Alexander Leslie, 4,000 ton steel coal boat, as it lay in dock at Erieau.

The men in hospital were reported to be not in serious condition are Andrew Masson, 42 and William Pumnek, 18, both of Erieau.

Several other members of the crew of 23 were slightly burned as they ran from their burning quarters to man pumps and bring the blaze under control. One of these was Bert Fry, first mate of the vessel, in charge in the absence of Captain Gunn.

When the flames had been controlled, a roll call revealed the Erieau youth was missing. A search resulted in the discovery of his charred body at the foot of a hatchway leading from the men's quarters to the deck.

Coroner Hanks of Blenheim opened an inquest and the jury after viewing the remains adjourned until a date to be set later.

A watchman on duty in the stern of the boat gave the alarm, when he noticed a glare in the bow where the crew's quarters are located.

Fire whistles aroused the crew, who dashed into the corridors to be confronted with a wall of flames.

Ayres, Lapointe and Pumck occupied one cabin. In the excitement of tackling the fire, none of these men all had got out safely. The youth evidently collapsed in his dash through the flames.

The boat was partly filled with coal but the flames were prevented from reaching the cargo.

Canada's Address of Loyalty Tendered to King and Queen In Golden Casket by Bennett

"I Pledge Anew Our Allegiance And Vouchsafe Earnest Hope Your Majesty May Long Continue to Lead Your People Along Paths of Peace, Prosperity and Honor."

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 8—(CP-Cable)—The inspiration furnished by the King, "of wise and tactful leadership" and of "unswerving devotion to duty" was praised by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada today as no small factor in the success of the British Empire in withstanding the period of stress after the war.

At the reception in St. James' Palace to which the King and foreign diplomats Prime Minister Bennett presented to His Majesty the gift gold casket containing the humble address of loyalty from the Canadian Senate and House of Commons, making the presentation Premier Bennett said:

"I have the high privilege and great honor to humbly offer to your Majesty on behalf of the people and the government of Canada this address of loyal devotion and of respectful congratulation.

Counsel Wisely Directed

"We render praise and thanks- giving to the almighty God for the King, whose counsels have ever been directed to the glory of God and the welfare of his people, has been spared to reach the 25th year of his reign.

"During this period events of a magnitude and consequence never before recorded in the history of the world have occurred. The clash of armored strife has been followed by turmoil of economic and political adjustment. There has been no calm after the storm; no peace after the conflict.

"It has been a time that has test- ed as never before the qualities alike of nations and of individuals. That the British Empire has successfully withstood this test has been due in no small measure to the fact that you, sir, have given us the inspiration of wise and tactful leadership, no selfish favoritism and unswerving devotion of duty.

Far-Reaching Changes

"During your sovereignty the em- pire has witnessed far-reaching changes in world thought and evolution. These changes however have served but to strengthen our loyalty to the throne and to quicken the sentiments of affection and devotion toward Your Majesty. Today, sir, through you, the people of your wide empire are united in one family of nations.

"May I add, sir, that your gra- cious consort, Her Majesty the Queen, shares in our hearts the place held by Your Majesty. We remember at this time your words on ascending the throne: 'I am encouraged by the knowledge that I have in my dear wife, one who will be my constant helpmate in every endeavor for our people's good.' No Queen has associated herself more sympathetically or effectively with the reigning sovereign in supporting the throne.

"Sir, sir, it is not unfitting for me to state that our King and Queen in their life and work together have given the peoples of the empire an example which has strengthened and ennobled the conception of family life which is the true basis of all human happiness and national stability.

"I speak for every citizen of Your Majesty's Dominion of Canada wherever he may dwell, when I pledge anew our allegiance and vouchsafe the earnest hope that Your Majesty may long continue under Providence to lead your people along the paths o fpeace, prosperity and honor."

FIRE IN BASEMENT OF POST OFFICE UNDER CONTROL

Starts From Unknown Origin Among Waste Paper

SMOKE DAMAGE

Firemen Work Hard to Confine Blaze to Small Territory

Fire of an unknown origin in the basement of the Post Office late this afternoon caused considerable work for the local fire brigade before the blaze was brought under control. The basement was flooded in the waste paper and bales situated in the basement and not many minutes after the outbreak the entire building was filled with smoke.

The employees of the office fought to save mail and money on the upper floors. The alarm came from the east side of the building and as soon as the firemen arrived on the scene they found the basement was flooded by persistent effort. All of the firemen are using smoke masks due to the density and quantity of the smoke.

Fire Under Control

The blaze is travelling along east wall to the north wall, which separates the basement from the record room and the firemen are having a hard time to segregate the blaze in one area. Reinforcements of their men are assisting the firemen, to control the blaze.

At 2.45 p.m. Chief Lynch reported the fire under control but the dampness and smoke hindered due to the smoke hindering vision. There will be considerable loss from this agency and also water.

DEPUTY WARDEN RESIGNS POST

Stoney Mountain Official Leaves Force of Own Accord

Ottawa, May 8—(CP)—C. Abbott, Deputy Warden of Stony Mountain Penitentiary, Manitoba, has tendered the resignation to the Minister of Justice. The department states his action has nothing to do with the recent riot which resulted in one prisoner being killed by a guard firing from a patrol wall. The official reason is that Abbott is getting old and that the excitement of the riot may have been too much for him.

Another explanation is given in announcement that R. H. Greer, K.C., of Toronto, had been chosen to assist Judge J. J. Maclaren, Toronto County in the investigation into the recent allegation in the House of Commons that Inspector J. D. Lawson of the Penitentiary Branch had spoken in such a manner as to reflect upon members of Parliament and newspaper men. Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P., for Southeast Grey who has been demanding reforms in the penitentiary system.

SEVEN MURDERED ON LONELY FARM

Invade Plaintiff's Home Killing All But Baby Take $32,000

Georgetown, British Guiana, May 8 (CP Cable)—Seven persons were murdered in the British Guiana hinterland by bandits who entered a farm for slayers who invaded a wealthy planter's home and killed all in the occupants except a baby. The murderers stole $32,000.

The woman was one of two daughters-in-law of Mohammed Khan, aged 65, native agricultural, who was murdered with the others. Khan's wife, mother-in-law and another watchman apparently while the night slept.

The solitary survivor of the night of murder was Khan's 18-months-old grandson, who was found hanging by the head between the rails of his cot in which his mother had been hacked to death with an axe. Beside the cot lay the bodies of two who spread word of the killings to neighboring planters.

A brief message telling of the crime reached Georgetown by messenger, and police authority went to the spot to investigate. No clues were apparent in the meagre information received here.

The motive, though, was clear. Cash and jewelry to the value of $32,000 had disappeared from the Khan household with the murders. It was believed the murderer-killers had carried their loot deep into the jungle and that finding them would be almost impossible.

ADRENALIN USED TO REVIVE CHILD

Girl Pronounced Dead After Operation For Mastoid

Owen Sound, May 8.—(CP)— A five-year-old girl who died following an operation, was "brought back to life" by an injection of adrenalin into the heart several minutes later and was believed on the way to recovery.

Lillie Audrey Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Brown, Owen Sound, was operated on for mastoid by Dr. F. J. Laird, Owen Sound specialist. A recent illness of scarlet fever, had left her heart in a weakened condition.

A few minutes after the operation the nurse rushed to the doctor and told him the patient was dead.

Dr. Laird examined the child. He found no heart action and no breathing. The girl's eyes were glassy.

Hurriedly the physician injected nine drops of adrenalin into the heart, Audrey suddenly gasped and began to breathe. The physician and nurses began using other resuscitation methods and the child was revived.

"When the nurse told me the pa- tient had died I examined the child to make certain," said Dr. Laird yesterday. "It suddenly flashed through my mind that a few months ago I read of a similar operation, which was fatal, in a southern United States.

"The child was dead and no harm could be done by attempting the same thing.

"It was the greatest thrill of my entire medical career."

Owen Sound, (CP)—An adrenalin injection with which Dr. A. F. Laird, Owen Sound specialist revived five-year-old Audrey Brown, after she had been dead five minutes was termed "extraordinary" by Dr. David E. Robertson, chief pathologist at the hospital for Sick Children here.

"Use of adrenalin in such cases is not unusual," he said. "But its successful application on a patient dead for as long as five minutes is very unusual."

EMPLOYEES URGED NOT TO ACCEPT

Differences in Strike May Be Settled By Ballot

Toledo, O., May 8—(AP)—Thirty-three hundred auto workers, idle in a half dozen States because of a strike at the Chevrolet plant here, were urged by union officials yesterday to accept the proposals of the corporation's directors in a letter sent to all employees.

The letter urged the workers to return to their jobs pending an election by ballot.

Union officials said the proposals were the same as those submitted to a conference between the corporation and union workers at a meeting last night. They said the proposals were indefinite. Workers were urged to accept the proposals pending an election by ballot.

At another meeting, members of the Independent Motor Workers Union predicted a plurality for acceptance of the proposals.

AMELIA EARHART STARTS FLIGHT TO N.Y. FROM MEXICO

Expect to Make it Non-stop in 14 to 16 Hours

TAKES OFF AT DAWN

Will Proceed Over The Mountains and Gulf of Mexico

Mexico, D. F., May 8 (AP) Amelia Earhart took off at 6 a.m., local time (7 a.m. E.S.T.) today on an attempted non-stop flight to New York.

An hour as it was light enough for her to see down the three-mile-long runway, the famed woman flier donned her parachute and climbed into her big red monoplane, which had been loaded with 472 gallons of gasoline and 20 gallons of oil.

She carried one sandwich, one boiled egg, a bottle of water, a bar of chocolate and a container of orange juice to take for nourishment on the flight, which she estimated would take between 14 and 16 hours.

Once she was high enough in Mexico's rarified atmosphere, she headed straight across the 10,000 foot mountains between the capital and Tampico.

Thence her course lay across 700 miles of the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans. After her Louisiana land fall, she planned to fly straight for New York.

MacEarris and several members of the Board of Education made a tour of inspection of the units. The march past of colors by the whole battalion in platoon formation was then enacted with Captain Foulkes taking the salute. This was again repeated, but performed in column of fours formation, was performed with great precision by the corps and praise was given. The orderly review of the units is done then in their performance of this difficult march.

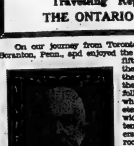
Lt.-Col. E. A. Geen, V.D., chairman of Board of Education and commanding officer of the Argyll Infantry, congratulated the corps, and officers on their appearance and efficiency.

Inspecting Officer Captain Foulkes expressed his congratulations to the corps on their fine showing and the leader who brought out. He also congratulated them on the cleanliness and their uniforms, giving them word of advice that those who take an interest in their personal appearance always get better results in their work. "After much difficulty", declared Capt. Foulkes, "I



Hello New York!

Article No. 2.

By G. M. JAMES

Travelling Representative of THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

On our journey from Toronto to New York we passed through Scranton, Penn., and enjoyed the scenery very much. For more than fifty miles on every side of Scranton there are immense hills (some would call them mountains) which rounded us in like the Trossachs in Scotland. Our route followed the course of the Delaware River which wound in and out among these eternal hills. Sometimes the valley was wide and on the slopes for a distance of ten miles on either side we could see farmers cultivating patches of land among the rocks and trees. At other times the valley was so narrow that we were hemmed in by bare towering walls which frightened us with the fear that they might descend and engulf us forever. We saw no nothing more rugged, beautiful or inspiring in Scotland.

SCRANTON COAL

As all Ontario people know, the hills around Scranton have long been famous for their coal and a reliable information service informs us that for a hundred years by which time electricity will be harnessed to supply heat. We were also told that the best hard coal was found in Scranton at eighty dollars and the best soft coal at a ton. The spread between that price and the price we pay in Ontario is largely due to transportation charges and to duty.

Scranton has a population of one hundred and fifty thousand. It is a fine, prosperous city and is connected to its neighboring cities

FLOWERS AND VERDURE

The distance from Toronto to New York is nearly six hundred miles and the direction is almost south. The farther we went the more flowers, blossoms, buds and verdure we saw. The delightful freshness of leaves and grass appealed to the eye. The spring flowers (cultivated), the peach and cherry blossoms were very beautiful also. A shrub covered with yellow blossoms was in bloom in almost every garden from north to south. This shrub is also common in Belleville. Although the weather in New York for the past week has been cool with rain, yet we believe all vegetation is about two weeks ahead of that of the Bay of Quinte district.

PEARLS BEFORE SWINE

Throughout our first week in the state of Maine's land, we have not discovered a single case of intoxication, although we have noted much evidence which leads us to conclude that the present wet regime is decidedly popular. We have also noted that it is not a wise thing for a group of people in our presence with undisguised relish.

An exhilarating address of prohibition in which he spoke eloquent on the evils of the liquor traffic and during the climax of his argument shouted triumphantly:

"Now, gentlemen, if a donkey were led to a pail of water and a pail of beer placed side by side, which would he drink?"

"The water," shouted a wag in the audience.

"Quite right my good man, and why?"

"Because he is an ass."

HOTEL TIMES SQUARE

On each of our several visits to New York we have made Hotel Times Square our headquarters, because it is so central and comfortable. Although it is one of New York's oldest hotels, it is still popular and modern. The rooms are large and airy and are situated on the third floor. There are over a thousand room (fourteen floors) and every room we occupied during the week proved a curious to our arrival. We meet many talented people here such as actors, actresses, musicians, literary giants and others, all of whom are exceedingly interesting.

INSPIRATIONAL ATMOSPHERE

Talented people yearn for the associations of such cities as New York, London and Paris because, no matter what is their particular interest, they find much in such great centres to encourage and inspire. A blackbird does not mingle with crows, nor starlings with either of these, though all are black. Hence it seems to pass that talent is found in small places but drifts, as it drawn by a magnet, to the larger centres where it is appreciated and stimulated. But talent rarely follows under any other conditions and as a result much talent dies because of neglect.

BELLEVILLE THEATRES

On previous occasions we have pointed out that Belleville theatres show pictures equal to those in all older cities we visit. This advance showing varies from a few weeks to even months. The writer feels that this enterprise is unusual and worthy of much praise.

At present the most popular song over the radio, on screen or stage is "The Isle of Capri". In fact if I would be asked to write down the words and music of that song and try to produce another, similar but different. For many years the demand for such songs will far exceed the supply. Only occasionally will a song writer arise, however, that big money is sure and certain in this field and besides plenty of money is waiting for those who can produce songs with that appeal. The writer is always seeking for suggestions for young people who possess talent, because they need more encouragement than ever before in the history of the world.

FROM THE FOOT OF THE LADDER

Taken together Hotel Times Square and the printing plant of the New York Times occupy nearly a block in the heart of New York City. The Times Building is 25 stories high and is built in black and gold in the recent death of its editor and owner, Adolph Ochs, who began a small newspaper at the foot of the ladder. Years ago, when Ochs was delivering papers at homes in Knoxville, Tenn., just as many boys do in Belleville. From the foot of the ladder he rose step by step until he became the chief editor of the three largest papers in the world. He rose because of merit, unstinted toil and a natural ability which he had developed by unceasing study. Ochs got for a start and then built to the skies from that foundation. Such is the uniform history of all great men. Ochs was true to the motto he set over the great newspaper, "The Ontario Intelligencer."

The only fault he can find with the young people of today is the fact that they are unwilling to start at the foot of the ladder and thereby develop all those virtues and qualities of mind, heart and soul which alone can assure them success in this turbulent world. Get started anywhere, young man or young woman, and if you are duly endowed you will ultimately reach the Hall of Fame, but make no mistake, there must of necessity be much toil and tribulation.

A WAVE OF POPULARITY

A wise man once said that popularity is as fickle as the ocean; it will come to your feet and then recede, and then you are stranded and deserted.

A year ago we reported that President Roosevelt was held in high esteem wherever we went from Detroit, Mich., clear southward to Fla. Today this tide of popularity is fast receding; the president's widely and fervently criticized fireside chats, his supporters are opposing him on important public questions; his addresses from the screen are heard in ominous silence; his proposals for raising funds by taxes, direct or indirect, thrifty cents in every dollar he earns and as a result he is paying until it hurts. Such is the fickle tide of most public men everywhere.

But President Roosevelt is still courageous and says:

"Any attempt to block the program of reorganization recently passed by Congress into active operation whereby we may make a slashing attack on conditions which are a reflection on the efficiency of democracy can be neither honest nor efficient."

Such a brave, fighting spirit still holds millions under his banner but the feeling is growing that after the present appropriation of billions of dollars is spent, there must be a halt to further taxation. Only then will prosperity, or woman, who can govern without taxes, can govern the whole universe.

SIGHTS FROM OUR WINDOWS

The windows of our room on the third floor of Hotel Times Square look on Eighth Avenue which runs parallel to Broadway and is only one at 61st to the west. Every moment of the day or night many people are passing to and fro, all very serious without a smile. One in every thousand is accompanied by a well kept house dog on a leash. This contrasts strangely with London, England, where nearly everyone has one or more beautiful animals by his or her side. You soon become impressed with the fact that life in a large city is a very serious matter and that there must be much hurry and bustle. Then through your open window you catch the delightful refrain of a song sung by a future Caruso "Why are you so sad my darling?" You rush to your window to discover that it is the exuberance of an errand boy, who sings to himself under the stress and pleasure of his work. It is a wonderful pleasure full of striking contrasts.

Then you hear old fashioned cow bells and you wonder what is happening now. It is a junk man with the usual wobbly wagon and decrepit nag. On a rope stretched across the rear of his wagon, he displays a miscellaneous collection of old and shabby articles. The swaying of the wagon warns inhabitants of his approach. His increasing load and a predisposition to buy what their organized labor were no longer "dumb, driven cattle."

Then you go about the streets of New York or any other large city you discover that labour is decidedly on the aggressive (no longer merely defensive). You find men walking to and fro in front of various business places displaying signs which read:

"This place (name given) is unfair to organized labour."

In every case the number of labour signs is almost as many bands. This results ultimately in better treatment.

Such a demonstration indicates solidarity and voting strength which cannot be ignored in a democratic country and this in turn leads to legislation more and more favourable to labour.

Then a decrease in the number of unemployed men and women is noticeable. There is a scarcity of help in this picture. Employers grow weary of discontent and welcome more and more machinery which neither complain nor grow weary no matter how long the day or night. The writer operated a machine for many years which took him to his destination in a building by merely pressing a button. Such inventions lessen the number of employees and increase profits. There are many, very many devices in other departments of toil which dispense with labour and the end is not yet. The thoughtful see fears for the future.

A similar parade of Communists was held on 79th Ave., at the same time as we were in that city. There was not the slightest disorder and everyone acted as if on holiday bent.

FEMININE CHAT

Heavy, fine and obsoked linen suits will be much worn here this season with large collars and small round ones turned up for young girls so Mrs. James reports. Also lots of striped and checked seer-sucker ginghams will be popular for the summer and all gowns. For sports wear linen suits in blue, yellow and pink colors.

For light summer wear there will be voiles with pin polka dots, also organzies, all of which are crisp and lovely.

Red hats and handbags and also short fur capes are all the rage. Sandal shoes are now the fashion.

Gloves are very important this season in yellow and white with long heavy lace cuffs.

Mrs. James reports that this year the styles and materials in Toronto are very much up to date, and have her preference over New York. As to pink silk gowns, they are very much in evidence in Toronto.

We will remain at Hotel Times Square here until May 18th. when the next article will appear.

Best wishes to all.

PRAISE ACTIVITY OF TRADE GROUPS

Interested in Lowering Telephone Rates Between Britain, Canada

The Directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at their regular weekly meeting on Tuesday evening praised the activity of the members of the Belleville Trade Group in their activity to bring about reduced telephone rates between Canada and Great Britain, believing that lower rates would prove to be a great stimulus to trade between the two countries. They feel that a discount of fifty per cent has been granted to be in force from the second to the third tenth of this present month owing to the Silver Jubilee celebration, is considered to be an excellent start in the right direction. The following interesting letter arrangement was moved by Mr. E. V. Illsey and seconded by Mr. Mackenzie Robertson and read as follows:

"That the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, believing that International Trade is fostered and enlarged by the facilities for rapid communication, heartily endorses any proposal for the reduction of rates on cable and telephone messages as between the Motherland and this Dominion."

Prepare Industry List

It was decided by the directors that a complete list of the industries of Belleville should be made out which they manufacture and that a sufficient number of copies should be printed and sent out with inquiries regarding the Belleville industries. This was adopted upon a motion introduced by Mr. Mackenzie Robertson and seconded by Mr. E. V. Illsey.

Mr. E. V. Illsey an enthusiastic and valued member of the Board will lease on Thursday of this week to Toronto to spend the holiday in the Old Country. The directors expressed to Mr. Illsey their good wishes for a pleasant trip, also Mackenzie Robertson, which was introduced by Mr. Mackenzie Robertson and seconded by Mr. H. E. Fairfield: "That we take this opportunity of wishing Mr. Illsey Bon Voyage and a safe return and express to him our appreciation of his services in the Chamber of Commerce and the community in general."

Prior to the meeting the directors visited the plant of the P. and F. Corbin Co. Limited, and were shown through the works by the manager, Mr. E. E. McLean, who later was a guest of the directors at their meeting. The visit to the plant was much enjoyed by the directors.

The following were present at the meeting: Mr. J. B. Boyce, president, and Messrs. E. V. Illsey, Mackenzie Robertson, W. C. Springfield, E. Hayhurst, R. W. Ackerman and W. H. Morton.

ODETTE TO STUDY BRITISH SYSTEM

Liquor Commission Chairman to spend 7 Weeks in Europe

Toronto, May 5.—Chairman E. C. Odette of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, and Mrs. Odette will leave today for England, Scotland, Ireland, France and Italy, for the seven weeks' trip.

Mr. Odette will combine business and vacation. He intends visiting distilleries on the British Isles, deeming a first-hand study of importing conditions opportune in view of the recent reduction in duties on spirituous liquors effected by the Federal Budget. He proposes to interview wine manufacturers in France and Italy with regard to this phase of his trade.

On the eve of his departure he stated last night that he intends, also, to study methods in vogue in Britain having to do with the retail dispensing of liquors—hours of sale, regulations, &c.

Price Reductions Forecast

A reduction in the retail prices of imported French brandies and liqueurs shortly, was forecast by Commissioner, on receipt of word from Ottawa yesterday that the Dominion Government had reduced the customs duty on these goods from $6 to $4 per gallon and that the reduction had been made retroactive to March 26, the date of the Federal Budget. The act was made to conform to provisions of the trade agreement between Canada and France, bringing the duties on the French products in line comparatively with those from the British Isles.

While this reduction was made retroactive, the retail prices on these lines cannot be made immediately Mr. Odette explained, but would be passed to the consumer as quickly as an allotment of stock can be computed. On the retail price it will mean a saving of approximately 40 cents per bottle, ounces, and a tentative date of May 16 was mentioned.

SIR E. CHATFIELD TO BE ELEVATED

Will Become Admiral to Replace Sir Roger Keys, Resigned

London, May 5—(CP)—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Ernle Chatfield, who has had a long and distinguished active service career with the royal navy, was placed on the retired list effective today. He retains his ranking among the 11 admirals of the fleet, highest service rank.

Coincidentally the admiralty announced the promotion of Admiral Sir Ernle Chatfield to rank of Admiral of the Fleet (succeeding Lord Field Marshall in the army) which means that the number of Admirals of the Fleet on the active list remains at four. Including Sir Roger Keyes, who retired Canada last year, there are now 11 admirals of the fleet, 26 flag officers and 36 commodores.

KING OF GREECE READY TO RETURN

Monarch Would Ascend Throne And Try to Rule Country

Paris, May 5 (AP)—Former King George II of Greece quoted today in dispatches from London to the newspaper Matin as saying he was ready to return to the throne should his people summon him.

"If the will of the Greek people clearly calls me back," he was quoted, "I will return to my dear country, taking for my inspiration the constitutional and liberal principles my grandfather, George I, founder of our dynasty, applied during the fifty years of a happy and fruitful reign."

Former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, exiled leader of the Greek revolt of last March, said the former King will find "plenty of opposition if he returns to Greece."

"Good Building Deserves Good Hardware"

New Construction

In celebration of the completion of preparations to give the Canadian trade a full assortment of high grade locks and builders' hardware as well as of padlocks and cabinet locks, the Canadian Division of P. & F. Corbin and Corbin Cabinet Lock Company are keeping open house on Wednesday and Thursday of this week to their friends and those interested in the inspection of a modern manufacturing plant.

History of Local Plant

During 1931 the above companies of New Britain, Conn., acquired the business of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company as a location for their Canadian trade and since that time the work of creating a modern manufacturing plant has been carried on with vigor, until now the time has arrived when the establishment can be called complete and the Canadian officers of the Company feel justified in the best possible position to serve their trade, through the advantages of adequate equipment, organized selling forces and office staff, together with a full new line of goods properly catalogued. All the necessary facilities for doing business have been provided.

New Construction

Builders' hardware and locks are commodities which Canada should make. The growth of the country and construction of new buildings creates a demand for locks, door escutcheons, bolts, door checks and other sundry hardware, and such requirements are in sufficient volume to have justified the establishment of a Canadian factory in which to make them. In design, type and function, the goods used in Canada in these lines are identical with the goods made in the United States and are quite different from those made overseas. Therefore, it was a natural sequence that Corbin, who have sold their products in Canada for several generations, should have decided to establish a factory in Canada, where these goods could be supplied without the hindrances caused by trading over the boundary line.

Four Years' Expansion

The four years of preparation have been busy ones. The buildings acquired were found to be inadequate, and the new factory, which increased the floor area several thousands of square feet. New and modern machinery was installed to facilitate a greater output. The various departments were relocated so as to enable the goods in process of manufacturing to move directly department to another with the minimum of handling.

A sprinkler system for fire protection has been installed. A thoroughly modern power elevator with safety controls now serves the new plant. One of the newest type of lighting systems is another feature, while the comforts of the employees has been thoroughly cared for in the provision of modern heating, ventilation and lighting, and new sanitary conveniences. A thorough remodelling of the plant with a liberal use of paint makes an attractive and pleasing improved exterior.

Canadian Corbin Divisions have a modern plant, equipped to produce the highest grade of hardware at low cost. And the personnel of the plant is Canadian throughout. The officers of the Company invite the citizens of Belleville to inspect the plant this week.

A Visitor's Impressions On the Art of Lock Making

By "H. E."

How many people, when they casually remove a key from their pockets to open a door, realize the ingenious mechanism that composes the lock which safeguards their money? Or, perhaps, scorn others, who keep valuable goods in the safety deposit boxes at the bank and go there at regular intervals to clip those neat little coupons that are so welcome these days do they ever think of the ingenuity that cannot be opened by any stranger?

Judging by personal experience the obvious answer would be "No" except of course when one mislays the magic key and numerous attempts are made to open the stubborn lock, with hairpins, nail, knitting needles and any small tool, that may be handy. As a rule such attempts end in failure and exasperation nevertheless the individual's respect, for the science, that makes possible such a safeguard to his valuables, is increased despite the fact, that he would like to swing the air, on the lock.

After returning like the other night your writer found himself locked out having left the key on the hall table. The usual attempts were made to get the door opened but with no success. Finally a neighbor's ladder was obtained and accompanied by a companion up a stair window. There is another story to tell about that picture. Most of us will go away with a carefree mind after having locked the doors most securely, but when the windows fastened in such a manner that a fly could not penetrate prowler could open them with a screw driver without any visible signs should be so cannot be explained. Faith is what everyone puts such thinking that an interloper will not be the first to climb clumsily through a window. Such sublime confidence is likely to be badly shattered some time when the house owner returns some night and finds the house ransacked by a thief, who crawled in through an unfastened window.

Well, as we're sure we could get the lock opened and our failure has created our curiosity to the point, where we just had to learn something about how locks are made. So a few days ago we went over to the P. & F. Corbin Company on Coleman Street, and had a talk with Mr. L. E. McLean, the resident manager. We felt, that he was the man learning something of this to around for he has been in the hardware business most of his life having been associated with the Corbin Lock Company, before it was taken over by the present company.

Plans Completed

We came at an opportune time for the P. & F. Corbin Company was making preparations to keep open house in celebration of the completion of plans for the manufacture of a full assortment of locks and builders' hardware of high grade. We spent two hours at the plant learning something of the history of locks, the painstaking care used for the safety of them and where the chief markets are.

To begin with we shall suppose, that a new type of lock has been designed and a decision made to proceed with its manufacture. First of all a sketch is made from this and a model is carved usually in plaster of paris. This is much after the manner of an architect's drawing for a new house and the construction of cardboard model to get a better perspective of what the finished product will be when finished. The sketch and the model are sent to the blue print department, where the draughtsmen draw up the plans and give exact measurements on paper of the various parts, that comprise the lock. The blue prints then go to the moulding department, where a master model is made in metal. Great care is needed here for if the lock is to work when production is begun, then the model must be a real working piece of mechanism. The engineering department plays an important role at this stage, for they check up on the measurements and see that the lock actually is right and works smoothly. The model and blue prints are then forwarded to the pattern and tool department where a pattern is made. The pattern is a model of wood of the part to be cast. Every lock has several parts, that are cast in metal. For every one of these parts, a pattern is made, which is later duplicated in metal the work being done in the foundry.

Ready For Production

The lock is now ready for production. The foundry take the patterns and from these, castings are made in iron, brass or steel depending on the type of lock, that is to be made. When the castings have cooled enough to be removed from the moulds they are placed in large revolving drums containing a special kind of sand to remove the former matter and to give a fairly smooth surface. Sand blast machines, that throw a stream of sand under tremendous air pressure are also used here to do the same type of work. The many different parts of the lock are now ready for the assembling shop where stamping machines, drills, presses do their parts in further shaping these parts so that they will fit together accurately into a perfect working unit. The lock is now ready for the plating and polishing department and eventually the lacquering, that is done by either dipping or blown on by air pressure. The lacquer is dried on in large ovens or if the finish is enamel the baking is done in large ovens at high temperature. Finally, the lock is sent to the assembling department where it is fitted together into a unit and placed with its fellows in large boxes ready for packing and shipping.

Visit Interesting

The visit through the plant was an extremely interesting one. One is impressed with the large window space which makes the factory one of the best lighted buildings that we have seen. The system of night illumination is, also, a model one for every ten feet in each direction is a reflected light of two hundred watts. Such a flood of light permits no shadows to be cast.

The plant is arranged in such a way, that the material progresses from machine to machine in an orderly manner without confusion and waste motions. There is no rushing about by workmen and one gets the impression that here is a factory, that is well organized and efficiently managed. One feature that contributes a large part of this efficiency is the system of "Stock Check" whereby one girl by card index, is able to tell at any time how much raw material is on hand, the number of completed parts as well as those not finished so that if an order has to be filled in a hurry, the factory superintendent can tell in a few minutes just when the order can be completed without the annoyance of being held up by a shortage of raw material.

Plant Very Clean

Another feature well worth attention is the cleanliness of the plant as a whole. There is no dirt laying on the floor nor bits of waste material here and there. Of course in the moulding room and iron foundry there is a thin coating of dust caused by the nature of the work as large quantities of sand are required in the casting and sprinkling finishing of the parts. There is excellent ventilation and at no time is there any unpleasant odor to offend the most fastidious person in the buffing room, which, departure about forty feet by twenty-five, the air is changed every six seconds. Large fans driven at high speed provide the ventilation in those rooms where dust and chemical fumes would make for unpleasant working conditions.

The fine rooms we saw were the brass and bronze moulding room and the iron foundry. Both are large departments each having a floor space well over a hundred feet by seventy and well lighted. Five moulders are kept busy pouring the moulds with molten brass or bronze. It is here, that the castings are dumped into large revolving drums filled with a special silica sand and when the process is finished the castings if they are for plating and if they had received a coating of nickel.

The general machine shop is the largest room, two hundred and sixty feet long by thirty wide. It was certainly most interesting to watch the drills and punches and numerous machines, of which we did not know their names, drilling and shaping the castings to their proper dimensions and form. In the plating room, the plating is done in large tanks full of the chemical solution containing nickel and copper salts. Then follow in rapid succession the lacquer room and inspection rooms and finally the packing and shipping rooms.

Boy in Canada

It might be added here that the P. and F. Corbin Company require several hundred horse power of electrical energy, which should make it one of the largest users of electricity in Belleville. There are one hundred and forty-five employees and ninety-five per cent are men and all local men at that. One thing, that is a cardinal rule with the firm is that all raw material must be made in Canada even including their screws and fine nickel plated screws. We saw shipments of locks addressed to Australia and South Africa. The ordinary door locks going to the latter country are made considerably heavier than those used in Canada.

Well Known Name Installed

As stated before the Corbin Company is advertising once more and invites the public to view the installation to learn something about a deliberate industry, that is contributing much to the welfare of the city. Mr. McLean explained to us that besides locks, the company manufactures builders hardware including door checks, door pulls, mail boxes and door closers and other articles in the hardware line and added that in design and function the goods used in Canada are identical with those made in the United States, and quite different from those made overseas.

Therefore if any of you folks, who have been unable to get the door lock open, when you have forgotten your key, perhaps Mr. McLean will help you out in a jiffy and you should do in such an emergency. Perhaps he will, anyway, he will take you through the plant and you have our assurance that you will be time well spent.

KIWANIS CLUB VISITS INDUSTRY

Tour of Inspection Made of T. and F. Corbin Plant

There was no special speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday but the members were shown through the P. & F. Corbin and Corbin Cabinet Lock Company, St. by the Superintendent L. E. McLean and his efficient office staff. This plant had been completely remodelled with a large addition erected and is one of the modern plants in the Province and a distinct asset to the industrial life of this city and district. The members were most enthused and could hardly realize, that such an important industry was in our midst.

Chief Ramsay presided at the luncheon in his usual manner and remarks of a humorous character created. Claude Tice requested, that the meeting adjourn now being run by the club to raise funds for same work should be talked more by the members on the streets while Colin Lee gave a report of the baseball activities of the junior element in the city stating that over fifty boys of that age were present, when the first double header was played on the holiday in the Kiwanis Junior Baseball League. The speaker asked the members to come out and give the boys encouragement by forming a ball team for the club will practice next Friday night at the East End playgrounds in preparation for the league encounters and also for the guests days to be held in Oshawa on June 19th, Ed. O'Reilly of the Oshawa club was present and extended a hearty invitation for all to be present as a good time will be had by all.

Eddie Shapiro told the members of the plans laid for the holding of a charter night on Tuesday next. The luncheon will be held in the tea room ing at the Bay of Quinte Country Club and it is expected, that large representations from Napanee, Peterboro, Oshawa and Picton will on hand. Fred McAllister, the new district Governor will be the special speaker. Ernie Nelson, a recent new member to the club was the booster of the day and after expressing his appreciation of the reception he and his wife had received at Picton, the speaker explained the many uses of cool tar derivatives. Cliff Harbinger and Dr. Sam Cronk, were the winners of the prizes donated by the booster. Pres. Jr. E. Austin of Kingston, was a guest at the luncheon and expressed his thanks in a few witty remarks.

The Corbin Company Receive Large Order

The local factory of the P. & F. Corbin Company recently received a large contract for builders' hardware for the Hood Cog Mines, a new mine in the course of construction at Hong Kong.

This building will be when finished, one of the largest and most modern in the Orient.

It will be a fourteen storey structure and to date have had approximately contracts can be-

The Corbin Company is particularly fortunate in obtaining this very substantial order, which will be completed and shipped by July first.

ADMIRATION OF THE WORLD

What the world outside of the British Empire feels at the time of the King's Jubilee is something which cannot but cheer the hearts of the British sovereigns and of the British people.

In New York City three P. E. Churches joined in the celebration on Sunday, a Te Deum of thanksgiving for the lives and leadership of King George Fifth and Queen Mary was offered at St. Bartholomew's, while at Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall Street, the rector offered the prayer written by the Archbishop of Canterbury for the celebration at St. Paul's. At St. Bartholomew's Rev. Dr. Sargent reminded his congregation that the United States was bound more closely to Great Britain than to any other nation because of the ideals which the two countries have in common. In Trinity Church, New York, an unprecedented honor was paid King George when a verse of the British National Anthem, "God Save the King" was interpolated into the regular evening service, the anthem being sung by the English Boy Choristers, a group of choir boys selected from prominent churches in England who are closing a six months' tour before returning to England.

Interesting tributes came from Germany where the reign of His Majesty was hailed officially on occasion of the jubilee. Despite the recent acerbity felt in Germany over Britain's part in the Stresa and Geneva proceedings and Premier MacDonald's rebuke of the Reich on the armament policy, Germany nevertheless on the jubilee offered congratulations and tributes. Chancellor Hitler sent a message to the King offering hearty congratulations with united cordial wishes for the well-being of the King and Queen. "The German people following with warm sympathy the efforts of your Majesty and those of the royal British Government on behalf of security and peace and hopes efforts will be crowned with success and redound to the welfare of the British Empire and resolve themselves into a benediction for the entire world," he said.

The Berliner Tageblatt remarked that "the Empire is not held together by an abstraction or an empty formula, but by a unified attitude toward life and the world. Germany wishes King George many more years of royal life."

"The Unpretentious King" is the style in which the Frankfurter Zeitung refers to King George.

"The highest symbol of the British State—the King—has accomplished its purpose in complete perfection during this reign. Individuals may disagree but this conclusion has become part of the life-blood of British public opinion. King George has succeeded in winning his place in the hearts of his people because he behaved in the fashion the British people wish. The King's simplicity, even on ceremonial occasions, has generally made him the people's monarch."

The old monarchical Kreuz-Zeitung stresses the unseen but powerful influence that King George wields over the politics of the British Empire and declares he had a decisive voice in the formation of the present government which brought about the cooperation of two such political opposites as Ramsay MacDonald and Stanley Baldwin.

"King George, above all, is a man imbued by a high sense of duty, paternal benevolence and healthy common sense which in the course of years mellowed into something akin to wisdom. Above all he is inspired and guided by that self-understood dignity which, after all, is the most essential attribute of royalty," the Kreuz-Zeitung comments.

The German press did not fail to stress that the British royal family was of German origin. The Tageblatt recalls that Queen Victoria's husband was a German prince.

"George V changed the family name from Coburg to Windsor in 1915," says the Tageblatt. "He did not attempt to conceal the fact that the war had broken his ties with the Hohenzollerns.

Germania begins its editorial with:

"The heritage which George V received from the hands of Edward VII on May 6, 1910, contained the embryo of future European tragedy. On the twenty-fifth anniversary of George's accession to the throne the British Empire still remains respected, an imposing world power towering high above the parochial policies of Continental Europe."

The admiration for the British ruler and the British system which is shown in these tributes indicates a sincerity of utterance despite conflicts of international political opinion which may arise. To have won such a place in the thought of the world is a tribute to both Britain and her King.

Through tattered clothes small vices do appear; robes and furred gowns hide all. —Shakespeare.

Poverty palls the most generous spirits; it cows industry, and casts resolution itself into despair.—Addison.

"PLEASURE PHILOSOPHY" FAILS

Life does not prosper under a pleasure philosophy, Rev. Dr. Minot Simons of All Souls Unitarian Church warned his congregation in New York City. "'Don't save—spend' is the philosophy of the present pleasure trend. 'Don't miss a good time; don't put it off; enjoy yourself—let the future take care of itself.' Unfortunately the future does not take care of itself. The spendthrift of today has to be taken care of by somebody tomorrow. A true philosophy of life is a working philosophy."

That China is wanting to be great on the Japanese model was the view of Rev. Emory C. Lucecock of the Community Church, Shanghai, who claimed that "not one spiritual insight can be credited to the Japanese in our interpretation of Japan's greatness. Japan is a great power only because she has made herself great industrially and in a military way. He declared that the only voice from the West undertaking to interpret greatness in China was that of industrial and military was the Christian missionary.

"If a man is good enough to be sent away to be shot down in war he is good enough to have a government in peace," said Rev. Dr. Ambrose Hering of the Lutheran Mission Society.

Intelligence, beauty and moral courage were described as the three ideals for a full spiritual life by Ensworth Thayer Reisner at the Broadway Temple Methodist Church.

Love was held as the key to life and most good in the world comes from it, said Rev. Gerald F. Burrell of St. Paul's R. E. Church, who pointed out that Christ had three ways he might have chosen to bring people to Him—Force and Bribery, which He did not try, and Love or Leadership which He adopted.

Modern man with all his freedom is not much happier than the stoic who drilled himself in self-repression by constant effort, remarked Rev. Clarence A. Barbour at Riverside Church. He deplored the lack of radiance and joyousness of people today. A dull restlessness was the result of the superficiality and multiplicity of sensation in modern life which have been furthered by the development of the press, the radio, and the telegram. He declared that a strenuous life was no substitute for a life without radiance. Today man lives too fast and thinks too fast and is in too much of a rush to find time for serenity, radiance, and joy. Too often are there faces today with the stillness of stabled water. Man has lost, he declared, the art of unlocking the wonderland of his own creative imagination.

Dr. Barbour gave a category of things which communicate radiance of life, listing "the revelation of God in nature, good health, a good home, friendship, reason, memory, affection, imagination, conscience and will."

Modern education was likened to existence in the jungle with self-preservation and self-seeking raised to the first law of life, by Bishop A. S. Lloyd at St. Michael's Episcopal Church. The problems of today he said are not really problems, but it was rather a disease the world is suffering from, with everyone grabbing for anyone trying to get something. "Each man is looking out for himself and not caring what happens to his fellows. The only alternative to the life controlled by the law of the jungle is the life in which man identifies himself with Christ, the God become flesh."

"If men wish the church's aid, they can have it, but only on its terms" affirmed Rev. Dr. Henry S. Coffin, of Union College Seminary. "Where governments or parties, reformers, revolutionists or conservatives, can make plain that what they seek is after the mind of Christ they can claim the sympathy and support of Christians . . . The church is not a public utility organized to render services which a community may desire. The church's first concern is just to be itself. What the church may do is secondary; what it is, is primary."

HOW FAST IS A BULLET?

For the speed of a bullet we may now properly substitute the speed of a Doolittle or a Hawks hurtling through the air between Los Angeles and New York. They measured the speed of a bullet the other day at the Museum of Natural History by causing it to slit an electrically charged wire screen, and it registered 280 miles an hour. People have gone 400 miles an hour and more in airplanes.

To be sure, that bullet at 250 miles an hour was moving quite slowly. A rifle bullet at the muzzle may have a velocity of 2,500 feet a second, which would be nearly thirty miles a minute, which would be more than 1,800 miles. But the difference between 250 miles an hour and 1,800 miles an hour is not very startling—for a bullet. Most people, if you asked them, would say that a bullet goes 50,000 miles an hour or somethong like that.

Actually, a bullet goes only about ten times as fast as the new streamline trains are capable of going; and when a bullet is slowed down to 250 miles an hour, by some device or other, it is only twice as fast as the new trains and only half as fast as the quickest airplane.—New York Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan H. Bailey Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Community Honors Popular Residents of Mount Pleasant

Rawdon—The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan H. Bailey of Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, was the scene of a happy and unique event on Saturday evening May 4th, 1935, when over one hundred and fifty of the five relatives and friends gathered at their home on the occasion of the celebration of their fiftieth wedding anniversary to offer best wishes and congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey and their son Garnet and daughter and their granddaughter Miss Isobel Turner received the guests. The bride of fifty years was charmingly gowned in black lace. Miss Turner wore a frock of navy blue with polka dots and Mrs. Garnet Bailey of Toronto received in black crepe fashioned on long lines.

The home was profusely adorned with beautiful bouquets of seasonable blooms. Among them was a lovely vase of roses the gift of their son Mr. Charles Bailey of Elgin, Manitoba, who was unable because of distance to attend, also a beautiful bouquet of roses the gift of Mr. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williams, and a bouquet of pink snap dragon the gift of the youngest son Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Bailey and daughters of Toronto.

Fifty years ago on May 7th, 1885, there was an event of great happiness when Miss Alberta Reid became the bride of Allan H. Bailey at the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. Johnson of Mount Pleasant when Rev. R. M. Pope, pastor of the circuit tied the nuptial knot. Two daughters (Vila) Mrs. L. C. Locke, and (Flossie) Mrs. R. Turner have both predeceased their parents.

After the guests had all assembled and been comfortably seated, Mr. G. U. Heath acted the duties and groom of fifty years to occupy chairs at the archway and after a few well-chosen words he introduced Rev. F. G. Johin, pastor of Rawdon circuit as Master of Ceremonies.

Rev. Johin was delighted to have this happy opportunity, it being the first on the circuit during his twelve years pastorate. In recognition of the Silver Jubilee of King George and Queen Mary the large company stood to sing "The National Anthem," with Mrs. Harold Elliott as pianist. In the literature the chairman was heard in a brief but timely address of sincere congratulation and referred to many delightful associations with Mr. and Mrs. Bailey.

Master Burke Sine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Sine of Harold recited "I'm Glad I Am a Little Boy."

Miss Nama Sine, daughter of Mrs. Reg. Sine and the late Mr. Sine, contributed a piano solo "Sonatina in G".

Master Bobby Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Elliott of Bethel sang "Quintuplets' Lullaby."

Miss Barbara Bailey, granddaughter of the honoured couple and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Bailey of Toronto recited a quaint selection entitled "Fifty Years."

A pleasing feature of the program was then staged in the form of a Mock Wedding. Mrs. Jean Hamilton rendered "Lohengrin's Wedding March," while Mrs. Don Campbell as groom and Mr. Kenneth Weaver as bride marched to the altar. Mrs. Arthur Phillips made a splendid adept minister and Mr. Frank Smith gave the charming bride in marriage. During the signing of the register Miss Frances McKeown with Miss Edna Thrasher as accompanist sang "I Love You Truly" then all joined in a popular old song "Sing on Your Old Gray Bonnett".

Mrs. Percy Mullen recited an appropriate poem entitled "To My Wife" and Mrs. Harold Elliott with Mrs. C. Sine as accompanist sang "When Your Hair Has Turned to Silver."

Mrs. H. Elliott and Mrs. C. Sine delighted with a splendid rendition of "Tarrah Militaire" by Englemann. A vocal duet "Sing Me to Sleep" was given by Miss Irene Wilson and her sister Miss Dorothy Sine. Miss Fern Patterson of Corbyville gave a piano number entitled "Waves of the Ocean."

For many years Mrs. A. H. Bailey has been a devoted and loyal member of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society and at this juncture Mrs. Frank Smith read the following address.

Mount Pleasant
May 7th, 1935

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey on this your Golden Wedding Anniversary.

We your friends of Mount Pleasant W. M. S. feel that such a memorable occasion as Your Golden Wedding Anniversary, cannot be allowed to slip by unnoticed. We find it hard to realize that fifty years have passed since you launched your boat on the sea of matrimony. But time travels relentlessly on, leaving in its wake these anniversaries, with their precious memories.

For over forty years, Mrs. Bailey, you have been a valued member of our sanitary. You have always been most dependable and faithful in the discharge of your duties, in all the offices you have so capably filled. You have been an inspiration in many of us when sometimes we grew discouraged. With your kind, patient spirit and keen insight you have always entered whole-heartedly in to any pertained to the good of our society and for this we thank you most sincerely.

We have many, many times enjoyed the generous hospitality of your beautiful home. We have considered it a privilege to receive the warm welcome which both you and Mr. Bailey, have always given us and we are looking forward to many more happy gatherings with you.

We feel that we must congratulate Mr. Bailey on his wise choice as a life-partner. The words of the old Proverb, "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her,"—have truly been exemplified in you.

Your unselfish, loving devotion to each other, and to your home and children, has been an inspiration and shining example to others. Your lives have known much of joy, but other has sorrow passed you by, but together you have borne the heat and the burden of the day. Your unswerving trust, your unbounded faith in God and His all wise Providence have helped others to be strong. We will be better Christians for the wonderful example of faith and courage which you have set before us. Just here a poem by Douglas Duchin on "The Philosophy of Life" was read.

As a slight token of our love and the esteem in which we hold you, we ask you Mrs. Bailey to accept this Life Membership Pin, as a small memento of your Golden Anniversary.

Our prayer and wish for you and your worthy husband is that you may both be spared to celebrate your Diamond Anniversary.

In the words of the poet may you live so nay to each other "Grow Old Along with Me, the Best is Yet to Be."

Signed on behalf of your friends of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society,

Margaret Phillips, President,
Miss Jeffs, Cor. Secretary.
Annie Thrasher, Rec. Secretary.
Marion Holmes, Treasurer.
Mrs. Holmes made the presentation and Mrs. Ruby Hannay replied saying she was truly grateful to her fellow-workers for their kindly thoughtfulness at this time and she said the past fifty years had flown by very swiftly.

Mrs. Wanda Sine followed with another address voicing the sentiment of the relatives in attendance and the various friends of the community.

Mount Pleasant
May 7th, 1935.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey
Dear Friends—

It is with feelings of real gladness that we gather in your home this evening to felicitate you upon the joyous celebration of your Golden Wedding Anniversary. We bring with us our heartiest congratulations upon this truly festive occasion, marking as it so happily does the completion of fifty years of a most propitious married life. As one by one the milestones have passed they have brought to your home messages of joy and of sorrow, But in the vicissitudes that come to all our lives you have found strength and comfort in your unfailing faith in the goodness and mercy of the Master you both have so loyally served.

Your home has, in the good Providence of God, been blessed with children, who were spared to reach manhood's and womanhood's estate, whose lives have proved an honour to your name and a rich blessing to your home.

So we, your friends, relatives and neighbours are grateful today not only for the long established home in our midst but even more for the truth that it is a Christian home, implying as it should a high standard of mutual affection and refinement. It may be said of your home as the blind poet Fanny Crosby sang of the place she loved and never saw—"Love's gentle star unveils the light, and shines in beauty there".

Not only is this your Golden Jubilee of married life, it is also a very gracious reminder to us that for half a century you have ever sought to maintain the highest interests of both the moral and religious welfare of our favoured community. Especially is this true concerning the Church upon the hill, which has had your support and affection since that day you pledged your troth when the Rev. Mr. Pope tied the nuptial knot that made you man and wife.

The years that have intervened have but intensified that devotion so that we rejoice today in the fellowship of our common faith.

It is our sincere desire that you will be spared to enjoy very many happy years in the quiet eventide of life.

As a slight token of the high esteem in which you are held throughout the whole community, we ask you to accept these flowers. Their beauty may fade, but the memory of your lives will long be cherished by your friends and those who thus bring their heartfelt greetings at this joyous time.

Signed on behalf of relatives and friends, G. U. Heath, Bethel, George

BIENNIAL MEETING

Birthday Cake is Cut at Meeting at Bridge St. Church

On the occasion of their tenth anniversary since union, the Bay of Quinte United Church Conference Branch W. M. S. are holding their biennial meeting in Bridge Street Church, Belleville, May 7, 8, 9.

There is a large delegation in attendance and many visitors were present at the opening session.

The executive met at 2.30 p.m. The opening service of worship was in charge of the Cobourg Presbyterial and was conducted by Mrs. A. J. Gray, Fort Hope, and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Cobourg, who brought an inspiring message to the ladies on the subject of "Love". Mrs. R. L. Barnes, recording secretary, gave an interesting report of the executive meetings held since last annual meeting in 1933. Mrs. Barnes spoke of following that meeting at Cobourg, one in the autumn of 1933 at the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, one at Peterborough in the spring of 1934, and one in Belleville in August, 1934, showing the society had not been idle during the past two years.

Mrs. J. R. Miller of Odessa, drew the attention of those present to the literature display in the Lower Hall, giving the names of many of the pamphlets and books to be obtained there.

The "Story of the Year" by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. C. Stills, of Foxboro, was a wonderful revelation of the work that has been accomplished by the various departments.

Statistical Report

The statistical report is as follows:

279 auxiliaries, membership	8668
7 Associate Auxiliaries, membership	310
3 Young Auxiliaries, membership	100
23 Mission Circles, Membership	987
3 C.G.I.T. Groups, membership	79
Associate Helpers, membership	1136
183 Mission Bands, membership,	5,000
58 Baby Bands, membership	1617
Total 694 organizations, membership	18,946

Mission Circles

There is an increase of 5 over last year and an increase of 4 over the high of 19 in 1932, a substantial increase in givings. Activities include supplying Christmas dinners, 4 banquet supper meetings with special speaker, mothers entertained by children, 1 mother-daughter banquet, 1 father-son banquet, 1 Mission Circle Tea and several rallies were held, attractive programs having a missionary interest, missionary and geographical contests give a broader view of the work. Mrs. Wm. Neville thanks we get our recruits for the mission field.

C.G.I.T. Work

C.G.I.T. Groups— 354 Mission Bary meetings were held where missionary books were studied which included "Leading Revolutionist", "Lads From the Fourth, Daughter of China", "Lads and Lassies in Other Lands", "Listening In" "Far People" and the "Mission-ary Monthly" and "Plus Book" lots of missionaries etc. A group in Renfrew Presbyterial held a Mission Band among the last. Projects undertaken are dramatized scenes from the Mission Study books of China under home life, customs, industries, etc., making scrap books, scrap books for transients, sending reading material to road camps, sewing circle, quilt, planting gardens etc. Here again is noted a fine spirit of co-operation.

Mission Bands

Mission Bands—Much is being accomplished in this department. Twelve new Missionary Bands were formed during the past year. There are 1,922 subscriptions to "World Friends". Many Bands use the Study Book. Easter and Thanksgiving Services are carried on successfully. Membership Crusades and Band rallies are urged, so that the Tenth Anniversary may be marked by greater interest.

Baby Bands

There are also new Baby Bands. Reports come in of excellent meetings, picnics and parties with good programme. The Gift Box is used. In many places mothers and babies are invited, the other work of organizations supplies the entertainment and refreshments. This department is gradually gaining ground.

Associate Helpers

This department forms the link between the women who are actively engaged in the work and come to the meetings and those who do not attend, or are disinterested. Only about one-third of the women are interested. Countless and people are attracted but three-fourths of the women are not there to share in the Missionary Monthly should be clear to the women of their communities that "they need them and they need us. There is a place in the W.M.S. for women of all classes and all temperaments. Some of the women cannot attend the meetings. These we can reach by our Associate Helpers' Department".

Presbyterials

Reports from Presbyterials show definite progress is being made. Auxiliaries where the most successful work has been done are those which have magnified the Associate Helpers' Department. Systematic visiting is an essential.

Methods of work are a canvass of the congregation when literature and envelopes are left, periodical visiting of the shut-ins or a meeting of the Associate Helpers. Interests across the Associate Helpers take one or more of the meetings during the year. Some have adopted a missionary for prayer. The work of this department is not judged by financial returns but by interest created and information spread. Renfrew Presbyterial leads in this department, in membership, in subscriptions to the "Missionary Monthly" and in contributions. Oddly Lindsay Presbyterial, has thirteen members with sixteen subscriptions to the "M.M." Last year sixty-two of our Associate Helpers became active members.

Supply Department

Sales of bedding and clothing were reported for the Indian Missions of Morley, Dutfield, Hobbema, Good Fish Lake, Saddle Lake, Alberta, Stuart Lake, B.C., also emergency cases in our own Branch. In Cobourg a call came for emergency relief in Western Canada.

During the year 220 bales were shipped to needy districts. These weighed 13,098 pounds an increase of 1,000 pounds over last year.

These bales contained much new material both for the worker and for children and adults. There was also good used clothing and a splendid supply of Christmas gifts, books, Bibles, hymn books, magazines, children's toys and games.

Literature was also sent to lumber camps.

Extracts from letters show how greatly these things were appreciated and how far a hundredth of men, women and children were rendered by Dorcas Secretaries.

Literature

Each year the need of earnest study is realized.

More and more the Study Book is used and many groups were formed for Study during Lent.

A greater interest has been aroused by the "Reading Contest". Many of the leaflets are used for the devotional period, for help at special meetings, for Study Groups and for offering Easter or Christmas.

The number of Study Books has been 4,000, also a number of leaflets.

The subscriptions for our periodicals "Tidings" and "World Friends". But in the devastated area of Alberta there is this year an increase of 46 subscriptions and a total increase of 10.

Some have given "World Friends" as a Christmas gift to their classes, some supply the Mission Band or Girls' Auxiliary with their paper. It is suggested that copies of our magazines be placed in Doctors' Parlours, Dentist and Doctor's offices or any place where we find sport or fiction magazines supplied for the waiting public.

Circulating Library

The cost of books is a problem to be considered and it is here that the Circulating Library can be of service. It exists to loan missionary books and supplement missionary books where there is a library. Each year we add to the parcels of 6 or 8 or even in larger numbers. The only cost to the borrower is express. They may be kept six months. During the year 90 auxiliaries, 13 Mission Circles and 5 Mission Bands availed themselves of this privilege, 369 books were loaned, 105 are at present in circulation. Renfrew ranks highest in this. There are approximately 240 books in the library but several are useless for auxiliaries. Individual donations and a donation of $25 from the Branch Executive have enabled the librarian to purchase 38 new books.

The reading contest has aroused interest and other branches have become interested and inquiries have been made as to the manner of conducting a Circulating Library. There are also interesting books for the junior organizations.

Temperance

This department shows more sympathetic co-operation, more interest and enthusiasm. Wherever there is a Temperance secretary, a scientific temperance is presented. Some report 2 minutes given for this at each meeting, others consider it worthy every quarter. Other methods of presenting the subject are addresses, plays, pageants, leaflets, special speakers from the W.C.T.U. Instruction is given in the Sunday Schools, contests are entered into by Public and High School pupils in posters and essays. Information is gleaned from the "Missionary Monthly," "New Outlook" "White Ribbon Tidings," and other magazines. A successful campaign has been carried on against the opening of beer and wine beverage rooms in Renfrew and Carleton Place. Despite depression, the spiritual side has prospered, with no cause for humiliation. We need not only Temperance education but legislation. Banish this evil. Every woman in the W.M.S. should stand shoulder to shoulder giving no uncertain sound as to where she stands on the liquor question.

Memory of a Stranger's Secretary

Report

Total number of strangers visited in homes 3099; in hospitals 1027. Total number of strangers cared for 1976. Total number of calls made 18202.

Nothing but a succession of cheer and kindly acts to report from my seven Presbyterial Secretaries.

"Love for others" finding expression in deeds of kindness has been the motto of our Presbyterials.

Strangers' Presbyterial Secretaries Rally held in one Presbyterial, splendid results achieved.

One Presbyterial reports an increase of 533 calls this year.

One Secretary walked one and one half miles every day for a week to take care of baby and mother. Helped make clothes for baby, pare little ons for burial when it passed away. This was done for a Roman Catholic family.

Sent a shut-in member a full course dinner when she and her husband were celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary.

Peace

In her report on "World Peace" the secretary, Mrs. W. J. Garland stressed the importance of this department at this time when dark war clouds were overshadowing the world.

Reports received from the different Presbyterials show that the work is growing. New Secretaries are being appointed, items of interest are read or short talks on "Peace" given at each meeting, study groups have been formed using the literature from the League of Nations Society, Ottawa. Advantage is taken of radio talks on Peace and of any such news given in newspapers and magazines. Talks had been given on the Peace Conference Disarmament, tyranny in Germany, recent assassinations in Europe, etc.

Peace plays and pageants have been given in Belleville, Oshawa, Kingston, and Lindsay Presbyterials and special meetings held in Cobourg, Peterborough, and Renfrew Presbyterials and resolutions passed at their annual meetings urging the furthering of World Peace by prayer, education and personal influence and endorsing Canada's membership in the League of Nations. Legislation should prevent the piling up of private profits through industries peculiar to war times.

Press

Perhaps no department has shown greater progress in the ten years than the Publicity depart-

BETTE DAVIS
WARNER BROTHERS' STAR

Crosby's Salary Much Greater

Hollywood, May 8—(AP)—Evidently Bing Crosby's boss hasn't had many complaints about the film star's work, for Bing's salary has been substantially increased.

The new figure is $75,000 a picture, with ning pictures scheduled for the studio in three years, a total of $675,000.

If that isn't enough, Crosby can draw on the $5,000 a week he gets for broadcasts or his royalties on phonograph records.

His former movie contract was said to have called for $3,500 weekly.

Revolt in Jugoslavia

Dr. Vladimir Macek, militant crusader for autonomy of the Croatian minority in Jugoslavia, who proposed a bloody revolt after publishing an open letter to Regent Nicholas. In the letter he protested against the numerous arrests of Croats on his birthday, and one was killed when police tried to disperse the crowd. A score of others were wounded. So far no Serbs have been slain in the campaign for the forthcoming election. Zagreb is the stronghold of the Croats. They are opposed to the rule of the Serbs who are in the majority.

Pioneers in Canadian Industry

John Gray, Chairman of the Board

W. Z. Gray, Vice-President and General Manager

"Arch" Hutchison President

Mr. John Gray and Mr. "Arch" Hutchison with experience, determination and courage inherited from the head of their birth—Scotland—started the St. Lawrence Starch Co. Limited back in 1889.

Today the St. Lawrence Starch Company at Port Credit, Ontario, is a striking tribute to the vision and faith these two Scotsmen had in Canada. Mr. John Gray at the age of ninety-three is Chairman of the Board and Mr. "Arch" Hutchison at seventy-nine is President. W. T. Gray, son of the Chairman is Vice-President and General Manager.

For over forty-five years this all Canadian company now reported to be the largest independently owned company manufacturing corn starch and syrup products in the British Empire, have marketing their well known products, Bee Hive Golden Syrup, Durham, St. Lawrence and Ivory Gloss Starches and St. Lawrence Maple Oil in Canada, in addition to meeting the exacting and varying requirements of Canadian industry for commercial glucose, starch and corn oil.

The St. Lawrence Starch Co., is a personification of personal initiative. During a period in which Canada's population grew four hundred million to over ten million and in which business ended toward mergers, stock flotations, affiliations and consolidations, the St. Lawrence Starch Co. Limited maintained its original independent status and today is still owned and operated by the original founders and their immediate families.

MR. AND MRS. A. H. BAILEY

Weaver, Mount Pleasant, Fred Snarr, Wellmana.

Miss Barbara Bailey presented her grandparents with a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers and Mr. Bailey graciously replied thanking all for their kindness in commemorating their 50 years of wedded life and said he was as happy that evening as he was fifty years ago.

Rev. Joblin then extended a cordial message from Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tucker, Bellefonte, and also read two letters from which had been received from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey and family of Elgin Manitoba, and from Mrs. Harriet Turner of Winnipeg.

Mr. C. U. Heath brought greetings from the intimate friends and spoke of the happy associations during past years.

Mrs. Rose Reid tendered greetings on behalf of the older neighbours of the community.

Mr. Fred Snarr spoke on behalf of the Wellman's friends and Mr. B. C. Tucker on behalf of Bethel Oak. The latter also had several personal incidents in the lives of those present which happened in by-gone days.

Mrs. Jane Hoard, one of the oldest members in the community, though young in spirit, rose to the occasion and voiced warm greetings.

Mr. Frank Williams extended congratulations on behalf of Mount Pleasant community.

Mr. Sanford Meiklejohn of Ryleston in his address challenged the gathering to press on and seek to be as worthy as the bride and groom.

The programme closed with singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "God be with You Till We Meet Again".

An abundant and appetizing lunch was then served to guests and a social half-hour was enjoyed. The main item being a three tiered luscious fruit cake made by Mrs. Bailey and decorated by Mrs. Edgar McKeown and Mrs. Roy Thrasher. The cake was carried in the bride on a silver salver by her son Clarket and after Mrs. Bailey inserted the wedding knife, she had a very generous portion.

The guests included the newly married couple Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chambers, the older folk of the community, the members of the Women's Missionary Society and their husbands, members of the Old Reid and Bailey clan and intimate friends. Guests were present from Toronto, Rylestone, Belleville, Ocrbyville, Stirling, Bethel, Wellmana, Harold, Trent Bridge and other points.

At midnight the company dispersed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Bailey continued health and happiness on their matrimonial voyage and hoping rather sorry so festive an occasion must draw to a close.

Through it all, Love's sacred gleams their light display, and crowned their Golden Wedding Day.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Man Who Reclaimed His Head"

War Agitators Exposed in Thrilling Film

A story of unusual timeliness is told by "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," the Universal drama which opens an engagement of three days at the Capitol Theatre Tomorrow.

The picture exposes the activities of the international munitions manufacturers in fomenting war, a subject of the recent senatorial investigation in Washington, and lays much of the blame for the World War squarely at the door of these professional moulders of public opinion.

Claude Rains, Joan Bennett and Lionel Atwill head the cast, and all are excellent in their roles. Other members of a splendid supporting cast are three-year-old Baby June, Wallace Ford, Lloyd Hughes and Lawrence Grant.

The fascinating story presents Rains as a plodding writer, content to live in virtual poverty with his wife Adele (Joan Bennett), but finally achieving prosperity when he enters the service of Henri Dumont (Lionel Atwill), a publisher, writing articles against war which appeal to the American people in his "Pacifist Journal." But to insure his political future, Dumont secretly works with the munitions makers and on the declaration of war Rains is sent to the front. The publisher's influence keeps the war-hating soldier at the trenches, while he himself proceeds to a conquest of the writer's wife. Realizing this, Rains hastens to Paris against orders and finds Dumont in the act of making advances to Adele.

"The Man Who Reclaimed His Head" is recommended without reservation.

"Young and Beautiful" is the second feature attraction and proves conclusively that a Hollywood story can be delightful, clean entertainment for the entire family.

The story is ingeniously contrived around the Hollywood press agents' organization, known as the Wampas, and their annual election of Wampas Baby Stars. The 1935 crop of Wampas Baby Stars being actually featured in the picture and presented under their own names. William Haines is ideally cast as the alert publicity man who takes advantage of the Wampas election to "put over" his own sweetheart, charmingly played by Judith Allen.

"Young and Beautiful" has been gorgeously produced with an array of magnificent sets, smart costuming, tinkly musical numbers and many outstanding bits of talent that sparkle like gems.

Authentic and realistic "behind the camera" scenes of movies in the making, add to the charm and interest of the story. Notable for excellent individual contributions to the general ensemble are: Ted Pho-Rilo and his orchestra; Shaw and Lee for some delightful drolleries; Hood Woods and Ray Mayer for song numbers; the Grand Opera number, headed by Hazel Hayes, one of the Wampas Stars; the stair dancing of June Gale and Lu Ann Meredith, two of the Wampas girls; the "mask" number, which is one of the most entertaining novelties screened in many moons, and a whole basket of orchids to Joseph Santley for his intelligent and skilful direction.

AT THE BELLE

"Folies Bergere"

Starring Chevalier and "Under Pressure" Delayed Film

Gay, fanciful and Parisian to the core, "Folies Bergere", Darryl F. Zanuck's lavish 20th Century musical, extravaganza, starring Maurice Chevalier, began a three day run at the Belle Sunday, matinee daily.

This sparkling production, which takes its mood and its settings as well as its name, from the internationally famous parisian musical institution, marks the personable French star's first appearance under the 20th Century banner, as well as his first dual role.

Chevalier is seen both as Charlier, the gay, singing, cane-balled star of the Folies Bergere, and as an American, Broadway bound, he-manly French baron whom he impersonates in his act.

Things begin to happen when Chevalier agrees to impersacate the baron in life as well, particularly since the baron's beautiful but neglected young wife proceeds to be unaware of the duplicity.

Merle's Hollywood Debut

Merle Oberon makes her Hollywood debut as the baron's wife, while Mona Ann Goldwyn completes the complications as Mimi, Charlier's jealous partner and former heart. Lumsden Hare, Robert Grieg, Walter Byron and Erie Mores are also prominently cast.

"Folies Bergere" offers seven gay new hit tunes, including a Happy Song", "Rhythm of the Rain", "I Was Lucky" and "An Revoir", Lemonier and other hits by Mandell and Stern and "You Took the Words Right Out of My Mouth" by Lane and Adamson.

The break-taking musical ensembles, including the $100,000 straw hat number and the spectacular Rhythm of the Rain Number, were staged by Dave Gould who staged the Cactus Number in "Flying Down to Rio" and the Continental Number in "The Gay Divorcee".

"Under Pressure" Delayed

Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen are reunited as co-stars in "Under Pressure", the second feature attraction the six day program.

Preview audiences are voted this mirgue picture the most colorful, the most thrilling and the most human of the notable Lowe-McLaglen series, according to advance reports, and wide interest has been displayed in the release throughout Canada.

"Under Pressure", it is said, supplies this outstanding screen team with a type of story, and a background, never before attempted by Hollywood.

In addition to the two stars of the picture, an unusually well-balanced cast includes Florence Rice, Marjorie Rambeau, Charles Rickford and other favorites.

Raoul Walsh, famed for such hit pictures as "What Price Glory?" "The Cock-Eyed World" and "The Big Trail", directed "Under Pressure".

"Shams" a refreshing outdoor film will be exhibited on the same program. "Folies Bergere" starts daily at 2.40, 7.10 and 9.50. "Under Pressure" at 3.40, and 8.30 p. m. The last complete show starts at 8.30.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 8 (CP)—The industrial section of the Toronto Exchange had its best market in many weeks today, volume expanding on and a lusty price level. Gila shared this feature, particularly Imperial and International Petroleum, both selling at top prices for years. Distillery, metal, steel, bank and utilities closed behind plus signs.

Following an opening show of hesitancy, industrial stocks turned strong before noon on the leadership of the oils and the strength of the New York Board where an inflationary interpretation was given to heavy vote for the soldiers' bonus measure at Washington. Volume was particularly heavy in Imperial Oil and International Petroleum with the former at a new high since 1931 and the latter at a new all time high.

A drop of 1 1-2 to 2 cents in the silver metal price unsettled the metals only mildly for a time and at noon Nickel had recovered to 37 7-8 to board a net gain of 3-8. Senders limited its loss to a half point. Ford A. C.P.R., Canadian Car, Dominion Bridge and Wallace Common were all higher this afternoon, on improved volume.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 8—(AP)—The Stock Exchange market maintained its early firm tone during late trading today and a broad list of issues gave shown by leaders.

U. S. Steel'ng extended its early advance to 3 points and gainers of 1 to 2 included Chrysler, Westinghouse, American Can, J. I. Case, Union Carbide, Corn Products, American Tobacco B, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, Cerro de Pasco, Du Pont and Coban American. Improved.

The late tone was firm. Sales approximated 1,250,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES
(Close)

Toronto, May 8 (CP)—Inflationary sentiments and a higher gold price in London were more than a match for the bears and a lengthy price list in the mining section of the Toronto Exchange today. After a morning dip for profit taking the whole list moved forward to a strong close with a few issues well spotted with gains. Senior golds took a more active part than usual in the day's trade.

Early depressing factors, including the decision of the 1-3 cents in bar silver, were swept aside by the Mining Market at the end of the first hour and the price level advanced strongly on the heels of the New York rally. Silvers, golds and base metals were all up and active early this afternoon.

News that Kirkland miners would go on strike with the Pioneer working force reduced by one half left, both issues holding unchanged. Dome firmed nearly $1, encouraged by active trade in the issue on the New York Board where one block of 8,000 shares changed hands. Teck Hughes, Hollinger, Little Long Lac, McWatters, Pickle Crow and Wasp were firm.

Noranda featured the metals, rising to $38.50 on the sale of 2,000. Eldorado, Castle, Bear and Nipissing were higher by 4 to 10 cents each at early afternoon.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The stock market got a firm hold on itself today and rallied along at a brisk pace with several leaders attaining new 1935 highs.

In the Canadian list, aside from firmness in Dome and Mclntyre, narrow price changes appeared in International Nickel, Dominion Stores and Canadian Pacific. On the curb, Hiram Walker rose fractionally. Dominion Government issues were slightly higher, Canadian funds improved 1-"" of a cent at 99 23-32 cents.

Among issues attaining new highs were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Chrysler, Continental Oil, Phillips Petroleum and Socony Vacuum. Telephone duplicated its old top and others hovering near that level included United Fruit, Columbian Carbon, Corn Products, Caterpillar Tractor and Inland Steel.

Standard Trading favorites improving a point or more included Coca-Cola, Int. Nickel, Int. Harvester, Johns-Manville, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Bethlehem Steel, Union Pacific, Cerro De Pasco, U.S. Rubber, Howe Sound, Dome and McIntyre.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't reach for a dose of nasty salts and water, or, laxative candy or the nerve gum that merely grinds on your intestines. Your trouble may be that you need bile to digest the fats in your food.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling may be that 3 pints of bile a day flow into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays and poisons you. Then you get constipated. You have gas, sick headaches, stomach upset. You have a bad taste and your breath is foul. Your whole system is poisoned.

What you need is bile flow. Ask for CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these 3 pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel like a million. Look for the name CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS on the red package. Insist on the red package. 25 cents.

Modesty in Window Dressing Appeals to New Yorkers

Lavish Display Does Not Attract Average Shopper

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, May 8—(AP)—It is modesty in window dressing that appeals to the hearts and pocketbooks of New Yorkers.

Nearly 100 percent more of them go inside the store to buy after looking at a modest show window than at one lavishly or even beautifully and expensively dressed.

This study indicating the facts is contrary to the traditions about what the well-dressed show window should wear are conducted by Thomas C. Siech, an authority on consumer and advertising problems.

"A tabulation was made of the number who entered the store after looking and the number who did not," he reported.

"The buying public is interested primarily in the merchandise, and apparently pays no attention to window trimmings, which attract just the lookers.

"In order to win the best results a display window should not use more than 80 square feet. Where observers observed this limit, 100 percent more shoppers went in than where the windows were larger.

"If the display window was not more than 15 feet long, 127 percent more shoppers entered after looking in the window.

"When in doubt as to the amount of merchandise to display, it is better to show too much than too little."

This finding also contradicts a general impression about effective show windows.

Sixty-four per cent more shoppers entered when full information about the price was given in the display. But explanatory cards appeared more effective at the side, rather than in front of the display.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

WAITING IN THE DARK

CHAPTER THREE

After the hot day, the night was soft and restful. Joyce leaned back against the tree trunk and drew a long breath. Dry smell of dust and sweet smell of sunburnt grass came to her.

Down by the freight sheds she heard the whistle of a train. Somewhere near an auto horn. A dog barked. Then silence, thick and soft as the dust closing in again.

The girl's ears were straining to the sound of a car which should be turning the corner, Norman always drove along Travers Street. It was not paved, this Main Street, but there was less chance of him being recognized when he left his own comfortable home on the Crest and came down here in night.

Travers Street was lined with small wooden cottages set in overgrown weedy gardens. Many of the houses held flyspecked cardboard signs in their windows announcing rooms offering room and board. After dark the street was practically deserted. The dwellers of Travers Street got up early to beat the Cannery or the Mill whistle.

Joyce found her mind turning back to her first meeting with Norman Weaver. It was a thrilling fairy tale to realize how often she thought of it.

Living all their lives in this same small town—knowing each other by sight, they were as far apart as the poles. Chance—that they had met at all. It was chance which sent Joyce uptown on an errand to be bought in a summer rainstorm. It was chance, no doubt, which had sent Norman aimlessly driving along Main Street at the same time.

It was not chance, however, that Norman had stopped to pick her up in the rain. Norman always had an eye for a pretty girl.

Before he dropped Joyce at the Commercial House, Norman had her promise to slip out and go for a drive with him the next night.

That night . . . the memory of it was as lovely and unreal as a dream. Lying hurriedly against the cushions of Norman's big car, spinning through the dark, black night while the stars fled in a silver tangle overhead. Swooping up the hill road through Meeker's Woods with the cool pungency of brake and evergreen blowing around them, and black shapes of trees fleeing backward.

Norman had swung the car out on the open ledge of rock known locally as The Ridge, and suddenly turned off the engine.

Soft black silence seemed to flow in about them. Before their front lay the hill that plunged away. Below them was the wide valley and flung in the centre like a spangled scarf on the black, were the lights of Riverton.

Joyce remembered how she had gasped. She had looked away from the panorama spread below, to find the young fellow's face close to her own. His eyes had been strange and intense in the dim light. She turned again with the same hot sweet thrill in her heart as Norman's arms closed about her.

After that their love had been frail and unreal thing formed of star shine and wordless kisses, and stealthy meetings in the dark.

Now that she looked back on it, they had done little talking . . . no planning. That Norman loved her was wonderful enough. She did not want to plan—to think in terms of Riverton social distinctions. Perhaps she was secretly afraid to do so. After all, they could do nothing until Norman was out of college. Of course they would marry then . . . people always did . . . But now it was enough to hug her sweet secret to herself . . . Enough to dream about.

All of this drifting through her mind now as she leaned back against the tree watching the stars wink-ing through the black branches.

A sudden low bell note made her jump. The courthouse clock . . . . Why it couldn't be! The clock struck on the hour and that would mean it was eleven o'clock!

She had waited here an hour! But where was Norman! Joyce found herself restlessly walking up to the corner of Travers Street trying to make no noise on the hollow planks.

No gleam of headlights along the dark stretch of street. Had something happened that Norman could-n't come? Oh that would be too cruel! After all these months of longing! It was only that he was delayed. . . . That was it he'd said today—something about a meeting in to meet him—that was it. Some people had come in. He was delayed. Any minute now he'd come driving like a fiend to make up lost time. . . . Oh it would have to be! She wanted to see him so badly!

Headlights swung around a corner and she darted behind a tree. But it was not Norman. Joyce just had time to draw back behind a tree before the car rushed by, a ragged snatch of song reaching her as it passed.

Fear and rage swelling in her heart. Disappointment stinging tears to her eyes. Oh, he should come! He knew how much it meant to her!

An unreasoning and frantic desire to see him had seized her now. She had begun to walk swiftly up Travers Street—far out to the curb where the trees sheltered her. Now and then she passed houses where women sat and rocked on the porch and men sat with their feet up on the rail smoking. Then she got her head down and walked very fast.

Another machine passed and she hesitated on the curb as though she were going to cross the street.

But it was not Norman and as it passed she went on again. This was like a troubled dream. A crazy thing for her to do . . . she ought to turn back . . . Instead she found herself plodding the hill where Travers Street merged into Valley View Street.

All about her, the comfortable homes of The Crest. Big houses, never more than three to a block sitting complacently back in grounds of shrubs and lawns.

Joyce's heart was hammering hard now. She was passing Norman's house, a big brown wooden building, broken out into an eruption of small balconies smothered in Virginia creeper. It was dark. No light gleaming anywhere from the long narrow windows.

The girl's footsteps slowed . . . stopped. And as she hesitated a burst of music came from further up the street. As though it were a magnet drawing her, Joyce followed. There was a party going on in the Weaver residence.

The big brick house stood squarely in the middle of the street as though well aware of its own importance. The street itself ended in a large circle driveway before it. Tonight this circle was lined with parked cars. Under the archway of the evergreen hedge Joyce could see the fairylike flittings of colored lanterns festooned between the trees. Light dresses and dark suits moved to and fro between the shrubs. The blare of the orchestra grouped on the side porch of the house.

Clutching her dark coat over her light dress Joyce had paused in the shelter of shrubbery. Her heart had leaped as her strained eyes made out the familiar lines of Norman's car parked to one side of the gate. She drew even further into the shelter of the bushes as a car thundered up the hill behind her and swooped into the circle of driveway.

Its headlights flashed around the hedge and for a moment everything stood out in a sharp unnatural brightness. The green evergreen hedge . . . long shadows cast by the bars of the gate . . . parked cars . . . all reeling for a weird drunken moment in the glare before they sank into darkness.

But in that moment, Joyce had seen something that caused her heart to leap painfully into her throat. Two figures, in the back of Norman's car. Oblivious to everything else . . . close wrapped in each other's arms. Norman's brown head close . . . very close . . . to the flaxen one of Natalie Cameron.

THROUGH BITTER EYES

CHAPTER FOUR

Sick faintness went over Joyce, shaking her to the heart, stealing the strength from her legs so that she wanted to slump down and hide in the shadow of the shrubs.

Norman . . . Norman . . . over there, holding Natalie Cameron in his arms, kissing her even as he had kissed Joyce this afternoon.

Norman! Joyce's heart was crying out to him. Oh, he couldn't do this thing!

Unbearable desolation stealing through her—chilling her heart....

Then came anger and bitter pride. Straight and tall, Joyce stood in the shadow, and her lip was curled. Still . . . she still! Never let them guess she was here. To be caught watching, like a beggar in the dark —Oh, that would be too dreadful to bear!

Men and girls had jumped from the second car. They ran over to Norman's machine and their shrill glee reached Joyce.

"Hey, stop backing allowed at this party! Say, Norm, how do you get that way? Think you can come back here and cut in on our time!"

"Aw, have a heart, you guys!" Norman's laughing voice sent a tremor through the still figure watching from the hedge. "Don't you know I haven't seen Natalie for six months! Let me talk to her, can't you? She promised me every other dance, and—we're just sitting this one out!"

"Every other dance!" That was Mac playboy's aggrieved voice. "Aw-w-y, you've no voice at all over you!"

"S' a fact!" Norman protested. "I'll show you the last letter she wrote me if you have to have proof. Tell 'em, Nat! Tell 'em who's your sweet papa—"

Laughing, protesting, they were pulled from the car. By the gleam of the colored lights Joyce could see Natalie Cameron slender, ethereal in pale chiffon. She could even catch the sparkle of a rhinestone chain around the other girl's throat.

They passed under the Cameron gate in a laughing group, Norman's arm dark against Natalie's shoulders.

Very still—the girl watching in the shadow of the hedge. The orchestra was playing the Blues of the Blues. Over after this night, that tune would seem like a weary whisper through Joyce's mind. Ever after this night she couldn't smell dusty pungency of a yew hedge without feeling an intolerable sadness.

All of life changed in a moment. All in a moment—as when a shell explodes and what has been smiling countryside becomes a desolate desert.

Joyce was looking through Norman's eyes, reading starkly the difference between Natalie Cameron and Joyce Allen of the Commercial House.

Seeing herself as an episode in the life of a young man. Something piquant but shady. Something to be kept from the girls of his own class and enjoyed under cover.

Fierce, raw shame flooded through the girl.—So more painful because it was helpless.

Somehow symbolic, that she should be standing here in the dark —an outcast looking into the world of light and music which was barred from her. She suffered from the tragic intensity of youth—never grasping at the mad jest which a capricious fate was reserving for her.

Joyce had stolen away from the shelter of the hedge. And the car was walking swiftly down the street, stumbling now and then because of the angry tears which kept welling into her eyes. She hated the big shadowy homes she was passing. She hated them with a miserable hopelessness. They widened the gulf between Norman and herself. They told her that she belonged down by the tracks in the Commercial House not up here in the rarified atmosphere of The Crest.

If she had only been the least of these girls tonight, thought Joyce desperately . . . even little, freckled Geneva Hains, who, in spite of the handicap of hand-me-down clothes and a home on the wrong side of the railroad track, was accepted as one of them. . . .

Then she could have met Natalie Cameron on her own ground.

Every small town has one family who are tacitly accepted as the leaders. It was not Natalie Cameron's wit nor beauty which had put her at the head of Riverton's younger set.

Natalie's wit was sharp rather than sparkling and her flaxen hair and light blue eyes were not to be compared to the strange haunting beauty of Joyce Allen.

But Natalie was the only child of Cora Cameron the widowed sister-in-law of old Roger Cameron. And old Roger himself was owner of the Riverton Paper Mills stock holder in the town water works, the Cannery, the Farmers' and Fruit-Growers' Bank, and far and away the richest man in town.

Old Roger had never married. He lived in the big brick house on The Crest with his niece and her mother —of whom rumor said he was secretly afraid. As Roger Cameron's heiress, Natalie was the richest catch in Riverton.

All of this Joyce knew, as everyone in the small town knew it. But it had been a fact which held no personal interest for her up to date. Natalie Cameron had been another girl whom Joyce would she be so young —— to regret.

Drive of Chicago White Sox Ceases to be Laughing Matter To Other Teams in the Loop

Perched on Top Rung and in No Danger of Being Dislodged

DEFEAT YANKEES

Detroit Pushes up Winning The Last Five Straight Games

(By Herbert W. Barker)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The extraordinary early-season drive of Chicago White Sox has ceased to be a laughing matter to the rest of the American League today.

Dopey-jurry standings are the rule of major league races every spring but the White Sox evidently aren't fooling. Jimmy Dykes' young club, with its crop of rookies, who outshine those of any league rival, threaten to be troublesome to put it mildly all year.

The pale blue's 4-3 victory over New York Yankees yesterday served not only to bolster Chicago's hold on first place but marked their ninth successive triumph in their own park. Back in the old days of White Sox baseball glory there may have been a precedent for such a string but that's doubtful. Powerful hitting and good pitching, especially from the Rookie John Whitehead and the veteran Ted Lyons have carried the Sox to the top of the standings, a game and a half in front of Cleveland Indians and two and one half games in front of the Yankees and Boston Red Sox who are tied for third position.

Old Tag Too Smart

Lyons was on the mound yesterday and the old campaigner set the Yankee blows down with his to outpoint Vernon Gomez ace southpaw of the invaders. The White Sox slammed Gomez for two runs in each of first two innings with the Rookies Rip Radcliffe and Vernon Washington leading a band. Radcliffe doubled to start the game, went to third on Al Simmons' pop fly double and scored on Washington's single. Gomez then walked Appling and Bonura to force in another run. In the second Radcliffe again doubled and successive singles by Hayes, Bonura and Dykes' fly produced two more runs. Lyons was in real trouble only in the eighth, when Tony Lazzeri clouted a homer with one on to account for the last two Yankee runs. That victory was the Sox 12th in 18 games. A year ago they won 12 of their first fifteen engagements.

The champion Detroit Tigers stopped Philadelphia Athletics 5-2, for their fifth victory in a row to remain a game and a half behind 8th place Washington Senators who dropped St. Louis Browns, 6-5. Tommy Bridges held the A's to five hits, one a Dickey home run by Wally Moses with one on in the eighth. The champions nicked Sugar Cain and Johnny Marcum for twelve hits of which Billy Rogell contributed three.

Washington pounded out thirteen hits in giving the Browns their eighth consecutive defeat with Buddy Myer and John Stone each collecting four. Earl Whitehill, meanwhile, held the Brown batsmen well in check.

Rain wiped out the other American League game and the entire National League schedule.

Golf Prospects in the Dominion Never Better

(By K. G. Cosh, President Royal Golf Association)

Hamilton, May 8 (CP)—Never in the history of the Royal and ancient game have the prospects for golf in Canada been more encouraging than they are at the present time, due to the progressive policy of the Royal Canadian Golf Association in sending a team to the Present Canada on a goodwill tour and to play in the British Amateur championship on the St. George Vase Competition, and to participate in friendly matches over Areas of the most famous courses in the British Isles. These matches have been arranged through the courtesy of the Royal and Ancient Golf Society.

This tour will undoubtedly prove a great incentive to all leading golfers of the Dominion, to secure a place on the team in years to come. Of course, this ambitious program has only been made possible by the generous support of golf enthusiasts throughout Canada, many of whom have hoped for some time to see this country more prominent in international golf contests.

From cables and letters already received, the Canadian representatives are sure of a right royal welcome and as they are especially invited guests of the Royal and Ancient Club they are not only assured of sufficient competition, but also that everything will be done in a truly sporting spirit to promote a better understanding among British and Canadian people.

As to the possibility of success in our first attempt to win the British Amateur Championship or to one of the other laurels it should be remembered that our team will be playing only four 36 hole matches over unfamiliar courses, with very little practice, and against our competitors who have been playing practically right through the year.

But of one thing we are assured and that is under the capable captainship of Mr. Somerville each member will do his utmost. But win or lose, it will be a glorious contest once and one that can hardly fail to have a beneficial effect on Canadian golf in general.

Upon their return, the team will take part in the Canadian amateur, which will be held at the attractive Hamilton Golf Club at Ancaster, Ont. It is fully expected this year's tournament will have the largest entry in its history. Already many of the outstanding stars of the United States have signified their intention of being present.

ORIOLES PACK A REAL PUNCH

Outclass All Teams in Loop in Matter of Getting Runs

(By the Associated Press)

Although they are no better than fifth in the standings, Baltimore Orioles, packing a powerful home run punch in their home park, far outclass their International League mates in the matter of getting runs.

The Orioles in nineteen games, the majority of them played at home, have crossed the plate 125 times for an average of 7.1 runs per game. The remainder of the teams are closely bunched nearly 70 games each but the Buffalo and Baltimore sluggers, Toronto Maple Leafs, third in the standings, rank second in getting runs with a total of 103 and an average of 5.7 for 18 contests.

In the fourth place are the Rochester Red Wings with an average of 5.4 for 17 games. Then come Montreal Royals with 5.3 for 19 contests, The Bisons with 5.2 for 14 games, the league leading Newark Bears with 5.1 for 16 games. Albany Senators with a five-run average for 16 contests and last, Syracuse Chiefs, who have scored only an average of 4.88 runs in their 17 games.

Defensively the Royals top the list, limiting their opponents to 72 runs, while the Bears were yielding 79; the Chiefs 82; the Bisons 84; the Redwings 96; The Senators 101; The Orioles 114 and the Leafs 120.

Brooks, pitching ace of the Baltimore staff of six games yesterday, left Jim Bears perched at the top of the standings with 11 victories in 16 decisions for a .688 mark and one-half games over the Royals.

AL DUNLOP WILL TAKE ON WINNER

Parnell And Gyroffy to Meet in Final Bout For This Chance

In order to procure a suitable opponent for Badman "Al" Dunlop, the local Kiwanis Club wrestling promoters signed Walter Parnell, of St. Catharines and Johnnie Gyroffy, Hungary, two of Dunlop's victims in a local ring, promising the winner a return bout with the Cleveland villain. Gyroffy and Parnell will meet at the Belleville Arena on Friday night in the feature attraction of a three bout wrestling charity show staged under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club. In the semi-final "Man Mountain" Jones, a newcomer to local wrestling circle hailing from Glendale, Cal., will tangle with Jack Pearl, who defeated Jack Dallas last week. Jones tips the scales at exactly 271 pounds and is well known as a human crusher. In the opening bout of the night Tom George of Oregon meets Frank Slevik of Hungary, the latter winning the admission of local mat followers by his clean cut victory in the preliminary last week.

The Kiwanis Club has endeavoured to bring new faces before the local wrestling fans as their shows progress and according to indications Dunlop to meet Parnell, after last week's 'donnybrook', took the Cleveland Badman at his word when it stated he would eventually meet the winner of a Parnell-Gyroffy bout. Both the main boulers for Friday night's show will have something to battle furiously to gain, as the loser will be eliminated from further competition as a headliner in Belleville. The Kiwanis Club is endeavouring to raise the standard of the calibre of wrestlers to appear in a local ring, but can only accomplish their objective by the assistance of the customers at the turnstiles. Two excellent Kiwanis wrestling shows have already attracted a large following, but Friday night's three bouts promise to be one of the best exhibitions to date. The usual popular prices will remain in force.

JIMMY McLARNIN HAS CLOSE CALL

Riding in Plane Half Hour Ahead of The One Wrecked

New York, May 6 (CP)—Jimmy McLarnin, despite his Irish heritage, isn't likely ever to be superstitious again.

The Vancouver beak-buster rode seat 13, of plane No. 12, first section of the Sky Chief out of Atlanta, quergus headed for Kansas City points east, and his welterweight title defence with Barney Ross here May 23. There were 13 passengers. But it was during another scrambling them through the fog by only half an hour, that crashed in Missouri, killing Barney Ross' son Cutting and four others.

McLarnin arrived here by train from Chicago to start training for his third bout with the abdicated lightweight champion still fit as a fiddle.

"We had a bad time ourselves with that fog" Jimmy explained. "We were all as white as we came near Kansas City, and we were joking about there being 13 passengers. Someone said one of us ought to get out for the general good of the rest.

"Over the landing field at Kansas City our pilot found a hole in the fog and came down all right. I didn't know until we had flown on to Chicago that the second plane didn't have our luck, couldn't get down, and had to go on into the fog.

"On the train out of Chicago for New York I sat behind a man who was reading all about the accident, and one headline said, "McLarnin Reported Dead in Crash."

"The man was shaking his head, and he said to another man with him, "Ian't that too bad? He was a nice boy and a good fighter, too." McLarnin appeared in fine physical condition, weighing about 146 pounds. He will train in New York for a few days before choosing an up-state camp. As his custom, he refused to make any prediction as to the outcome of the fight with Ross, who beat him once for the title, then lost to him in a 15-round decision last September.

"I saw Ross beat Henry Woods in Seattle a few weeks ago" he said, "and he looks to be punching harder than ever."

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Jupiter Pluvius called a halt to the activities of the local senior ball squad last evening, but weather permitting the "Radios" will continue to work out every night from now until the opening in Kingston on the 22nd of the month. Judging from the showing made by the newcomers and the aspiring juniors trying out with the local squad it is going to be a merry battle for positions on the local ball squad this season. For instance Coach Mills and Manager Young trotted out two complete nines as well as eight or nine aspiring out-gardeners on Monday. To segregate any individual player and star him at one position would be an injustice as they all turned in stellar performances and gave notice that battles of equal calibre before the various positions are alloted. Incidentally Coach Mills intends holding another practice game, between two local squads, again next Saturday.

It was announced today, that new wind-breakers would be presented to the "Radios" before the season opens. The wind-breakers are made of two-tone blue, the body being of dark blue, while the sleeves and trimmings are of a lighter blue shade. Suitable crests and lettering will also be on the wind-breakers.

During the concourse of last Saturday's C.O.B.L. meeting R. A. Fitzsimmons, president of the O.S.A.A. and of the C.O.B.L. severely took the Collins Bay Penitentiary to task in regard to their indifference towards fostering inter-mingling with and junior groups all within their district. Mr. Fitzsimmons' remarks were well taken along this line as the C.O.B.L. as a league has as its dividual aims the ardly neglected the advancement of baseball in the Penitentiary system. On the other hand, however, the C.O.B.L. clubs have not long standing data in the past, as the clubs are scattered over a large area, not being centred in a metropolitan atmosphere as are the other county clubs. If the Western Ontario senior teams were asked to hop over 125 miles as is the case from Oshawa to Kingston, the entire league would be in a jumior league in each town, or force each senior club to put a junior team throughout the season and play home-and-home junior and senior game in the C.O.B.L. each playing date. For instance, when the team here in Belleville, the regular senior fixture would be preceded by a junior C.O.B.L. game. This would may be far fetched and fantastical, but it would be varied and would have a tendency to bring along junior players in the proper way.

Both the Petes and the Tweeds jumped into the centre of the baseball fray on the holiday, the former playing a double-header with the Toronto Valleyviews, while the Ponies bowed to Oshawa Merchants in C.P.S. town. Incidentally we observed where Lesurf, that much travelled baseball player, migrate into the Lifsock city, suddenly donned a Merchants uniform senior company and hurled a few frames for the Petes on Monday. As for Lesurf, he was always a noisy and loud about a purely "home brew" baseball team, but Correspondent "S" St. Louis and Bud Clancy while sojourning in Belleville last week-end apparently made Kingston scribe call a gullly conscience recently as he referred to the latter as being the Peterboro scribe regarding clippings. A pamper effect without a pair of scissors just ain't, we guess."

On the other hand our Peterboro correspondent "Jack" has paid no relationship to Dr. Harry Blakely apparently due to the latter's neglect, but in the same breath thinks it is perfectly alright to boost the stock of Whitehouse, whose arm "blew" a decade ago or more. We are inclined to think that the reason Dr. Blakely would make if he could is indeed to return to the game, the main trouble is to get inside last inoffensive shy personality of Whitehouse's arm and the same along with the boys. 'Tis safe in suggesting Harry has wrecked the lives of present day Central League hurlers one of misery. There were a number of crooked players ever to grace the loop.

Two weeks ago Al Dunlop defeated Johnny Gyroffy in a local ring much to the dissatisfaction of the Kiwanis wrestling fans. Again last week Dunlop administered upon Walter Parnell, the village hero and standard bearer, a going over that the fans are still talking about. Dunlop then gave all of his boys the raspberry and said 'go and get a reputation before talking about return bouts, you punks". Sensing this set-up the Kiwanis Club officials signed the previously defeated contestants, Parnell and Gyroffy, for a bout on Friday night and the winner has been promoted a return slap at Dunlop. In the meantime, "rubber stomached" Al is sitting back giving the others the Brent cheer. At any rate both Parnell and Gyroffy want a second crack at the Cleveland grappler and will be battling in the last ditch at the Arena on Friday night.

The local Belleville and District softballers will convene on Friday night of this week to adopt their schedule, which is to open on May 16th, with all teams in the circuit in action. The Tip Top Tailors were granted a one year's leave of absence from the loop leaving a six teamed loop to face the 1935 O. A. B. A. barrier, namely B.B.A.C., Asimites, Asimas A. C., College Hill Cubs, Tweed and Redmerville.

FIVE KILLED IN MASS MURDER

Georgetown, British Guiana, May 6 (CP)—An entire household of five persons was wiped out in a mass murder on the little island of Leguan in the Essequebo River, said terse reports reaching here today. The victims were apparently slain as they slept by burglars who made off with $3,000 in cash and jewelry.

INJURED IN FALL FROM SCAFFOLD

Ezra Lockwood, Frankford, Suffers Painful Injury

Frankford—The service at the United Church on Sunday evening was in keeping with the 31st Anniversary of the Accession to the Throne of our present King and Queen.

The Form and Order for this occasion compiled by the Committee on Church Worship and Ritual was followed through into the service.

The Pastor Rev. J. Love preached an inspiring sermon taking as his text the 17th verse of the 2nd Chapter of Peter "Honour All Men, Love the Brotherhood, Fear God, Honour the King".

The Frankford Public Library will soon be moved to the new quarters upstairs in the Community Hall.

The members of the Board have been busily engaged for the past few nights and it is expected the library will be open to the many people this week.

The council is getting the Memorial Park grounds in shape again for the summer. The slides and swings are being set up and new sand is to be placed in the sand boxes. The flower beds are to be planted soon while already the grass is a beautiful green.

The park is a veritable beauty spot in the summer with its spacious grounds, flower beds which are a riot of color and beautiful shade trees.

The Soldiers Memorial from which the park gets its name is situated at the southern entrance to the grounds.

It is very inspiring in its simplicity of design and is a constant reminder of the many sacrifices paid by the boys whose names are inscribed thereon.

The "Live Wire Group" of the United Church met at the home of Mrs. Harry Shoemaker on Wednesday evening May 1st when Mrs. F. Mikel the president in charge of the meeting. After repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison and singing one verse of "Blessed be the Tie That Binds" the business of the evening was then taken up.

Mrs. Jean Brown who recently celebrated her 92nd birthday was then presented with a flowering plant by Mrs. Daniel Frost on behalf of the group.

Mrs. Bowen in her usual charming manner replied and thanked the group for the gift, remarking that it was always a pleasure to attend the group meetings and to see her friends at the church.

A musical programme given by the Ameliasburg Choir of Trinity was greatly enjoyed. This was composed of piano solos, musical saw numbers by Carl Austin and a vocal solo by Miss Austin.

Mrs. Floyd Kelchesan gave a reading as her share of the programme, which was well given and enjoyed by her audience.

After a "Guessing" and "Lucky Number" contest the refreshments were served by the hostess.

Rev. Edmund Love, which brought the meeting to a close.

Ezra Lockwood, one of the carpenters employed in remodelling the interior of the Community Hall fell from a scaffold on Saturday morning badly injuring one of his legs.

On the way to the office of Dr. Mullen who attended the man, he was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by Z Ray examination by Mr. G. W. Dickson. It was found that the leg was not broken but badly injured, which will necessitate Mr. Lockwood being confined to his home for some time.

On Thursday evening May 2nd an enjoyable affair was held at the home of Mrs. Willett Moyle when a miscellaneous shower was held in honor of his daughter Miss Ruth recently became the bride of Mr. Geo. Flindall of Smithfield.

Brighten up with ALL-BRAN!

You've had days when you've felt discouraged and low. Nothing seemed to go right. Frequently these dreary days can be traced to common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in your meals.

This ailment may cause headaches and loss of energy. Correct it by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory research shows Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and food-iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the fiber in fruits and vegetables. It is gentle—and often more effective. Isn't this natural food better than taking patent medicines—often harmful?

Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Brighten days with ALL-BRAN! Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

The Stirling Horticultural Society possess a fine nursery of young trees, and during the past year in an effort to create interest in the beautifying of publicly owned property, they have made many donations to the various school boards throughout this section. In years to come the beauty of the rural school houses will be greatly enhanced by these trees as they advance into full growth. Also through this medium the pupils are taught the value of preserving and beautifying property and take a personal interest in their development. Among those schools who have availed themselves of this opportunity are, Ridge Road, Wellman's Heyenhi Line, Springbrook, Harold, Minto and Allan's. This is a fine gesture on the part of the local branch of the Ontario Horticultural Society whose aim it is to give us a more beautiful province.

Stirling—The deeply imbedded patriotism of the loyal veterans was one stood shoulder to shoulder in defence of their King and country was again displayed as the members of the Stirling branch and many visitors marched ranks in divine worship at a special service dedicated to their Majesties the King and Queen in St. John's Anglican Church on Sunday May 5th.

The members of the legion congregated at their club rooms and at 10.30 a. m. began the procession marching to the stirring music of the Stirling Citizen's Band which led the parade to the church. The men presented a smart appearance as they paraded wearing their customary colored berets symbolic of their service in the great conflict.

As they entered the auditorium, the organist Mrs. Alger played selections including selections of the famous "Pomp and Circumstance", which was indeed a fitting prelude to the excellent display of loyalty shown throughout this unusually fine service. During the offertory, Mrs. Ellis offered as a soprano solo, "Come to Thee" Given in a splendid manner this musical treat was a notable addition to the service.

Choosing his text from the 10th chapter of the first book of Samuel the twenty-fourth verse "And all the people shouted and said, God save the King. Rev. A. S. McConnell delivered a very inspiring message. In his opening remarks he emphasized the fact that it was nothing new in the Anglican church to offer prayers for the King or to sing the National Anthem this was always part of the regular worship. But as a people we were growing more careless every day in the matter . . .

the theatre or public meeting it was seriously done sometimes without a thought of its true meaning. To encourage a boy to stand at attention during the singing of it meant being looked upon by some of our radical friends as being militarity inclined. But today in every corner of the world the voices of loyal subjects of the great British Empire will be raised in one glad song of thanksgiving "God Save the King". Not forced under the iron heel of radical ruling power but of their own free will, they shall gather to do honor to a King that holds his rightful place in the hearts of all his subjects.

Upon the personality of our Sovereign is based the integrity of the nation. Possessing as he does three outstanding qualities, humility, simplicity and honour. References made to British justice and fair play throughout the world find their origin in the honour displayed by this great Sovereign.

In 1928 a slim young man drawn and tired after travelling half way round the world, shouldered his way through an immense crowd outside the gate of Buckingham Palace to get to the bedside of his father whose life lay the balance. It was Edward, Prince of Wales. Thousands of loyal subjects stood for hours at the entrance of the palace that day, waiting for some word of encouragement from within, special prayers were offered up from every part of the world for the sovereign's recovery. The aid of science and by the grace of God his life was spared. This display of love on the part of the British people for their King was sincere and unenforced.

Rev. A. S. McConnell quoted Stanley Baldwin who made the great statement "that if the crown vanished so also would the British Empire". "The Canadian Legion", said Mr. McConnell, "is based upon loyalty. Loyalty to God, King and Country, and fellow man". He appealed to the gathering to remain steadfast to this inherited quality which is so pronouncery British.

The responsibilities of the Stirling Board of Education are being carried out unprejudiced and on the school property at both schools in an effort to add to the beauty of the buildings. Stirling is proud of the appearance of her schools where the lawns and flower beds are always an attraction. The trees include cedars and Carolina poplars secured from the nurseries of the local branch of the Ontario Horticultural Society, and the task of planting them is being accomplished by members of the property committee of the Stirling School Board Messrs. IS THIS A WRITING OF JESUS?

The Rev. Desmond Morse-Boycott, London clergyman, shown with the tattered document which is now being studied by experts in the hope that it is what the clergyman believes it is, a reproduction of a letter written by Jesus. Although no trace of the writings of Jesus has ever been discovered, theological experts affirm. He must have written much. The document gives the text of two letters, one said to be written by Agbarus, prince of Edessa, in Arabia; the other stated to be the reply of Jesus. The Rev. Morse-Boycott said the document in his possession was printed in Britain centuries ago.

Daily Short Story

KIDNAPPED

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The elephantine figure of Tom Blaine, headquarters detective, loomed in the doorway of the press room accurately as he motioned a fat finger of Joe Barron, young reporter.

"What's up?" queried Barron, once outside the police building. "Something hot?"

Naw, gobbing," said Blaine sleepily. "But I thought you might like to come along with me, I got a kidnapped case on my hands."

"Kidnapping! Say, I thought you said it wasn't hot. That's big stuff."

"This one isn't, because no one who amounts to anything has been snatched. Just some little punk on the outskirts of the town and the wife is begging to holler. There's not much money involved, but it's some some of the small timers will go after anything. Chicken feed and up."

"Suppose you tell me about it," said Barron, briefly.

Blaine located his car, climbed in facetly and after the difficulty in seating his bulky form, he turned to his young companion.

"Sure I'll tell you about it. But I don't know much but what I learned at headquarters. That's why I'm going out to this guy's house. To find out if I can."

"But what do you know?" the reporter was evidently impressed.

"Just this," answered the detective, as he started his car. "This fellow Pierce was snatched three days ago while he was out for a walk. The kidnappers sent a message to his wife, right after they picked him up, and asked for $2,000. She was afraid to call the police, but when she paid the dough and now hubby hasn't showed up."

"Has he been killed?" Barron asked, dumbly.

"If I knew that I wouldn't be lookin', up his wife would I?"

"I guess not. Go on."

"Well, the dame hung around the house waiting for her hubby for two days. She didn't hear anything more from the kidnappers, so she finally called the police station. Something she should have done in the first place. That's all I know now, but we'll probably get the whole works from Mrs. Pierce."

"Deadbeat Job

The detective drove on in silence, seeming only to guide his amateur in traffic. Barron said nothing, and wondered what Blaine was thinking about. At length he spoke.

"What's on your mind, Tom?"

"Nothing much," Blaine twisted his face in what he spoke, "was just thinking what a thankless job this detective business is. If you solve a case, somebody else gets the thing of it. But if you don't people think you're no good. Of course a right copper only thinks of his duty."

"And what is your definition of duty, Tom?"

"Just this. If a guy needs pinchin' and I catch him, he gets pinched. But if he's a right guy and only made a mistake, I let him get away. Of course that's off the record, see. I wouldn't want these college policemen, who pinch everybody in sight, hear me say that."

"Of course," said Barron, "I understand. "But he didn't and he spent many minutes trying to figure out the logic of his companion.

The small coupe drew up in front of a small white house in the suburbs. It was a nice little bungalow, well kept and with flowers in the numerous window boxes. Tom Blaine slapped heavily and turned to the reporter as he cut the motor.

"Wipe place, huh?" he said briefly. "I like to stick around and enjoy the scenery. But work is work, I guess. Let's go in and see what this woman has to say."

Mrs. Pierce was a tall woman, middle aged and with pleated, but not attractive features. Her voice was high pitched and she was evidently excited as she related the story of her husband's disappearance.

"It was just three nights ago that he left," she stated, wiping a tear from her cheek. "Just after dark. I had given him some of my treasured china to bring to my sister who lives down the street. She was having a bridge party you see, and didn't have a dozen tea cups. John never arrived there and it was just an hour later that I got this special delivery letter."

Blaine took the note that was offered him and read it through, hurriedly.

"Can I keep this?" he asked, quickly.

Money Given

"Why, certainly, Mr. Blaine, if you think it will help you. I don't know anything else about the case. I left the money on the door step the next night. But I was glad to get the note, but John didn't come back. I'm so worried, not because I don't know whether he's dead or alive, I may never know, and there's his insurance. The company says they will not pay until they know he is dead. It's awful."

At this point, Mrs. Pierce broke down and wept. Her shrill sobs could be heard throughout the house and Blaine motioned the reporter to follow him to the door. He didn't speak until he was outside.

"I've got a hunch," Blaine said thoughtfully," and the next thing is to see Pierce's boss. He was a bookkeeper at the lumber company by the station."

The employer of the kidnap victim was voluble. He was the sort of individual who liked to hear himself talk and after a cursory introduction Blaine relinquished the floor to him.

"I don't understand it," the employer stated. "Pierce didn't seem to be a type that would be a likely prospect for kidnapers. He never had much money, earned very little, but he turned every cent of his pay to his wife. As a matter of fact she had an agreement with me whereby the pay envelope would be sent directly to her."

"Did he drink?" Blaine queried.

"Oh my, no, Mr. Blaine. He was a very quiet person and was greatly interested in flowers. That was the reason Mrs. Pierce collected his pay personally. She said he couldn't be trusted with it for he could spend every cent on materials to experiment with. Flowers, it was his hobby."

The speaker waited to go on, but Blaine waved him aside and asked to see some of the bookkeeper's papers. The employer opened a desk and the detective mused for a while over various articles. He took a card with him and headed for the door. Joe Barron followed, veering the monstrous figure of his companion quizzically.

"Joe Blaine said, as he opened the door of his car, "I'm going back to headquarters. There won't be any break in this case for a couple of days and you might as well go back to your regular work. I don't want any publicity on things yet, see?"

Barron sat beside the big detective and said nothing. He was plainly peeved. At headquarters he merely asked Blaine for a break on the case and retired to the barroom. The detective strangely enough, did not stop in at the station but turned his car around and headed up-town.

Big Address

"Two days later Tom Blaine and Joe Barron were sitting in a small private room in headquarters. The detective was in a talkative mood and speaking fast.

"And so that's the way it was, Joe," he was saying. "I found a town address on a card I picked up at the lumber company. Traced the card and found it was in one of the poorer sections near here. Then I had nothing to do but see the guy."

"What happened."

"Well, I knocked on the door and a little wizened, henpecked guy answered. There was a funny, happy light in his eyes and I guess he didn't know I was a detective so he asked me in. I looked around the room and finally found some flower that matched the note that the Pierce woman gave me, so I knew I had my man, all right. I still didn't get anything and the little guy asked to come into the next room and what do you think?"

"I'll bite."

"There was the prettiest display of flowers I ever did see. Loam and dirt and everything was around the room, but it sure was a pretty sight." Blaine sighed heavily.

"I catch on," said Barron. "Pierce himself had sent that note. But where is he now? Back home?"

Tom Blaine looked at the young reporter with faintly disguised contempt.

"Naw," he said. "That little guy never had a home till he got wise to himself."

Little Benny's Note Book

Yesiddey afternoon pop was going to drive us out to the country so me and him and ma could have a picknick supper on the grass with hard boil eggs and sanwitches, and things, and ma making up the ideer and pop finaly agreeing to it, and just when everything was all reddy the sky got all shade up black and it started to thunder in the distance and lightning, ma saying, Aw heck, rain on the luck, gosh thang it, and ma saying, O deer, now isn't that provoking.

Too bad, too bad, pop said.

Sounding more polite than sad, and he started to look for parts of the Sunday paper he hadn't saw yet, and I said, O well, I dont believe it's really going to rain, do you, ma? and ma said, Well to be candid 3o, I dont.

It's most obviously going to do something along that line, and it can scarcely snow with a temperature of 73 or 4, pop said.

Meaning sure it was going to rain, and just then a terrac bang of thunder went off with 2 things of lightening, and I said, O well, that's nothing. I dont think it's nacully going to rain.

It's just a false alarm, if you ask me, ma said, and pop said, Yes good, optimism is one thing, and willful blindness is another. The poorhouses and asylums are full of cheerful grinning soles who twot like you 2, he said.

And more thunder and lightning went off and the oey reason it didn't rain after dasher was because it couldn't, and all of a sudden part of the sun came out sn it started to cleer up and in about 5 minnits the sky came back again, me saying, See, what did I tell you? and ma saying, There, now what did I say?

Fr Peet sake, mike I inquire the secret of your uncanny power? pop said.

Meening how did we know, and I said, Well I just had a kind of a sort of a ideer, and ma said, It was more like intuition with me.

You amaze me, let's go, pop said. Wich we did.

Madoc, May 8—A good number were in attendance at the May meeting of the W.M.S. which was held on Thursday May 2nd at home of Mrs. T. N. Burnside, Mrs. Jack, the leader, opened the meeting with a hymn, followed with prayer by Mrs. M. Bristol. A short business period was conducted by Mrs. Rivers. After reading of the minutes by the Secretary, Mrs. Broad, and the Roll Call, for which the response was texts on the precious stones of the Bible; reports of the Treasurer and various department secretaries were received. Plans were made for the annual W.M.S. service on the morning of conference Sunday. Mrs. Jack then took charge of the programme and conducted a very delightful worship service based on the theme "The Universality of Jesus." A former member Mrs. Robt. Burnside read suitable scriptures passages from Isaiah and the Acts. A hymn was sung. Mrs. Hamm gave a fine devotional reading "Precious Friends," based on Matthew 6, 16, chapter in "Study Book of Religion of the Indian Church" by Stephen Neill was made very interesting and profitable by Mrs. Dafoe. This dealt with the great work of establishing the Protestant religion in Southern India by Christain Friedrich Schwartz who labored continually from 1750 for 48 years.

A duet by Mrs. Fair and Mrs. Shiffman and prayer by Mrs. A. A. Thompson concluded this interesting study. The social hour was enlivened by listening experiences of their winter's sojourn in Texas, related by Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Bristol. Mrs. S. H. Ashley and Mrs. Dafoe were assistant hostesses. The June meeting is to be held at the home of Mr. J. C. Smith.

The meeting was in charge of the President and opened with the hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past." The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. G. B. Foote and was that used by the General, V. O. Inaier of Knox Church, Toronto, in the opening session of the Ontario Provincial ceremony. Mrs. McCaffrey led in prayer. During a short business period, brief reports of the delegates to the convention were given. Mrs. McCaffrey gave a wonderful account of the beautiful pageant entitled "The Shining Tree," held in Hartford Collegiate. So many were unable to secure admission that the pageant was repeated two week's later. Mrs. Jack Stephenson rendered an exceptionally beautiful solo, "The Years at the Spring."

Following a report by Miss Mackintosh another solo "The Lilac Song" by Mrs. Stephenson. Mrs. W. A. Hunter rendered a report of the convention. Mrs. McCaffrey offered her home for the June meeting at which the grandmother's will reverse and serve tea, gowned in old-fashioned costumes. The meeting closed with a hymn and prayer. Mrs. (Dr.) Crawford the hostess was assisted by Mrs. Reid and Mrs. John Allen.

TABERNACLE UNITED CHURCH W. A.

The regular meeting of the W. A. was held in the Church Parlor on Thursday at 2.30 with the President Mrs. Hall in the Chair. The opening devotions were in keeping with the King's Silver Jubilee Celebration. All joined heartily in singing National Anthem followed by a short address on the King by the Secretary Mrs. A. Naylor, followed by a prayer for guidance and gracious fitness of our beloved Sovereign King George by Mrs. Hall. Psalm 121 was read by Mrs. Cousens and followed by singing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow." The minutes were read and approved as also the treasurer's report. Visiting committee reported 26 calls made. Arrangements are being made for Banzar in the fall and other business being dispensed with a home cooking sale was held in Mrs. Ashley's Group and readily disposed.

Mrs. Curham then took charge of the programme. Responsive reading of Scripture, Hymn 111 was sung, followed by prayer by Mrs. Ashley. Address on King George by Mrs. Izard. A solo was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Poste entitled "My Task." A reading was given by Mrs. Keech. All enjoyed the programme very much. It was also in keeping with Silver Jubilee.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The May meeting of St. Andrew's auxiliary W.M.S. was held in the lecture room of the church on May first, with the president, Mrs. Farley in the chair, and Mrs. Worral's group in charge of the programme.

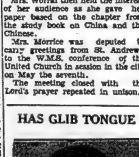
The meeting opened with the hymn "On God Our Help in Ages Past" followed by the Scripture reading from the Psalms by Mrs. Hanson.

Prayer by Mrs. Fargey; another hymn, then the minutes of the April meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Perry.

Mrs. Ranson then gave the financial report, and the visiting letters for April, Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Worral, gave a brief resume of their activities during that month.

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Haggerty were appointed to visit the sick and the "shut-ins" for May.

Mrs. Bateman, who was the delegate from this auxiliary to the W.M.S. Provincial, gave her report of the proceedings there. This was a wonderfully interesting report, and so meritorious, that after its reading, Mrs. Moore proposed that a vote of thanks be given Mrs. Bateman for the splendid manner in which she had carried out her duties as delegate.



Another pleasing feature of the meeting was a solo by Mrs. Bell, "Prayer Perfect," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Fleming.

Mrs. Worral then held the interest of her audience as she gave her paper based on the chapter from the study book on China and the Chinese.

Mrs. Morrice was deputed to carry greetings from St. Andrew's to the W.M.S. conference of the United Church in session in the city by May the seventh.

The meeting closed with the Lord's prayer repeated in unison.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

YOU lose vital nerve force if you allow your stomach to distress you. Acid stomach, indigestion, gas or biliousness and "costiveness" cause the blood to be poisoned and will eventually destroy health and perhaps life. This is what Frank Deery of Ottawa says: "I suffered for years from stomach trouble and was constipated most of the time. I could not bear to touch it. I got worse and worse. I was in bed for a month and lost 30 pounds. I was a nervous wreck. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets did me more good than anything I ever took. I am glad to say I am fully recommend it." Send 50c. today to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., for 50c. Liquid or Tablets. Regular $5.00 size.

LETTERS CONTAIN OFFERS OF AID

Dr. Brewer Has Third Charge of Murder Preferred

Enid, Okla. May 8—(AP)—A chain of letters and messages in a volume to bring envy to send—a dozen participants, continued to pour into the county jail here today for Dr. Guy E. Brewer, eccentric physician charged with the murder of three women.

Instead of dimes, the letters contained proffers of aid and pledges of money by young men, who received their educations through the doctor's financial help.

The latest charge against the bald, middle-aged country physician, filed yesterday, accused Dr. Brewer in the death of Ruby Ford of Ponca City, who died 11 days after an illegal operation March 20, 1934. Previous charges accused him of murdering Hermoine Fowler, Oklahoma A. and M. co-ed, and Mrs. Nora Jones, 37, mother of his two children.

Friends of the physician in Gruber, Okla., where he is known as the "sweet grouch" assert he was maintaining more than two score of students in three houses at Stillwater, site of Oklahoma A. & M. College.

He is more upset over their plight without him, declare the friends, than he is over his own precious hide. They said he sent his last $200 a fund he had been saving for graduating necessities, to the boys, when he was arrested April 30.

Meanwhile County Attorney Roy Hubbard announced investigation of "a number of new death" was nearing completion.

"The more we delve into this case the more amazing it becomes," Hubbard declared.

PROVINCIAL TAX SEEN ON INCOME AS VERY LIKELY

Premier Hepburn Gives Hint Municipalities Reimbursed

"IT WILL HURT"

Premier Sees No Way to Recovery Except by Balanced Budget

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—Imposition of a provincial income tax in Ontario to replace similar municipal taxes and payment to municipalities for revenue lost as a consequence was viewed as a strong possibility tonight by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn in an address before the Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturer's Association.

"There is no equity or justice in the present system," said the Premier. "Many from Toronto to escape it moved out to Forest Hill village. I don't see anything wrong in applying such a provincial income tax and subsidizing municipalities for money they lose.

Prefacing a discussion of Ontario's financial position with a warning against recovery would be impossible without efforts to increase the purchasing power and lower the costs of production, Mr. Hepburn reiterated the intention of his government to balance the Province's budget.

Less Costly to Start Now

"It will hurt," he said, "but it won't hurt as much now as if we don't. If we a few years more we decide on this, we are going to do it with interest and accumulating penalties for increasing the costs of production."

The main sources of revenue would be succession duties and dues under "accident" legislation. "We're going to put teeth in the succession duties act," he said.

Mr. Hepburn referred to the government's reduction of Crown dues on pulp timber and said this would increase employment and also improve revenues. He wondered if it would not be possible to proceed further with exploitation of the province's mineral wealth.

Canada's difficulties were economic, not political, said the Premier. Nothing of material wealth was lost with the country. Plans were just as fertile and industry as efficient.

HIGHWAY LINK TO BE FINISHED

Work to Progress on Road on 50-50 Basis

Toronto, May 8.—At an estimated cost of $500,000, bridging to be constructed.

In making the announcement yesterday, Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Northern Development, stated that the Federal Government had agreed to the undertaking on a 50-50 basis of construction with the province. While the orders-in-Council that implement the agreement have still to be signed, Mr. Heenan said he will be got underway without any delay.

It is expected that it will provide employment for about 200 men who recently were thrown out of employment by the shutdown of the gold mines in the Kirkland Lake and Northwestern Ontario.

Part of the work will be the routing of the highway remains in abeyance, pending further discussions by both the province and Ottawa of the best location. Ontario engineers have made on the various routes.

RAISE RELIEF BURDEN

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—The Ontario Government today contemplated raising the relief burden in Northern Ontario through its action in reducing Crown dues on pulpwood and abolition of the export fee with the expected result of stimulating the pulp industry.

"We expect to get a number of mills back in the next few months and Ontario newsprint mills will take advantage of the government's action to get new supplies now instead of waiting until winter," said Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, last night.

Inspector Clarke Honored, Painting Gift of O.S.D. Staff

Gift of Painting by Manly MacDonald and Fete at School Indicate Esteem Held For Inspector — Address on Birds And Jubilee Tableau.

At the closing meeting for the season of the Association of Teachers and Instructors of the Deaf, Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., Provincial Inspector for South Hastings, was honored last night by members of the Association at the conclusion of his twenty-seventh year as inspector of the Ontario School for the Deaf. The warm regard in which Mr. Clarke is held by all members of the school with whom he had been associated was expressed in the sincere tributes paid him by fellow-workers and his constant encouragement and help. A farewell gift a painting by Manly MacDonald, A.R.C.A., was presented Mr. Clarke.

The meeting, at which forme teachers were guests, was presided over by Miss Ruth Bedford, president of the association, who welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Clarke. Mr. Alec Gordon opened the program. Twelve children and their leader, Mr. Grant in blue satin capes, played the "Coronation March," Mr. Gordon acting as accompanist.

Debt to Inspector

Dr. R. E. Amoss, acting superintendent of the School for the Deaf, was asked to introduce Mr. Clarke to the gathering, and did so this evening. The Ontario School for the Deaf, Dr. Amoss said, owed to Mr. Clarke a debt that is very difficult to express in language. For a great number of years it was the function of Mr. Clarke, in his official capacity, to keep the school in touch with different movements and ideas in education as introduced in this province and it was also his duty to keep the Minister under whose jurisdiction the school was placed, in touch with what was going on in the school. To a very large extent the actions of the Department in matters regarding the welfare and development of the school were in response to recommendations made by a man who had such an intimate knowledge and connection with things educational that he could go from the field of rural and graded education and come to this school apart from the general knowledge with which Mr. Clarke met the needs for the progress of the school, the pupils and their parents.

Mr. Clarke spoke of his twenty-seven years as inspector, saying that the seven months ago and expressed his pleasure of again meeting the teachers present. His interesting address was prefaced by a "thank you" to His Majesty King George, the "sailor" King who had been able to fill his place as king without interfering with the principles of democracy. At a time when many monarchs have lost their thrones and their heads, King George today had a firmer place than ever before. While honored as a King, he is also honored as a man and as the head of a home, in a nation whose central thought is of homes.

Mr. Clarke spoke last evening on the study of birds, a keen observer and student of nature life. Mr. Clarke in his address inspired his listeners to delve into the fascinating lore of bird life. Without birds, he said, the life would be intolerable to human beings, the nature of their food, the insects and rodents keeping in check these pests. The decrease in the number of birds has disturbed the balance of nature and man is now combatting insects which birds would destroy had they been left to themselves.

Ignorance as to Birds

Through ignorance of and prejudice to their food and habits, thoughtless interference in their nesting habits and the havoc played by the carelessness of some automobilists, the decrease has been brought about. However children of

EDWARD HUMMELL FREED OF MURDER

Doctor States Man Was in Very Weakened Condition

Parry Sound, May 9.—Edward Hummell of Trout Creek, was Wednesday evening acquitted by Mr. Justice Henderson, of the Supreme Court, of the charge of murdering Alvin Everest, of Trout Creek, on December 28 last. The prosecuting attorney, H. E. Stone, K.C., of Parry Sound, examined a number of witnesses yesterday while the defense counsel, W. H. Flannery of Bon Bay, relied solely on the evidence of the accused. Dr. Limbert of Parry Sound, who examined the accused shortly after the shooting affray, stated that Hummell was in a very weakened condition. Hummell, in his evidence, stated that Everest had come to his home and had thrown a rope about his neck, drawing it tightly. He managed to get free and fired two shots, one emptying Everest's chest. The jury deliberated about an hour and brought in a verdict of "not guilty," Mr. Justice Henderson concurred in the verdict and acquitted Hummell.

ARMADA OF AIR LEAVES HONOLULU FOR MIDWAY ISLE

First of 48 Planes Roar Off From Pearl Harbor

1,323 MILE FLIGHT

Secrecy Surrounds Flight, No Report Issued on Way

Honolulu, May 9. —AP)—The United States Naval mass ocean flight to Midway Island began today when the first of 48 patrol planes roared off from Pearl Harbor at 8 a.m. 1 a.m. E.D.T.

It was expected to take two hours for all the planes to get into the air for the 1,323-mile flight. A cloak of secrecy was thrown about the movement of the planes as they sped down the ramp at Pearl Harbor to take part in the most elaborate manoeuvres the United States Navy has ever staged in the Pacific.

So great was the secrecy surrounding the flight, observers expected no further word of its movements after the take-off until the arrival at Midway Island.

AMELIA EARHART COMPLETES FLIGHT

Makes Trip From Mexico to N. Y., 2,100 Miles in 19 Hours 1-2 Hours

New York, May 9.—(CP)—Amelia Earhart, who stepped lightly from her red monoplane at the Newark (N.J.) Airport last night after completing the first nonstop flight from Mexico City, one expressed objective today—sleep.

Not that the perilous take-off or the 2,100-mile hop had tired her—she found the addition of another record to her list a "colorless" feat —but it was a "trying" reception by a cheering throng at the airport.

"It was not a particularly exciting flight," she told questioners.

The plane which had carried her from the Atlantic coast from Burbank to California touched its wheels on the brightly lighted field at 9.28.50" pm. E.S.T., after 19 hours minutes and 50 seconds after the take-off.

Police lines meant nothing to the throng that surged around Miss Earhart and about the plane and Miss Earhart had to abandon it to sturdier guardians.

With police cars for opening wedges, the flier slowly made her way to a hangar. Almost there, she met her husband, George Palmer Putnam, who reached her side only after prolonged football tactics by a police cordon.

"Mexico is more civilized than Newark" exclaimed the publisher.

King Creates Precedent, Meets Peers, Opens In Hall of Westminster

Monarch Stands in Mediaeval Hall Before Sitting Together

QUIET DIGNITY

Heralds Raise Trumpets as King and Queen Enter

(By George Hamblelon)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 9.—(CP Cable)—The first time a King and Queen of Westminster.

In the great hall of William Rufus, Tuesday, May 7, and his queen received addresses of congratulation from the peers and commoners in joint session assembled on the Silver Jubilee of his Accession to the throne.

It was a scene of quiet dignity rather than of pageantry. There was no mace of the cloister of armed men. Outriders alone escorted the King and Queen from Buckingham Palace to the Palace of Westminster.

Yet as their Majesties sat on a throne in the House of the Royal family about them, Indian princes, Dominion Prime Ministers, judges, members of the House of Lords and of Commons crowding the vast stone of Westminster Hall, one felt a new and closed relationship between Crown and Parliament.

The ceremony had deep historic significance. Never before has a King gone to Westminster Hall to meet the peers and commons assembled together.

King Like Chairman

Indeed, as he stood there quietly speaking, his audience remaining seated as his request, the King seemed like the President of some National Assembly than a Monarch addressing his subjects.

And as he spoke of "these rafters of medieval oak, stem witnesses of historic tragedies and pageants," one's mind turned to other and very different days, to long centuries of conflict between the Roya prerogative and parlia mentary privilege.

For Westminster Hall cradled British Parliamentary institutions. There nearly seven centuries ago, Simon de Montfort summoned the Knights of Shire to Westminster for their first Parliament.

There Richard II was deposed and the hall rang with the challenge of Harry Bolingbroke "to this realm of England", WEJnin a few feet of where His Majesty stood today, Charles I was in attendance on a death.

IN Cromwell's Day

There, in the name at Parliament, Mr. Speaker gat the Sword of State, Cromwell dissolved, placed the gold sceptre in his Hand and in-Parliament. The Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England.

"The Lord and Commons met in their own chambers as became before the King arrived and thence the peers headed by the Lord Chancellor and the commoners by the Speaker proceeded four abreast to the Hall of Westminster. The Lords and Judges in their robes were already in.

A number of the commoners in accordance with ancient privilege wore workaday lounge suits. One apparently forgetting he was not in the House, wore his hat, but he took his shat. On a smiling hint he removed it a moment later.

Heralds Raise Trumpets

Big Ben just boomed out the strokes of high noon as the Heralds raised their trumpets and the King and Queen appeared.

On the dais with them sat their four sons, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

Their Majesties were left and right were the Duke of Connaught, the Duchesses of York and Kent, the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood, Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone.

Still further apart in boxes decorated in Royal Blue were the Indian Princes, the Dominion Prime Ministers, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, R. B. Bennett and representatives of the Colonies.

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—The weather has been somewhat milder over the Great Lakes and Northern parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Danced With Prince

Virginia Briscoe is only 17 and seemingly too young to be impressed by royalty. While in Bangalore the daughter of Powel Briscoe, wealthy Oklahoma City oil operator, had the opportunity (most girls deem it an honour) of dancing with the Prince of Wales. Virginia, however, claims that he was "not so hot as a dancer," and she'd "lots rather dance with the boys back home."

POLICE COURT

Only one case was presented in today's local speeds Thursday morning traffic court held before His Worship, Magistrate R. J. Metcalf, K. C. The minimum fine for excessive driving was assessed the motorist charged.

Fines are to be levied in the future if the practice continues, police authorities announced today.

The manager of the local office of the British American Oil Company complained to the police of the theft of gasoline from their pipe line on the government dock. The pipe line that is used to convey the gasoline to the storage tanks, has been recently "tapped". Investigations are pending.

DAMAGE BY FIRE LIMITED TO $500

Firemen Praised for Good Work at Federal Building Fire

Damage to the extent of $500.00 was caused by a fire which started in the basement of the post office building Wednesday afternoon about 4 p.m. o'clock and which was brought under control by the local fire brigade under Chief Lynch after an hour's work. "It burned at one time," said the Chief, "that the building was doomed for smoke was pouring out of the windows, when the brigade arrived and the floor underneath the mail racks was in several places." The blaze travelled along the east wall and for a time the record's room was threatened but by playing the streams of water into the basement, the fire was confined to the vicinity of where it started.

The fire was first discovered by Mr. Roy Mosher of the postal staff who was sitting at the case near the "drop" on Pinnacle Street, hearing wisps of smoke coming up through the crevices between the woodwork of the floor and case for the reception of drop mail, he investigated, pulled out the mail and gave the alarm. Flames from the drop spreara to have been the seat of the fire and the intense heat of the heat become that it scorched the paint on the metal drop and case on the wall on Pinnacle Street.

It is believed the fire started in some manner in the basement from an as yet unknown origin and was burning quite briskly before the alarm was sent in. Smoke poured from the basement windows and doors and the janitor, Mr. Bowerman and some damage according to firemen was done the furniture in the caretaker's apartment on the upper floor. The firemen were hampered by the heavy coat of smoke and before they could enter the basement, they were forced to don smoke masks.

Postmaster J. V. Truslech on the day issued a denial to the report carriers had been called back to the fire to assist the firemen. Mr. Truslech praised the work of Fire Chief Lynch and the brigade.

No loss was felt by the Postmaster.

The Postmaster stated that all waste paper from the departments in the federal building was assembled in the basement and baled. Yesterday there was no loose paper about except what had been in a crate about to be put in the furnace a bale was taken out. On the floor were a number of bales with the firemen had to break open to get at the fire which had eaten its way within.

The window near the seat of the fire had been open as this cool day whether a butt of a cigarette had been thrown through by accident is of course unknown.

The postmaster explained that the mail carriers had left the office at two o'clock and though the rear door of the basement was open no sign of fire was evident. Mr. Howie who carries the mail to the depot left at that time and when he arrived at the C.N.R. depot he was told that there was a fire at the post office.

Besides the destroyed paper in the bales that was in the crate a number of sorting cases were damaged evidently beyond repair. One was a preliminary case another a forwarding case and one special occasions case and the other an outgoing case used only at Christmas time.

The postmaster explained that otherwise much of the equipment was lost as the fire did not get through the floor into the next office. Fire in the office would result disastrous and lead to disorganization as it would take some weeks to get the sorting cases in shape. There are ten of these for the city but as a matter of precaution records of these are kept as well as maps of the routes of the mail carriers.

Today there was but a trace of smoke in the building except in the basement where evidences of fire were apparent. The firemen had succeeded in preventing the flames from working their way through the double flooring and surface subplanks. While a considerable portion of the ceiling of the basement had to be removed to extinguish the flames, damage was limited to some hundreds of dollars to the building, the waste paper and the sorting cases.

A coincidence is being told today which shows how events sometimes repeat. Several years ago there was a small fire in another portion of the basement. On that occasion as on this, the postmaster had just risen from his chair in Mr. Reginald Arnott's barber shop after having had his hair cut when the alarm was given. Mr. Truslech yesterday without waiting to replace collar and tie hurried to the building.

While smoke filled the entire building, little damage was done except in the basement. None of the building used as office, Mr. Percy Polkville suggested, the new floor was filled with smoke and indications today that there had been a fire.

"I had just nicely finished my spring house cleaning," said Mrs. Polkville today, "and today the bedding, walls, the curtains, and the furniture smell of smoke. It will be some time before we get rid of the smell."

KING IS GREETED BY PARLIAMENT

Prays For County to Continue Cause of Freedom

(By Harold P. Ireman)

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)— King George today told members of Parliament come to congratulate him on his silver jubilee that he prayed his country could continue to pursue the cause of freedom and progress.

"In these days when fear and preparation for war are again astir in the world," the Monarch said, "let us be thankful that quiet, government and peace prevail over so large a part of the earth's surface."

The King also expressed gratitude that under our flag of freedom so many millions eat their daily bread in far distant lands and climes with none to make them afraid."

Referring to Westminster Hall, where he received the Lords and the members of the House of Commons, "the very cradle of our envied parliamentary institutions," the King said.

"Here is the anvil on which our common law has forced to become the joint inheritance of the United States of America and of our own community of peoples."

The King, looking back over his twenty-five eventful years of reign, said the jubilee festivities "was chiefly for escape from a danger greater than ever before threatened our land and empire. War—in which "strength upheld the free."

King Greeted

At the doors of Westminster Hall, the King and Queen were greeted by the First Commissioner of Works, William Ormsby-Gore, custodian of the building.

Members of the Lords and Commons were already in the hall when the King and Queen arrived. They had been called to order an hour before, and then the members of Commons, headed by Speaker, and the speaker, walked from the Chamber through the lobbies and into the hall through the great north door. The peers headed by their mace and the Lord Chancellor, entered the hall from St. Stephen's Hall.

To safeguard the King's health, all doors were closed and heavily curtained, and the Hall is known as the coldest building in London.

Many thousands of cheering subjects lined the streets as their Majesties drove to the Hall and returned.

AT EVERY INTERSECTION BE CAREFUL!

THERE were over 800 bicycle riders killed or injured in Ontario last year.

Bicyclists, especially children, are often careless. This simply means that drivers of motor vehicles must be extra careful. Remember that you are in the heavier vehicle.

At stop streets . . . stop! Discipline yourself when you drive. Cut down on speed, especially at night. Make sure that your brakes, tires and lights are effective . . . otherwise, some day, you may find yourself in serious trouble.

IT IS BETTER TO BE SAFE . . . THAN SORRY!

Many Fine Addresses Given at Wednesday Session Of the W.M.S. Conference

Dr. Revelle Gives Illustrated Talk on Chinese Missions

SESSION CONCLUDED

Plans Are Discussed For Tenth Anniversary in October

At the Wednesday morning session, Miss Ira Chown, Kingston, conducted the service of Worship, taking as subject the third fruit of the Spirit "Peace". The Shepherd's Psalm "The Lord is My Shepherd" was a fitting introduction to her inspiring talk.

The report of the Nominating Committee was brought in by Mrs. N. S. Robertson.

Sympathetic messages are being sent to members of the Executive, who are ill and a complimentary message to Mrs. Crowe (Toronto) President of the Dominion Board who has received the King's Jubilee Medal.

Committees formed—

Courtesy—Mrs. J. W. Fulford, Brockville, (convener) Miss E. L. Brown, Belleville; Mrs. C. M. Govit, Peterborough.

Memorials and Resolutions—Mrs. H. T. Thompson, Whitby, (convener) Miss E. Dunnon, Mrs. Dafoe, Madoc.

The secretary is to be appointed for Temperance and the second vice-president is to be supervisor and organizer of Auxiliaries.

Mrs. J. G. Sills, corresponding secretary then presented the memorials and resolutions sent down by the Presbyterials.

The members then separated and went into Department conference.

President's Address

Mrs. W. L. Smyth, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch, brought to the ladies a message of courage, faith and encouragement from the thought "Your Work and Mine"

"The Joy of the Lord God is upon Me". Can we not realize this for ourselves? Will His experience with us why do we get discouraged? Why do we get discouraged? That He can dwell in our hearts is the greatest experience that we can know or words can express. He stands here in our midst and calls us by name as Christ and Mary. He needs you and longs for you to come to us and speak the same words as He did to the disciples "Peace be with you." Those who are willing to obey Him He will reveal Himself. Life is a loom. God weaves the cloth and it woven in our everyday life. The threads are made on the wrong side and we do not see the pattern which God is weaving until it is finished and then it is a thing of fit for the palace of Kings. It is woven out of small threads and how do we know what we are weaving but God does. In all weave cloth of different thickness and we often do not choose the strongest. To each one of us He gives some special work which no one but ourselves can do. He knows how to use and if we are led by us there will always be something lacking. Here is the vital question. Can we recognize the source of power that will lead us to serve and use that power to fill with strength. There is a richer, fuller life than we are living. We are linked with God and with Him all things are possible. There is no greater power than the genuine faith in God. When we have done our best we must trust Him with the outcome. He is our Father delights to help us and if we trust God we are children living in His House. He is the object of the Kingdom of God Movement as we surrender ourselves to an ever-present God. It is when we make the best that God can do with us. There is great need for Christian women who have lost self-consciousness in their devotion to a great cause. The great students, the great Scientist the great leaders but followers. The best results are from the humble ones.

Our unconscious influence fails for good or evil on some one. Let us strive to have on others the unconsciousness exact an influence for God.

Fewer Missionaries

Mrs. R. O. Jolliffe, Candidate Advisor of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch, presented the work of the Candidate Committee of the Board, and told what missionaries would be required for 1935. The Branch has at present no candidates, with whom contact is being made through this department.

Finances Increase

Mrs. H. T. Thompson, Whitby, reporting on Christian Stewardship, and Finance explained that this department showed an increase and suggested the use of quarterly reports and of the envelope and budget system forms of raising money thus putting the whole scheme on a systematic basis.

Mrs. W. H. Ashton, Campbellford, closed the session by prayer.

Evening Session

After the supper hour Dr. Ian R. A. Revelle, missionary on furlough from West China gave an illustrated talk on the work in that country. The moving pictures shown were taken by himself during his stay there among the Chinese people of all classes and depicted their customs, religions, industries, the life of the little children, missionary scenes, including their schools, colleges and churches. It was a most interesting and realistic picture of Chinese life and was much enjoyed by everyone.

The evening session was presided over by Rev. James Semple, pastor of Bridge St. Church. The service of worship was in charge of Ontario Presbytery and Mrs. C. R. Richardson gave an inspiring talk "Faith, the substance of things hoped for."

Greetings from the Conference were brought by Rev. L. S. Wight, Kingston, who complimented the women on the marvellous work they are doing in spite of the recent changes in missionary policy.

Mrs. China, saying recent messages were received by her, that Belleville and W.M.S. in their great work? The Bay of Quinte Conference certainly is full until all nations have contributed their part.

A playlette by some small boys and girls of Bridge St. Church Mission Band was very delightful while a solo by Miss L. Riggs "A voice in the Wilderness" and a duet by Mrs. Bradley "Teach me to do Thy will" added much to the pleasure of the evening.

Mrs. W. L. Smyth introduced Dr. Ian R. A. Revelle and Mrs. S. Carscallen introduced the other speakers. Mrs. Brown, Both speakers are from West China. The dedicatory prayer was given by Mrs. H. Morring. Mrs. F. B. Naylor pronounced the Benediction.

Christian Missions Address

Christian Missions are the most revolutionary movement in the revolutionary China today; the only thing that will save China from Communism is Christianity. Dr. Ian Rutherford Brown, who is home on furlough until March next, gave an address on the types of missionary service there with the former emphasis on Methodist Church and the United Church, whose hopeful address before the Bay of Quinte Conference Street United Church, Wednesday night. Here is the main item of the evening's program.

Such befits actuated the President of Chekiang Province Chiang Kai Shek, when he became a Christian and was baptized by a missionary very highly the valiant fight he was making to stop graft, political corruption and opium and in other ways unite his country on Christian principles.

Twenty years ago no nice women ventured out on the streets of West China. Now those streets are gaudy with the fine clothes of all classes. Then the missionaries who were the conservative element now, are the ones who welcome changes but there were dangers in such rapid changes. The speaker remarked that parents were sending their schools had to have chaperones, and that the girls in the Christian Girls' law school was mobbed by the male students. One of the biggest problems in the capital city is operated by a woman.

With many interesting stories Mrs. Brown showed the valuable contributions which missionaries are making to the uplift of society there. "Rivers of living water" for the thirsty souls of men and women verts by no means expressed all the influence of the Church in far-off China.

REMEMBERING FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

Sunday, May 12, will be British Empire Red Cross Day in commemoration of the life and work of Florence Nightingale.

One hundred and fifteen years ago Sunday, May 12, there was born one who was to become one of the greatest of women of all time, Florence Nightingale. Coming to fame in the War in the Crimea, when the sufferings and conditions of the wounded and ill struck her as worthy of calling out the heart of mankind, her work in this theatre of war in time gave rise to the creation of the Red Cross movement. Her work in the Crimea had been a revolution of the military medical service; for her station in life, and her knowledge of conditions made her the person who was called upon to initiate what has become one of the most potent forces of this age.

Henri Ducant, a young public-spirited citizen of Geneva, read the reports which Miss Nightingale had made to the British Government and finding himself in the scenes of the war of Austria and France, took a look for himself on how conditions were. He reached the battlefield of Solferino within twenty-four hours of one of the bloodiest of conflicts of the war. There he saw the sight which made him at once organize peasants and secure the help of civilian doctors and organize an effective though extempore voluntary medical service to which hundreds owed their lives and relief from agonies. For three years Dunant gave himself to awakening the world's conscience and as a result the Geneva Convention was signed in 1864, the signatory nations agreeing that civilian volunteers might be regularly organized in connection with armies. They were to be absolutely neutral and respected as such. The emblem they were to use was the Red Cross.

That is the foundation of the worldwide society which today is doing most effective work.

It was the outcome of the reports of Florence Nightingale. But there were other results to her work and her reports, the organization of nursing with a revolution in nursing practices, for with a gift from the state she founded a nurses' training home in connection with St. Thomas' Hospital, London, and she also drew attention of authorities to the need of prevention of disease as well as curing the sick. Though she became a confirmed invalid moving with difficulty from her bed to a couch, she spared no effort to influence the leaders of the nations.

The relation of Florence Nightingale and the Red Cross was threefold, the work she inspired in Dunant, the devotion of her life to relief of suffering and the study of preventive medicine and improvement of public health. Thus she personified in advance the Red Cross organization as it exists throughout the civilized world.

It is, therefore, most appropriate that the birthday of this famous woman should be commemorated as British Empire Red Cross Day, May 12th.

RADIO'S FINE PERFORMANCE

The radio gave possibly the best performance it has yet given in any public event when on Monday the royal jubilee was broadcast from London and from all parts of the Homeland and the Empire.

A few years ago great as were the expectations of radio anything like the perfection of the mechanical side of this broadcast could have been foretold. In this respect the radio is like the motor car, old cars were satisfactory but cannot do the performance of new ones. Radio having more recently come into general acceptance, the future is very bright and what it will do in future will probably make today's performance a sort of twilight as compared with the full sun of the completeness of mechanical equipment which will mark radio.

So science steps forward to perfect its inventions. Engineering in science is one of the greatest avenues a man can follow for the road finished with opportunities.

Meanwhile, more than satisfied with Monday's broadcast, the people can but thank the science engineers and the broadcasting commissions of Britain, United States and Canada.

Power and liberty are like heat and moisture; where they are well mixed everything prospers; where they are single they are destructive.—Saville.

It is not possible to found a lasting power on perjury, and treachery.—Demosthenes.

Beware of dissipating your powers; strive constantly to concentrate them. Genius thinks it can do whatever it sees others doing, but it is sure to repent of every ill-judged outlay.—Goethe.

Power is ever sealing from the many to the few. The manna of popular liberty must be gathered every day or it is rotten.—Wendell Phillips.

THE INHERITANCE

Then my father spoke of the tales retold
That his father had told to him,
And I saw the scheme of life unfold
And life filled my cup to the brim.

'Twas then that I came to learn the light
That glowed in my father's eyes,
As he told me of the deeds they had done for right,
With honour their only prize.

And I cried: "O, Father I too, will keep
Thy faith and the faith of our sires,
That my children's children shall never weep
For the evil of my desires.

"And so I will pledge my life to you,
And my sons when God blesses me,
And in turn they will pledge their sons to be true
For all time and eternity.

—Susie Sweeet Gilkerson.

JUST FIFTY YEARS AGO this month William C. Springer, of this city, recalls coming to Canada from Cleveland, Ohio. He found a wife under here with snow on the ground and the air quite frosty. Mr. Springer went to Peterborough first where he established a lock factory, afterwards coming to Belleville, where his presence resulted in the two lock and builders hardware plants here which have been so successfully operated ever since. Fifty years of constructive work in the building of industrial Canada and William Springer, Past President of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, is still a young man in spirit and energy.—one of the real builders of Belleville.

SUNDAY IS MOTHER'S DAY, bringing again the opportunity to show in marked manner the honour and respect due the mothers of the nation in general and our mothers in particular. That mother of ten children in Montreal who, interviewed on Jubilee Day as to the Royal Family, said that she felt a kinship and deeper love and loyalty for the throne of Great Britain because the Queen was a mother first and a Queen after, and could appreciate and sympathize with mothers everywhere in their difficulties and problems. This Mother's Day should be celebrated with greater enthusiasm than ever, realizing that the mothers mean to the nation, all that it's best in the social structure, and to the individual family. Let us honour our mothers this Sunday, those with us, and those who are resting just over the hill.

"THE BEST THINGS IN LIFE are not cars, radios, flying, horse-racing, football, or the pursuit of wealth, but the Bible, Homer, Shakespeare, Handel, Dickens, the Elgin Marbles, Salisbury Cathedral, the open country, the sea and the stars," said Dr. M. R. James, Master of Eton College.

HUMOR SAVED HIS LIFE, said Chauncey M. Depew, the famous after dinner speaker, humorist and philosopher. Said he: My grandfather died of worry and I myself was headed for the same fate, until I decided to cultivate a genial humorous attitude toward life and events. So I can say that humor saved my life. And that goes more than double for we can look around at the survivors in Canadian public life and find the most robust are the men and women with a keen sense of humor—to them the shafts and arrows of outrageous fortune are blunted with the laughs that those humorously inclined can get out of almost any situation. Take Hon. George Perry Graham, for instance. Hon. George made a joke of a newspaper into a real newspaper, honored and respected from coast to coast; joked his way into Parliament and even chased the bites out of the grumpy old Senate Chamber with the humor that compels a laugh on the most austere of Senatorial faces.

Letters to the Editor

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer:
Dear Sir:—

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Now that the law is satisfied and Harold Vermilyea has paid the death penalty, the time is opportune for us to consider whether we desire to continue capital punishment. The strongest argument for capital punishment is that it acts as a deterrent, preventing the recurrence of murder—but it would be very interesting for some statistician to inform us if murders are on the increase which many of us believe. If this is so, then the argument is weak.

There is always the possibility of hanging the wrong individual, but this is not very probable. There are those who say that hanging is too good for some murderers, but what if the condemned person is a sister or brother, mother or father? There should be another way out and there is. Any fool can criticize the present governing order of society, but there is such a thing as constructive criticism—showing a better way. Some complain that we have too much interference already without having more but this is day of interference and rightly so, because it shows signs of progress. It is impossible to improve the lot without disturbing the present, yet all interference should make for the common good of the masses.

The alternative to the death sentence is a life sentence. Objections are that the taxpayers should not be expected to support the necessities of life for murderers. Why not set apart an island where the law breakers will till the soil and earn their own bread, and give the Salvation Army charge over them? They can be handled without a gun. Ask any Salvation Army officer about the criminal tribes of India who were handed over to the care of the Salvation Army.

The best prevention of murders is to establish institutions where anyone in trouble or any kind can unburden his heart in confidence before any evil deeds are committed. Those who contemplate acts of violence are mentally ill, and as such should be encouraged to seek the guidance of spirituality. Suicides, murders, etc., could be prevented by quick, intelligent, broadminded sympathetic folk who are ready to help when everything seems to go wrong.

The Salvation Army can do this work as well as visit the condemned man in his cell.

We are wiser than we were, civilization is supposed to no longer take an eye for an eye or a tooth for a tooth, we have outlasted war, but why should life be a life for a life?

Arnold Brown,
Belleville.

CADETS

"Belleville, Ont., May 3, 1935.

"Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,
"Dear Sir,—

"In the recent edition of your paper an Ex-Cadet officer gave his point of view in favour of continued Cadet training. Would I be kind enough to allow me an opinion on the matter also as an Ex-Cadet Officer?

"The writer of this letter begin his argument upon the assumption that those who object to this training object to the principle means to the nation, all that is best in the social structure, and to the individual family. Let us honour our mothers this Sunday, those with us, and those who are resting just over the hill.

"I would like to begin by first recognizing the value of the manly qualities he suggested such as "Perfect precision" and "Being trained to be able to stand still and mind one's own business." To walk as though life was worth living—"To take pride in one's personal appearance etc." All this is building material he claims is not found in the school cadet except in the Cadet training.

"This slo my mind is none too thoughtful an opinion. Does he give no credit to the teachers in our schools at all? Do they not plan their part in moulding these qualities into their characters? I am sure that if he is honest with himself he must admit that the finest qualities within himself than all the cadet training in the world, if ever could have.

"I can be thrilled just as much upon seeing a group of young men give a display of gymnastic in the school gymnasium as I can at seeing them march around at "Cadet Inspection". In fact, I must say I think he will agree with me that the display in the gymnasium requires just as much precision, just as much disciplina and what is more does more all round good. I have seen and taken part in both.)

"Without touching upon the subject of militarism in Canada, I believe that "Cadets Training", like other traditional methods and ideas in our school system, has become what we uptight call "Excess Baggage".

"Yours respectfully,
"Ex-Cadet Officer."

Renunciate War Promote Peace Bennett's Advice

Ottawa, May 9 (CP)—A new suggestion for a tribute to the King on his jubilee year is before the people of the British Empire today. Prime Minister R. B. Bennett in a speech at London last night, broadcast throughout the Empire, suggested British subjects the world over dedicate themselves to the renunciation of war and the promotion of peace.

Canada, he said, were proud of their part in the last war but anxious that its lessons should not be forgotten. It had resulted in Canada becoming a sovereign nation under the British Crown but it had brought suffering and hardships, which were not yet ended.

The loyalty of Canadians to the British Crown was second to that of no group of British subjects, said Mr. Bennett. It was not based on boastful imperialism but on the firm belief that the British Crown stood for the reign of law, order and justice and a realization that British institutions and traditions had meant much to the development of Canada as a free nation.

With nations everywhere erecting barriers to trade Mr. Bennett thought the British nations should do all possible to develop interEmpire trade. The Empire trade and agreements had been of great assistance in aiding Canada over a crisis. They had turned Canadian trade in the direction of the United Kingdom and imports from the United Kingdom were now increasing. He was grateful for the way in which the British had carried out the agreements and believed any fair-minded person would say that Canada had also done its part.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

She climbed the tree. Quietly drew herself over the sill. The room was empty. Maddy had not returned. An ache rapidly increased. Joyce was grateful for this. Torture—to have to watch Maddy's every move . . . to listen to Maddy's accounts of social triumphs at Briarville.

While she stirred, Joyce could see her own dim reflection moving in the depths of the tarnished mirror across the room. White streak of face....shadowy eyes. . . . . Like a ghost of herself coming here to mock her. . . .

She was not crying now. In the dark her young face was very grim as she hung up the white dress. Those dreams of Norman she had sewn into this dress. Her lips curled in the cynical pity of herself.

She crept into bed, locked her arms beneath her head and lay, staring with dry eyes at the grey space of window.

Up there in the Cameron house they were still dancing. Norman—holding Natalie Cameron's slim figure. . . Had he thought of her —of Joyce waiting down here in the dark for him? Easy enough to dismiss the thought of her. . . Tomorrow he would be down here with some casual lie . . . and, in revenge, what could she do? Only give him up—and give up, as well, those silver nights of memory. Only draw back into the flat greyness of her own life—become silent and dreamy eyed like Mell—or cheap and tawdry like Maddy.

Joyce lay motionless, suffering bitterly, as only the very young can suffer. But she could not rebound as youth ordinarily rebounds. There were strange depths in Joyce's intense nature.

When Maddy crept in at the window, two hours later, she thought her comfortably asleep.

But Joyce was not asleep then. Nor later, when the sky was grey and a rooster's crow sounded, thin and quavering heralding in another dreary day.

STRUGGLING IN THE WEB

CHAPTER FIVE

By ten o'clock the heat lay like a stifling blanket over Riverton. The trees along the side of the Dominical House seemed painted against the white exhausted sky. Their shortening shadows were outlined in faint grey replicas printed on the thick crust of Maple Avenue.

The shades were drawn in the hotel and lobby silence reigned through the rambling house . . . although, Joyce found herself thinking, the place were deserted. As though they were all only brooding unhappy ghosts entertaining sociably about the scenes of their earthly vigils.

A very miserable ghost she was today—haunted by that memory of Natalie Cameron and Norman. Joyce was taciturn to Maddy, taking refuge from the other girl's prying questions in cold silence which gave no hint of the heartburnings within.

And all the time she made the beds, swept the halls, set the tables for lunch, Joyce was torturing herself— imaging Norman, perhaps at the very minute with Natalie on the Cameron porch. Norman—handsome, laughing face poised close to Natalie's pretty face . . Talking—and laughing easily over little, esoteric joke. Natalie, in a crisp silk sports dress—one silk stockinged leg keeping the swing in gentle motion. As if she were there Joyce could imagine the scene and she burned with sudden helpless anger.

Oh it was unfair! Unfair of life! That one girl should have everything —popularity—pretty clothes—a safe, delightful background. And then to steal Norman from her. . . Norman, the one precious thing in her life.

Her mood changed. After all, she thought, a hard cynicism seeping like a cruel over the hurt in her heart, why blame Norman? He had been attracted by the novelty of her. When that novelty was gone, why should he go down to the shabby Commercial House when he could be on the Crest talking to young men married in their own class. She was a fool to have thought he was in earnest. She was only an episode in Norman Wentworth's life. . . . . a girl to flirt with in the dark. . . .

Yet, in spite of this cynical reasoning, Joyce's heart leaped at the sound of the screen door of the front portico. Mr. Hazlett's footsteps coming to beg forgiveness? . . . She would absolve him that she was proud. . . . She wouldn't relent at once.

But it was only Luke Hansen, proprietor of Hansen's Main Street Garage down the block, who came in ostensibly for a package of cigarettes but really to see Joyce, for was a raggy young fellow with ginger colored hair and eyes, and it was an open secret in Riverton that he was "gone" on Ezra Slade's red haired daughter.

Joyce made an instinctive movement to leave and send Maddy in, but it was too late. Luke had seen her. She waited reluctantly behind the cigar case to wait on him.

"Didn't see you over to the Briarville dance last night with your cousin." The grimed colored eyes were drinking in the slender girl with appreciation.

"I was tired," Joyce answered shortly.

"Maybe you need a little fresh air." Luke persisted. "I was thinkin' ....why couldn't we go for a ride Sunday, you and me? I took in a swell car last week. . . ." Luke's voice refused trembling on her lips—"we could take your cousin an' Will McNally along if you'd rather. Anything you say, Joyce."

"Too hot. At night I'm not good for anything but sleep," the girl said briefly, packaging the cigarettes.

She slipped the cigarettes into a stamped envelope, put the change, money on the cash register, and pointedly turned to the door.

Joyce's heart was sore with the contrast Luke Hansen offered to Norman. This was what life held for her. . . Marriage with someone like Luke. A cheap new house low on the flats, south of Main Street. . . to sink like her aunt into the drudgery of housework and child bearing. . . or to stay single and grow old and sour and queer like Mell.

Like a fly caught in a spider's web, she thought—and hot penic fluttered in her heart. Struggling . . . trying to escape. . . .

Who said one's fate wasn't marked for one? Long before she and Natalie Cameron were born their fates had been settled. How different if Natalie were Ezra Slade's niece instead of the niece of Roger Cameron, the richest man in Riverton.

As though her chance thought had stirred him Roger Cameron stopped in at the hotel that afternoon.

More than once, when he was down at his paper mill, the wealthy man had dropped into the Commercial House for lunch. Gossip said he was glad of every opportunity to get away from the big house on The Crest, and from his sister-in-law.

Forceful enough in his own business, old Roger was a helpless victim where his sister-in-law was concerned. Cora Cameron had married Rodger Cameron's brother and ensconced herself as mistress of the big Cameron House on Valley View Street. When her husband died, leaving her with an infant girl, she stayed on managing the household. She recognized that the time was so far as social affairs went.

Roger secretly disliked her, yet he was ludicrously afraid of her. He was unequal to the task of putting her out of the house or even of leaving the house himself. He had his own suite of rooms in the big rambling brick place, and he mingled not at all in the social affairs of the town—that social life headed by Mrs. Cameron and Natalie.

Roger Cameron stopped in at the Commercial House today in that period between tea and dinner when all the world seemed gasping for breath. Maid Clara had already vanished into her stuffy, darkened bedroom for her "catnap." Maddy was upstairs shortening a dress in the vast that night. Mell had vanished on an errand unknown. Even Ezra had gone uptown on an errand.

Joyce alone was in the darkened office as Roger Cameron's tall, thin figure appeared in the screen door. He asked for lunch.

"Why, it's a long way past the regular hour, but I got stuck over in the mill. . . . I don't want to . . drive back uptown in this heat. I guess you will do."

While he took a small table near the window in the dusky dining room, Joyce scooted around in the kitchen.

A cream salad. An omelet. A glass of milk and a tumbler of ice. She sat in it contented loneliness in the big, shadowy room, watching Roger eat. None of Cora's incessant chatter . . . concerning Natalie's coquettish tricks to distract him. Just the quiet over there behind the cashier's desk. Joyce was a girl. Easy now to keep her mouth shut. . .

Roger Cameron was very fine in the wide, dusky space. Nothing to mock them as the Capricious Fate which was chuckling at their dinners. Nothing to tell them of the mad tragedy being played out there both in the time to come. Roger Cameron, the girl, Joyce, never thought of the deal he was putting over with Brooks County Pres Press.

Natalie sat on the high stool, chin propped on her hand, eyes dark with thought.

In the back of her mind a scheme was stirring.

When Roger Cameron shoved back his chair and came over to the desk, Joyce rose with a start.

"Mr. Cameron—" a defiant ring to her voice, "I want to ask a favor of you."

ROGER CAMERON'S ADVICE

CHAPTER SIX

The elderly man, Roger Cameron liked the pluck of the girl in surprise. His grunt might have been anything—that he resented the intrusion—or that he was willing to have the favor asked.

"Will you take me into the office of the paper mill, Mr. Cameron—give me a clerk's position?"

Then, quickly, before he could answer, "I know I haven't much to offer you, Mr. Cameron, but I'm willing. But I can learn. I could do anything. I'm quick at figures. I'd do a lot of the book-keeping. And I'd try so awfully hard."

A moment of silence while the man's bright grey eyes went over the vivid, appealing face as though he appraised her.

Then he shook his head. "No. And I'll tell you why, my girl—you're too pretty. If I took you into the office before a week was out some fool would kill his head over you. I'd be lucky if it was only one! Wasted time. Hard feelings. Mooning around. No, No!"

Joyce had dropped as he talked, and the violet eyes were dark with feeling. The smoldering rebellion he had seen in her face prompted him to ask curiously: "Why are you so set on getting into the office of the mill?"

"I'm not trained for office work," she answered honestly. "I've thought of every other place in town, I guess, but I know I couldn't fill a typist's position. Once I wanted to go to school and learn shorthand and typing—but somehow I didn't get there . . ."

The girl's voice trailed away. She would never forget the scene when she had asked her uncle to send her to the Riverton Business College. The clothes had rattled on the shelves with the explosion. Aunt Clara had cried. Maddy had crept upstairs in panic. Mell's hysterics had put a sudden and unexpected end to the scene. But Joyce had never asked again.

Now there was an edge of desperation in her voice.

"Oh, I've got to do something to get away from—this!" She flung her hand at the shadowy room. "I feel like a fly in a web! I want to rise —to be someone!"

Roger Cameron was not so much listening to Joyce as looking at her.

A glorious young fury! Eyes like diamonds flashing in her white face. . . . and that dark red mop of hair . . .

For a moment Roger Cameron stirred in Roger Cameron's dry old body. But a sour humor stirred as well. It would be as soothing as taking a nest of hornets into the office. Young Owners would go off his head about her. And even that old Mell Montgomery . . . . Nevertheless he felt a secret sympathy for the rebel. Unexpected, old Roger had been a rebel for years.

"I won't take you in the office," he said tartly. "But I'll give you some darned sound advice. You're young here. You're set in the town life. If you want to better yourself, leave this town. Go to the city."

"To the city?"

"Sure. You're a bright girl. And a pretty one. You'll get chances there you'll never get here. . . ."

"To the city. Joyce repeated. There was a dry little edge to her laugh. "Oh what!"

Roger Cameron shrugged and picked up his hat. After all it was none of his affair. By the time he had reached the porch he had put the whole subject from his mind —the deal with the Free Press was so much more engrossing.

Alone in the shaded dining room, Joyce folded her arms on the desk and laid her head on them. Sick disappointment in her heart and a wry sense of humor.

Go to the city, How? When she didn't have a cent of her own? Mrs did not believe in spoiling his sister with money. He'd give her a roof and board, hadn't he? He let her keep her salary like any boy for clothes with them. Well, then! And after all, what did a 20-year-old girl need money for? Maddy had a good home! Only put foolish ideas in girls' heads and the Lord knows they didn't need any-new ideas!

Like a fly in a web..... Joyce thought dully. A fly—struggling futilely in a spider web.....

The shrill ring of the telephone beat her jump painfully.

Norman's voice coming over the wire to drive the color from her face.

"Hello, . . Joyce?" Embarrassed constraint in his tone. "Say honey —I've been trying to get you all day and tell you why I didn't show up last night, I just got snowed under. You know—some people came in town—and I was going to call you. You're peeved at me but I couldn't help it——"

Joyce drew a long breath. Her lips twisted in a proud little smile.

"Oh — no. . . . I wasn't angry."

"Good little kid!" Relief and false heartiness in his voice. "I'll make up for it. Say, honey, I'm going to have you over to dinner that night, I've got to see you."

"Of course."

"Your voice sounds funny. You're angry with me, aren't you?"

Joyce had closed her eyes. The sharp edges of the transmitter was digging into her cheek.

"I can't talk," she lied. "There's someone here."

No question about the relief in his voice now. "Oh, that's all right. . . .I'll get down tomorrow, if I can. I'm tied up tonight with some friend of mother's friends, you know."

"Oh.....yes"

Joyce heard him hang up at the other end. She carefully replaced the receiver, then, with sudden murderous revulsion of feeling she struck the receiver to the floor and burst into tears.

It was the end. Norman was beginning to forget her. He had worked down last night because he was afraid to stay away. And he was already chafing to terminate their affair. She was losing him to Natalie Cameron. The spider was .....holding her fast.....

The girl sat up. Joyce stopped and carefully picked up the telephone. She went upstairs to her own bedroom and flung herself on the bed. Maddy was sitting in a low rocker by the window airing up the hem of a pink georgette dress. She stopped to bite a thread while she looked over at her cousin with bright curious eyes.

"What's wrong?"

"Just tired," came Joyce's muffled voice. She motionless had on the bed, as though utterly spent. One hand flung over her eyes as though she shielded them from the light. Maddy put down her bid her face that Maddy might not read it. In spite of the cheap pink underwear-stuff about the long slender body, something so lovely about the satin sheen of her skin and the mass of hair flung on the pillow like dark red silk, that Maddy felt a pang of jealousy.

"You're a fool, Joyce," she said scathingly. "You act as if you were the queen of England—turning down Luke Hansen right the way you did today! He told me the way you snubbed him. He doesn't know why, but I do! And let me tell you that the quicker you get Norman Weaver out of your mind the better off you'll be! He's only stringing you along. And you're going to find yourself out and injured some of these days. And I'm only telling you this for your own good!" Maddy's little green eyes snapped at that silent figure.

"You'll better get off your high horse and grab Luke before it's too late."

After a moment, which brought no response she continued, more kindly: "Oh, snap out of it, Joyce, and come to Briarville with Luke and Will and me."

When the other girl was still silent, Maddy shrugged her thin shoulders disgustedly. "Suit yourself. If you want to, I can't help it. If you're not going out will you fix my borrow your vanity case?"

"The silver vanity case....Norman had given it to her when he was home from college last Christmas. A silver vanity case—taken up on the Ridge on a night when the air was cold and heady as wine and the sky was encrusted with stars. Joyce remembered the delicious sense of being shut with Norman in the warm safety of the car—just the two of them, cozy and safe from the world..... Norman had drawn the case from his pocket while he held her against him with the other arm.

That night she had gone to sleep holding the small silver trinket so tightly to her that the edge pressed into her breast. Precious things he had given it..... a tangible sign that he loved her.....

Joyce's voice was thick now when she answered Maddy. "You can have it—for keeps, I don't want it now."

Red Light on Train But Not for Buck

Truro, N. S., May 9—(CP)—Sullivan may earn hero laddie's chuckles as they told how miners gathered at Sydney to welcome Tim Buck. Toronto Communist, cheered with unusual gusto when his train arrived.

The locomotive's fireman, with a blaze of red light, and this, the police thought, was in honor of Buck. Later, they learned the train's headlight had failed and flares were burned as a substitute.

AT THE BELLE
"Folies Bergere"
Comedy, Music, Thrills in Superb Setting

French as the Eiffel Tower....gay as the pop of a champagne cork and sparkling as the famous golden liquor itself—"Folies Bergere", Darryl F. Zanuck's new musical extravaganza for 20th Century Pictures came to the Belle last night and brought with it a brand-shaking new Maurice Chevalier.

As Chaillou, the straw-hatted singing star of the Folies Bergere revue, whose favorite fantasy sport is battling with his insanely jealous little dancing partner-sweetheart, Mimi, Chevalier is the charming chap we all know. But as the suave, mustached gentleman Baron Casaini, who juggles his bank funds and is forced to make a secret flight to London, he is given a big loan to cover his deficit, we have an entirely new and interesting characterization which proves that Maurice is an actor as well as an entertainer.

The fun begins when Chartier, whose clever impersonation of the Baron mightily thrills Folies Bergere audiences, is called to double for the flown Baron in life as well.

The Baron's beautiful but neglected wife finds the situation not altogether disagreeable and hilarious involvements ensue. A climax is reached when the Baron returns unexpectedly and, hearing of his wife's flirtation, tests her by turning the tables and pretending to be Chartier. The charming lady is capable of errors reaches an unexpected and delightfully happy denouement.

Lovely Merle Oberon makes her Hollywood debut, looking lovelier than ever, as the seductive Baroness, and Ann Sothern sings and dances effectively as Mimi, the waiting Minni. The supporting cast is uniformly excellent.

You'll hum and whistle "I Was Lucky", "Rhythm of the Rain", "You Took the Words Right Out of My Mouth", "Singing a Happy Song," and "Don't Let It Happen" for some time to come, and you'll remember these gorgeous Folies Bergere girls and these gorgeous musical numbers staged by Dave Gould of "Flying Down to Rio" celestial" fame, longer than that.

All in all this Folies Bergere is an enchanting musical which promises you an entertainment-packed evening in the Belle Theatre.

"Under Pressure" Unique

AT THE CAPITOL
Claude Rains in "The Invisible Man") Returns in "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head"

A terrific motion picture drama Many men have risen to prominence and fortune on the brains of others. This fact is illustrated in "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," the drama which comes to the Capitol Theatre Today with Claude Rains, Constance Bennett, Lionel Atwill in the featured roles.

Henri Dumont, a munitions magnate to an important position in his native France on the shoulders of Paul Verin, who ghost-writes for the former's "Pacific Journal" a long series of terse, forceful articles signed with names of the publication's readers. A popular idol in the country through Verin's efforts, but eventually, to increase his political influence, Dumont begins to hate and secretly becomes an ally of the very munitions manufacturers he has been fighting, lending his great influence to the fomenting of the World War.

Later, he does not hesitate to engineer the murder of one of the editions of the writer's wife, enabled by his power to keep Paul Verin in the trenches as a soldier, with leave to visit his home in Paris constantly forbidden him. There, however, the writer-soldier accomplishes a daring escape, while the French capital, with all its lights extinguished, awaits the night of total darkness, shudders under the horror of an enemy air raid. This climax is one of the most literally hair-raising in its powerful drama.

Claude Rains, first acclaimed His Head" was directed by Edward Luddy, and the cast supporting Rains, than ever, as the seductive Baroness, and Ann Sothern sings and dances effectively as Mimi. The supporting cast is uniformly excellent.

You'll hum and whistle "I Was Lucky", "Rhythm of the Rain", "You Took the Words Right Out of My Mouth", "Singing a Happy Song," and "Don't Let It Happen" for some time to come, and you'll remember these gorgeous Folies Bergere girls and these gorgeous musical numbers staged by Dave Gould of "Flying Down to Rio" celestial" fame, longer than that.

INSPECTOR CLARKE IS PAID HONOR

today have 205 adopted a pastime of their elders, collecting birds' eggs and this is due to the introduction of nature study, giving children an entirely different interest in bird life.

If the facts concerning bird food and habits were known the present attitude regarding many of these birds would change. One can not say that birds are injurious or beneficial until all the evidence for and against them is weighed. Mr. Clarke showed that by analysis of the stomachs of birds it was learned the nature of their food and gave in detail the results of such study which proved that many birds considered injurious actually brought their food habits are the farmers' friends. The hawk family was discussed and also how hawks, sparrow hawks were described as beneficial and even the crow was declared much maligned. Mr. Clarke also gave the findings concerning the blue jays, robins and many other birds commonly termed harmful and said each individual farmer would have to decide 'mid what class the birds in his vicinity fall.

Study of Birds Urged

To those who would begin the study of birds, Mr. Clarke had much practical advice. He suggested that the two hour walk be thoroughly studied during a summer. The best inspection. That no unnecessary movements were required and one must not be discouraged by the first unsuccessful walk. The extent of the field to be covered nor by the abundance of the birds. Many discursive observations faithfully recorded were of much approach to the birds were advocated.

A particularly absorbing phase of bird life was migration. It is not no longer a mystery where birds spend the winter. Their winter haunts, their very flight is known. Arrival and return at first by hunger, their migration is now instinctive and they begin their flights long before food shortage becomes acute.

Mr. George F. Stewart expressed the appreciation of those present to Mr. Clarke's illuminating address, for the information and inspiration it had brought to his hearers.

Quinte Artist's Work Presented

At this point, as a complete surprise to Mr. Clarke, the presentation of a gift was made him. Miss C. Fox, directress of professional training, in a brief address, referred to the sympathy and understanding extended by Mr. Clarke to the teachers during his years as district inspector. That he will long remember his associations with them they were presenting him with a scene of the Bay of Quinte, by Manly Macdonald, R.C.A. Miss Desmarais made the presentation and at the same time a tiny girl presented Mrs. Clarke with roses.

Mr. Clarke thanked the teachers for their kindness saying that he would never forget his associations with the school. He referred to the staff as a wonderful group of teachers. Mrs. Clarke charmingly thanked the association for her beautiful bouquet.

Rhythm Work

The meeting then adjourned to the Assembly Hall for a very interesting program. A new development in rhythm band work, accompanying a chorus, was introduced by Mr. Gordon with violin accompaniment by Mr. M. Blanchard and Mr. Gordon presiding at the organ, the band played perfectly for "Land of Hope and Glory" played by the Ladies' Chorus. The precision of the student musicians and the spirit and harmony made it difficult to realize that they did not hear a sound.

A boys' physical culture class under the direction of Mr. Cunningham gave an exhibition of tumbling acts that won instant admiration. Eighteen boys took part, from juniors to seniors, and with exact and perfect timing they gave series of pyramids, singles and doubles acts. To add variety a number of expected trick acts" caught the audience unawares and caused much merriment.

Jubilee Tableau

As a climax to the entertainment a Jubilee tableau was staged, the children in beautiful costumes presenting a scene in which the children paid tribute before the thrones of the King and Queen. This colorful and splendidly presented tableau made a charming picture. At the close of the program refreshments were served the guests Miss C. Ford presiding at the handsomely appointed tea table.

On exhibition last evening was a wedding cake made and artistically decorating by one of the students of the school who is taking the course in baking. This handsome cake was the crowning of all eyes and all who saw it felt envious of the bride whose table it would grace.

STIRLING LEGION VISITS MARMORA

Stirling—The interesting sermon delivered by Rev. J. A. Kofford on Sunday evening answered the question—"How may we increase our knowledge of God".

Taking his text from the tenth verse of the 46th Psalm—"Be Still and know that I am God". "Mr. Kofford said, "We are as spoiled children, in a great many ways. We attend church for worship but in the manner that pleases us, but if we are called upon to do as He pleases we simply refuse. In this matter, rather than make any personal sacrifice. This all happens be cause of our meagre knowledge of God, which we seem not over anxious to increase. If we would really know God better there are three things we must first accomplish before that knowledge is bestowed upon us, Quietness is the first. "Be still and know that I am God". Down through the years, those who walked close with God,—Joseph, Moses, Daniel, and even Christ himself were aside from the busy routine of life for a quiet moment alone with Him. The quietness of Heaven is a more powerful than the blare of trumpets, and much noise making which lacks depth. The next test movement in Christendom demands these hallowed moments of meditation with God.We would go through life with a different attitude if more time was spent and study our lives. Quietness is essential to communion. Prayer demands it. The guiding hand of any big business concern is in the quietness of the office behind a barrage of secretaries. What great men have been lost to succeeding generations because they failed to accept medical advice—to relax, to rest and be quiet. Great musicians tell us that the string sof their priceless instruments must be relaxed or the tone becomes harsh. Life is just like that. We must relax, and spend alone with God before we begin the days routine would have an influence in the other hours, or on the street because of our increased knowledge. The best comes from quietness.

Then too there must be a willingness to know God. What does Sunday worship mean to us Do we attend church with a willing heart to worship God or is it just the thing to do because we are supposed to? Do we go because it appears to be the proper thing? Are we willingly receiving our knowledge of God Paul sacrificed all—wealth, position and even life that he might know Him. That sacrifice was necessary. Are we as individuals willing to be misunderstood by our loved ones—ready to accept apparent defeat in the eyes of the world for a greater knowledge of God? If all people were ready to make such a sacrifice the apparent defeat would vanish, and God's blessings for mankind increase.

This was truly an inspiring message in which Mr. Kofford brought before his listeners the shortcomings of present civilization in regard to their knowledge of God.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

WALL STREET

New York, May 9—(AP)—The rails, specialties and scattered industrial leaders ahead briskly in today's stock market.

Before midsession of the advance the list absorbed considerable profit taking. Gains up 1 to around 3 points included Santa Fe, Union Pacific, N. Y. Central, Delaware and Hudson, Chesapeake, International Cement, Bethlehem Steel common and preferred, Columbia Pictures, American Telephone and Radio preferred "B". A gain of 6 points was registered by American sugar preferred and Inland Steel common up more than 5.

The oils and motors were fractionally higher, but the metals were hesitant and most of the utilities narrow. The late tone was firm. Transfers approximated 1,700,000 shares.

Toronto Industrial Stocks

Toronto, May 9—(CP)— Holding the ground won in the general advance and continuing to trade in heavy volume, the oils still claimed the main interest in the industrial section of the Toronto Exchange today. The leaders generally developed action of importance in the afternoon to check firm to strong rallies over the board gains and losses divided about equally. Volume in the aggregate was off 7,000 shares on Wednesday.

The oils steamed up from the opening, hitting new highs but profit taking on a substantial scale shaded the day's top in the early afternoon. The recent active market for Imperial Oil and International Petroleum will distribute some of its reserves as the extra dividend. The company's dividend meeting will be held tomorrow and rumors have suggested various payments ranging from 50 cents to $3 as the extra.

The general market tone was strong. Metals held steady, Ford A, Brazilian and Coty A continued in demand and the utilities somewhat firmer.

TORONTO MINING SHARES

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—The Toronto Mining market broadened out today to give the people a chance in the background, a play, including the oils and the base metals. The oils had their biggest day in many months and the whole group closed higher while base metals and silver bucked the drop in metal to close on the up side. Gold shares were irregular at the close.

All departments of the mining list firmed today after a cheerful opening, the oils joining the silvers in a definite display. Imperial and Royalite advanced 1.50 to 24.75 and gains of a few cents were boosted for the other oils, Anglo, Mid Oil Selections and Home Oil.

Despite lower bar silver prices, higher quotations were posted for Eldorado, Bear, Consolidated and the penny silvers and in the base metals trading was active in Hudson Bay, Mining Corporation, Noranda and Falconbridge with Hudson Bay and Mining Corp. both at the afternoon.

Strong spots in the golds were Kirkland Lake, Dome, Hughes and Hollinger and Bradian advanced 30 cents to 82. A display of weakness was given by Macassa which backed up to 3.07 and later partly recovered.

NOMINATED AS MODERATOR

Brockville, Ont., May 9—(CP)— Meeting at Kemptville, Brockville Presbytery at its Spring Presbyterian Church nominated Rev. Dr. Donald Macodrum, Minister of the first Presbyterian Church, Brockville, as moderator of the Synod of Montreal and Ottawa.

Britain Preparing to Increase Air Fleet

London, May 9—(AP)—The Air Ministry today cautioned aircraft and engine manufacturers against accepting foreign orders and requested them to accelerate production in preparation for expansion of the Royal Air Force.

Britain's new action program, fulfilling the government's declared intention of keeping pace with Germany in the air, will be revealed May 22.

Doubling of the Home Air defence force within two years was understood to be the government's goal but this was said to depend on the ability of manufacturers to fill orders. At the same time one aircraft firm said the letter from the Air Ministry contained "a statement to the effect that we are forbidden to execute orders without first consulting the Air Ministry".

Jubilee Day Observance Held by Picton Community

Picton—On Friday evening, May 3rd, the Teachers' Institute of P. E. County entertained Dr. Bannister, Principal of Westerner Normal School, at a delightful banquet in Mr. Van Cott's room of Picton Public School.

Forty guests were present including the members of Mrs. Allen Beacher's township council and the student teacher visiting the county during the past week.

Four long tables were attractively done in pastel yellow and green and centred with daffodils and rose tulips. At the head table were seated Mr. Bruce Yarwood President of the Teachers' Institute, the guest of honor, Dr. Bannister, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Struthers and Mr. and Mrs. Van Cott.

Following a sumptuous repast, provided and served by the lady teachers of the P. P. schools, Dr. Struthers explained the purpose of the gathering, which was a happy acquaintance with an old friend, Dr. Bannister, now in charge of teachers who had passed through Peterboro Normal School, and known to others as a delightful guest speaker at our Teachers' Conventions. Dr. Bannister was then welcomed Dr. Bannister.

Rising to his feet, Dr. Bannister expressed his enthusiasm at the results of the experiment, of having student teachers, not only in practical teaching, in the rural schools, but also, in conducting the Public read several poems he had written while living for three or four years in the North Bay district.

Mr. Albert Reid of Bowerman's school moved a vote of thanks to those responsible for the banquet, which was seconded by Miss Wooldridge, a student teacher, Mr. Wells of Cherry Valley moved a vote of thanks to the convenor of the affair, which was second by Miss Hermance Cronk. The singing of the National Anthem brought a pleasant evening to a close.

Miss Clara Hill was convenor of the committee in charge of the arrangements. The beautiful black board decorations were the work of Miss Marjory Vance, art supervisor, while Miss Waring and Miss McAlpine were in charge of table decorations.

Jubilee Celebration

The Jubilee celebration in Picton took the form of a great parade, a mile long, with 1600 people marching, that gathered at the Armouries at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon, May 6th. Forming part of the parade were the Wooler; County Council of Prince Edward; members of Legislature; Picton Collegiate Cadet Band; Cadets; Collegiate pupils; Public School children; Girl Guides; Cubs; Boy Scouts; Regimental Band under S. G. Lockyer; P. E. and Hasting Regiment; Ex-service men; the Rebekahs; the Orange Lodge; the Ladies' Orange Lodge.

Sergeant Major James Mercer acted as Marshal, and the parade passed down Main St. and up the leading residential streets to the Collegiate Campus. Here a great crowd of people faced a large platform on which were seated ranged semi-circle the regiment, the town fathers, the clergy, the I.O.D.E., the Women's Institute, and the Nurses and School Club. Major W. A. Jones acted as chairman. "God Save the King" was first sung by the assemblage.

Major Jones

Major Jones then gave the highlights of the reign of King George and Queen Mary, beginning with his coronation on May 9th, 1910, when he was proclaimed King, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India. He spoke o fthe anxiety early in his reign—the world war—something no lesser personality could scarcely have conceived. Known as the most travelled monarch, his favor now known, the King is worthy of our trust and loyalty. The Prince consort, and the Victoria Fund in Canada, and the Jubilee Trust Fund in England, to help the youth of the Nation. He announced that the Tag Day in Picton, on Saturday, May 4th, had netted $300.00 for the Cancer Fund. The speaker eulogized Queen Mary and the splendid manner in which she had conducted herself.

The school children under the direction of Mr. Walden, sang "The Maple Leaf".

Judge R. H. McLean delivered a very inspiring address—"500 Million citizens of the British Empire are today gathered by and reverent gratitude to Providence, for preserving our gracious King and Queen, to rule over us for the twenty-five years", said the speaker. "Ambitions of proud lealty to day are cheerful virtues of our sovereigns, who rule over this great mas of diverse nations and tongues.

Queen Victoria was called "Victoria the Good" because during the more than sixty years of her reign she combined purity of purpose, with an ardent love for all her people. She took a great interest in the upbringing of her family and asked her subjects to do the same. King Edward was called "Edward the Peacemaker", because although he didn't come to the throne as young as Queen Victoria or live as long he had had much experience under his mother, and was the most adroit and wise statesman in all Europe. He helped greatly to hold nations at peace during his reign.

The judge prophesied that after death King George would be known as "George the Beloved". He and Queen Mary succeeded the throne when new ideas were replacing old ones, when old feelings of race were developing, when there were threats of rebellion, and hatred on the continent of Europe. But the conflict from 1914 to 1918 saw the dissatisfied and conquered Boers, Egypt and India forget their differences and join in the defence of the British flag. The north and south of Ireland joined in too, and we won the war.

Other troubles followed—a terrible economic crisis—the murdering of the Czar and his family—the toppling of many thrones. But time has proved that King George and Queen Mary are more firmly placed than ever before in the hearts of their people. Our King can stroll out anywhere without any police or detective, guard him. His children, led by the good Prince of Wales, have behaved as all subjects might well imitate. They were in the firing line, and are real blooded Britishers. Queen Mary is beloved because "Her heart was pure, her life serene", etc.

The school children then sang "O Canada" after which the presentation of Jubilee medals took place.

To Miss V. Carson Supt. P. E. C. Hospital—Warden S. Blakely.

To Lt. Col. A. E. Adams; Lt. Col. A. V. Yates; Lt. Col. R. H. McLean; Major Shannon Young; Maj. H. Cruman; Capt. B. Sutcliffe; Bandmaster Ed Lockyer; C. S. M. Burkitt of Meaford. These were presented by Col. A. E. Bywater, V.D.

Certificates were presented to—Chris. Lockyer; Creighton Lockyer; Ted Read; Blake Bransmber; Clifford Seeley; Jim Hedges; Alfred Wright; Harry Rose; Leslie Kerr. These were presented by Col. A. V. Yates, M.C., V.D.

The "Pen de Jole" was performed by a detachment of Hastings and P. E. Regiment, closing the service. The Rog of march was reformed, and marched to the armories where it is disbanded.

The school children were then treated to a free show "Dishes in Toyland" by Mr. Geo. Cook at the Regent Theatre.

A tag stock on Monday evening huge beacon fires were kindled at Cherry Valley, Green Point, Redcastville and Glenora and short ceremonies held at each fire. At Cherry Valley 30 cedar trees made the huge blaze which was seen for miles around.

New York Giants Wing Way As Second String Hurlers Make Good for Bill Terry

Defeat Cubs in Twin Bill To Increase Lead

DODGERS HOLD ON

White Sox Maintain Their Unbeaten Record at Home

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

One of the few surprises connected with the Giants' early rise to the top of the National League standing is that apparently no one expected them to do anything else but climb. Admitted on all sides to be the best balanced club in the senior circuit and to have the best three-man pitching staff, the Giants have begun to look tougher than ever now that their second string soundmasters have begun to come through.

Tackling the first doubleheader of the 1935 season yesterday, the Giants not only got some great pitching from Roy Parmelee, who hasn't lost to Chicago in two years, but the "scrubs" right hander, Glenn Castleman, who spent most of last season with Montreal, did almost as well. As a result the Giants won two games, 5 and 6-2, and the Cubs down into third place and held a two-game margin over Brooklyn.

Yields Three Hits

Parmelee limited only three hits, but a shutout through Kiki Cuyler's homer and handed Lon Warneke the first defeat of the season as Joe Moore provided the winning margin in the third with his first homer of the season. Castleman came through with a pinch single and had Carl Reid his eighth circuit blow of the year with two aboard to start the Giants off to a front.

The Dodgers were practically shoved into second place, when they took a 13-inning 3-2 decision from the Cardinals after Van Mungo had been forced in. Paul Dean stayed a big "show-up" after walking Danny Taylor in the third and blew himself out of the game in the fourth. Ed Heusser forced in Sally Stark. Ed Heusser forced in another and finally Dan Taylor and Ben Cantwell nicked Bill Hallahan for a pair of doubles and the odd run. Van Mungo went the full route, giving nine hits and yanning 11.

Losers in the second division the Reds and Phillies divided a double-header, Cincinnati's Jim Ripple came in 15-4 as Ernie Lombardi equalled a major league mark by three consecutive doubles. He got them off four different pitchers on successive times at bat.

Phillies Rally

The Phils rallied to take the afterpiece 5-4. The Braves broke a hitting drought by shelling out a 12-3 decision at Pittsburgh.

Maintaining their unbeaten record in the home park, the White Sox came from behind to beat the Yankees 7-4 after and Sam Gronet had spotted the enemy three early homers by Selkirk. Lazzeri and Dickey. It was Chicago's 10th straight triumph at home and the home record of not allowing a rival pitcher to finish a game on their grounds continued as Johnny Broaca got out in the fourth.

Monte Pearson pitched the second-place Indians to a 2-0 victory over the Red Sox and Lefty Grove, granting only seven hits, the champion Tigers also were limited to four blows but with nine walks they brushed the Athletics hard before a ninth inning rally gave Philadelphia a 7-6 decision. Washington and St. Louis slugged it out all the way, the Senators finally winning 10-9 when benched hits proved more effective than Sam Weiz's two circuit swats.

JUNIE BARNES AND ROY DAVIS WIN FOR LEAFS

Double Win Puts Toronto in Second Place in Loop

BEARS SPLIT

Chad Kinsey of Montreal Loses Tough One to Syracuse

With the exception of Newark Bears maintaining their hold on first place, the upper half of the International League standing was sharply revised today.

A doubleheader triumph pulled off by Toronto Leafs at the expense of the lowly Albany Senators landed the Canadians in second place. Rochester defeated Baltimore to take third place while Syracuse at Ohlen's took a fall out of Montreal Royals and dropped the Quebecers from second to the bottom of the first division.

The Leafs won the first game 6-1 putting it on ice with a five run rally in the fourth inning, added and abetted no little by Tom Oliver's homer with the bases loaded. Junie Barnes limited the Senators to five hits, while, the Leafs tapped the offerings of Ray Prim for seven safeties.

Pinch-hitter Peacock accounted for the second game. He singled after Sheivin had doubled and Blandier walked in the 11th inning, giving the nightcap to the Leafs by a score of three to two.

Davies Makes Good

Roy Davis, recently optioned to Toronto by Cincinnati Reds, received credit for the victory although "Steamer" Lucas pitched the final game after Davis had been removed for a pinch hitter.

The Bears shared a twin-bill program with Buffalo Bisons, losing the first game 6-3 and taking the second, 3-0. A seven-hit pitching performance by Bill Harris and Carnegie's triple with two on in the seventh gave Buffalo the first game while Young Cecil Whittier limited them to six hits in the nightcap to register a shutout for the Bears.

Syracuse Chief's 4-1 triumph over Montreal Royals was a heart-breaker for big Chad Kinsey. He limited the Chiefs to five hits in losing his first game after three victories this season. Bobby Coombs, on the mound for Syracuse, allowed seven blows but had perfect control. He did not issue a single pass.

Hunter Mills' single in the eighth scored Jake Flowers to give Rochester a 4-3 victory over Baltimore Orioles.

KIWANIS WRESTLING

One of the many holds expected to be used by Walter Parnell in his bout with Johnnie Gyroffy at the Arena on Friday night. Three all-star bouts are on the card including the feature attraction between Parnell and Gyroffy. Jack Pearl meets "Man Mountain" Jones, weight 271 pounds, the largest wrestler ever to appear in a local ring. The opening bout promises to be fast when Tom George and Frank Slevik clash. Three good bouts at popular prices.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

The College Hill Cubs tumbled from their lofty perch as leaders of the Wall Street softball league, when they took a 16 to 4 walloping at the hands of the Asjmas squad last evening. Manager Gerald Bazinet used all of his available moundsmen to endeavour stemming the barrage of hits ringing from the bats of the Asjmaas, but without success. The winners elevated their standing to the leadership of the league, not having lost a game thus far. They will be back at it again tonight.

While on the subject of softball it might be well to state that the Belleville and District Softball schedule has been drafted and the team managers will be asked to be present, when the numerous dates are allotted. The league is composed of six teams—Tweed, Redmen, R.E.A.C., Alemite, College Hill Cubs and S.E.A.C. They adopted the double schedule idea, which gives the league sixty games and only by playing two or three games per night can they possibly hope to terminate their schedule in time to enter the O.A.S.A. play-downs. Incidentally the local softballers hope to receive new heavy woollen suits to be included in their final play-off whether they would allow two or three in this series.

Another local softball loop is slated to get under way early next week when the Mercantile loop, a league organized among the stores and places of business for recreation for their employees last season. Included in this set-up last summer were Loblaws, A. & P., Swifts, Ontario Intelligencer and others. The league secretary expects to call meeting at the Recreation on Monday night, all interested are invited.

Bill Fry, guiding light and support of the local lacrosse team, announced today that the "boys" boys were practicing semi-weekly over at the Ontario Flats. Incidentally the "boys" boys intend opening the current season on May 24th with a game at the Belleville Arena. Fry, who is the last surviving "Oracle", one of the better senior teams from Toronto. Incidentally, President Fred Waghorne, of the O.A.L.A. was in Peterboro earlier this week and had a lengthy powwow with the Liftlock City lacrosse moguls. It is understood President Waghorne distinctly told the Liftlock City lacrosse fans that an all-star team would not be tolerated. In the meantime the local "boys" should be preparing for better times, they hope.

Dr. Charles "Doc" Galway, well known local athlete, was presented with a Kenmore Medal at Queen's University on Wednesday. Dr. Galway at the risk of his life saved a man from drowning in the Cassell River when the unfortunate man's canoe upset in 1934. Dr. Galway graduated from Queen's University in 1933 and is an old Belleville boy. He was well known as a football, hockey and trackman in the athletic world. Incidentally Dr. Galway was recently married and flew by plane from Northern Manitoba to Kenora for his wedding. The many friends of Dr. "Doc" Galway in Belleville, congratulate him upon his marriage and also upon the honor bestowed upon his receiving of such a distinguished award.

Something new, something different is being introduced at the College Hall gymnasium tomorrow night, when Miss Allison's physical culture class will give a demonstration of their prowess. Miss Allison, physical instructress at the B.C.I. & V.S., is a graduate of Toronto and has charge of feminine gymnastics and thus followed the announcement of the proposed demonstration.

May 18th seems to be "red letter day" in the local sport world, with the College Hall holding its annual field day while in the evening Promoter Glen Allen is returning to the wars to present his premiere attraction of the year. Matchmaker Allen, after certain efforts, managed to sign "Flash" Ritton of Ottawa, the Canadian Bantam and "Gowanlea" Wheeler in the Belleville Arena. This bout and the Ottawa Valley featherweight champion, scheduled to Belleville highly recommended. Ritton and Wheeler will be presented as the main bout attraction while the other Ottawa Valley scrappers will accompany Ritton and meet local boys on one of the finest boxing cards ever to be presented in Belleville.

With the exception of stating that both Walter Parnell and Johnnie Gyroffy are keenly anxious to meet Al Dunlop there is little to add regarding Friday night's all-star wrestling main bout, as has been previously announced the winner of this main bout has been promised a return bout with Badman Al Dunlop. The largest grappler ever to appear in a local ring will tackle Jack Pearl in the person of Man Mountain Jones of California. It seems Jones tips the beam at the scales at the 271 pound mark, he usually being weighed by the city or public scales, just as a precautionary procedure. Last Friday night young Frank Slevik made a good impression with the fans but has drawn tougher opposition on Friday night in Tom George the Mel of the Orient. Remember—Friday night is wrestling night at the Arena".

After waiting since April 26th, all major league baseball has managed to get into action at one time yesterday. Really quite an accomplishment don't yer think.

The annual Bird-Box competition sponsored by Tweed Horticultural Society was held at the Consolidated School on Friday afternoon. For some weeks the boys had been working away, constructing nesting boxes for wrens, martins and tree-swallow or blue birds. These boxes were judged on May 3rd by the Rev. R. R. Nicholson and Dr. W. A. Paul, President and Vice President of the local Society.

Some of the boxes were artistically made and covered with bark, others were made of pieces of slabs with the bark still on them, and were very attractive. A number of boys used dressed lumber in the construction of their boxes, particularly in the case of boxes for the purple martin.

The judges commended favorably on the excellence of the work which was a decided improvement over some of last year's efforts, and the number of boxes exhibited was not as great as in 1934, but the quality and style was improved.

The prizes were awarded as follows:

(a) Wren Box (open to fourth classes)—Ronald Bateman, Bill McCrea, Robert Tufts, Gerald Austin.

Blue Bird or Tree Swallow (open to Fourth Classes)—William McCrea; Bill Wilkinson.

Martin Box (open to Fourth Class) —Fred Sherwin; Harold Long; Harry McCaw.

Wren Box (open to classes below Fourth) (a) Rustic—Douglas Connor; Nest Reynolds; Donald Valentine; Elmer Holmes.

(b) Made of dressed lumber—Ross Grier; Howard Long; Jack McCutcheon; Edwin Badgley.

Blue Bird or Tree Swallow—Vincent Frost; Douglas Connor.

Martin Box—Jack Attenborough; Grant Baker.

In the evening the parents and friends of the youthful exhibitors gathered at the school to hear the lecture given by Rev. R. R. Nicholson. Before this was done, the judges explained how the prizes had been awarded and explained some errors in construction which will be avoided and corrected in the future.

The bird lecture was greatly enjoyed by everyone. Coloured slides were shown of a number of birds native to Hastings County. Interesting facts were given of the habits, Mr. Nicholson's love for and study of birds, and his timely and instructive lecture will undoubtedly bear fruit among the younger generation who will learn to love and protect their feathered friends.

The following delegates from the W. A. of Trinity Anglican Church attended the W. A. Convention in Kingston last week: Mrs. W. G. Hope Stevenson, Mrs. Swayne, Mrs. A. Baker (delegate), Mrs. A. Wallace, Miss N. McDonald and Mrs. Geo. Clark.

On Tuesday the Junior classes listened in, on Thursday a lesson suitable for Senior classes was broadcast. For some years now the pupils have taught in Tweed Consolidated School. Two-part songs are taught from the staff. The Senior pupils were easily able to follow and take part in the lesson as taught by Miss Emily Tedd, learning to sing the soprano and alto parts of the "Swing Song" which broadcast was decidedly successful.

Mrs. W. A. Beatty was elected as President of the Ladies' Bowling Club. Other officers elected at a recent meeting are: 2nd Vice Pres., Mrs. W. J. McCutcheon; Sec.-Treas., Miss A. Cournoyer; Convener of Games committee, Mrs. Geo. Clark; Mrs. Wm Preston to be elected at a later date.

A special Thanksgiving Service was held on Sunday, May 5th, in Tweed United Church at 11 a.m., when a large congregation gathered to render thanks to Almighty God for the twenty-five years' reign of His Gracious Majesty King George V. The order of service was prepared by the committee on Church Worship and Ritual and issued by authority of the General Council of the United Church of Canada. The choir sang Elgin's Recessional, composed in 1897, on the occasion of Queen Victoria's Sixtieth Anniversary. Mrs. Harry Orire sang the solo.

The theme of the service of the pastor Rev. R. R. Nicholson, was "A Jubilee Hymn" composed especially for the occasion by Mr. George Allan Kingston, of Toronto, brother of Mr. John W. Kingston of Tweed. It may be sung to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Minister in his excellent address which was based on the text chosen from St. Matthew chapter 20 verses 26 and 27 "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister, and whoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant" enumerated the many and excellent qualities which our beloved Sovereign possesses, qualities which have endeared him to all his subjects, so that the British throne has never been stronger than today. The pastor quoted General Smuts' description of the British Empire, throughout the whole of the vast commonwealth of Nations."

Daily Short Story

FAR PASTURES

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Sandy Richard Palmer leaned back in the swivel chair. He placed his feet on the bear desk, shoved his hat over his left eye and addressed Fern Bennett, the boss's secretary.

"That's all we are—bugs! Little, scurrying, unattractive bugs. There is no aesthetic balance in our lives. We scurry to work in the morning, we grab a sandwich for lunch and when the Liberty Bell rings at night, we scramble home and to bed, so that we might report for work bright and early the next morning. Faugh! I'm fed up."

Fern, unaccepting with unaffected attempts to improve upon the already beautiful face an indulgent God had provided her, gave her tiny, retrousse nose a final pat with powder puff, turned and said:

"Now stop pouting, Henry Richard, and put on another record. Your precious 'Liberty Bell' has sung and we are free to go and have our supper. With a dish of hot-roast beef, sprouts and pie and coffee inside you, I'll bet you won't pour everlasting woes. Come on, and help me look up—"

"Oh, all right, all right, Sunshine, I'm coming." Henry grinned, as he took her arm and guided her into the maelstrom of subway-bound humanity. Finally they came abroad at the small, inexpensive restaurant where they invariably ate dinner. They were as good as engaged, everybody said; dining at 'Ye Olde Town Shoppe' was one of the oldest and "as-good-as-engaged" couples fall into.

Serious Thinking

Soon they were seated in their favorite hideaway corner, the waiter had taken their order and they were free to relax. There was an unwonted serious look upon Fern's face as she said:

"Do you, Fern, I've been doing a lot of serious thinking lately. To say that I am dissatisfied and dissatisfied would be putting it mildly. Now look, eight years ago I was in art school, growing hard, winning competitions and showing plenty of promise. The fellows I studied with are now growing famous just as fast as they can squeeze the paint out of the tubes. And here I am, a prosaic salesman of artist's materials."

"Yes, my goodness, Henry what is it? You sound so glum. You are not just a salesman; you're a good salesman and you earn far from a prosaic salary. Besides, you have loads of the old mayble. Your pastures are always greened."

"Yes, I cinnose so, but you know what, Fern? One of these days when you come in here you won't find me waiting at our little table. I'm gonna chuck up everything and catch a train for Cave Cod, Chichester or Provincetown; any one of those pre cipitous, I'll ferret all my razors—bullies and paint, just paint. Who knows, maybe I am an embryo Raphael or Leonardo da Vinci?"

Henry spoke half-testingly in tantalizing tone, but yet there was a serious undertone in his voice that vaguely worried Fern. As a matter of fact, she knew that Henry had been advised by his art teachers to learn a trade. Perhaps they had not put it so crudely, but that nevertheless, was the essence of their advice. They had told him his work would never be better than second-rate: that he had not that divine spark of genius or even that zest that differentiated the work of the old masters.

But Fern, that wise young person, also was aware of the vagaries of the artistic mind. She knew that he was capable of just such an escapade—and she was worried.

"Here, here, don't be moody on us, Fern. You can't have that. Don't take me too seriously." Henry grinned.

Misgivings

The next night Fern entered the little "Shoppe" with strange misgivings in her heart. Henry was not waiting for her and after a while, she ordered her supper and swallowed it with very little appetite. The next night it was the same and when she had word from him on the third day, she approached her employer with a great deal of trepidation.

"Mr. Trenbath—" she began falteringly.

"Oh, Miss Bennett," he interrupted, "where is Mr. Palmer? We have no record from him for the last two or three days. Has he reported sick, or something?"

"Why—why—" poor Fern stammered. "I—I believe so" and then slumped into a faint.

Mr. Trenbath, man-like, Mr. Trenbath hopped on one foot and then on the other, and finally called for help. When she had recovered, Fern explained, "I am terribly sorry, Mr. Trenbath, I am sure, but Henry was very well lately. But I'll be quite all right now."

"Are you sure you don't want to take the rest of the day off?"

"Quite sure, thank you," Fern replied.

At quitting time she delicately entered the restaurant and from force of habit sought her table. At the sight of Henry sitting there, she stopped short in amazement.

"Why he is singin'," Henry said, quite unconcernedly. "He's a teeny-feenie bit late." Taking her cue from him, she replied, stifling the many questions that were in her mind, "I was delayed but you, too, are late," and sat down.

"Sort of. I went to all of these art colonies I told you about. But the very first thing I noticed was the materials that dumb artists were using. I soon demonstrated the differences between a high-class line of goods and inferior materials. Say, I cleaned up plenty on that transaction and the travelers will keep the factory hopping. Wait'll I tell old Trenbath. Will he be tickled!"

"So you are content now to remain just a bug?" Fern asked Fern.

"Eh? Oh—uh! Sure—sure," Henry answered, sheepishly, as he leaned over and took her hands. "For pastures are always the greenest, you know. You said that and you were right."

Little Benny's Note Book

We waz eating supper and ma said, Congradulate me, Willyum, and pop said, Congradulations, my deer, my heartiest congradulations. What on? he said.

My teacher Miss Bumbell believed so pachooky this week that I even had 44 cents left of my allowances, ma said, and pop said, By golies that's swell, there's no greater satisfaction than the feeling of being all square with the world. Let me offer my congradulations once more. In fact all the congradulations of the season, he said.

I'll certainly be a grand and glorious sensation, ma said. After weeks of finding myself flat in the red, imagine my unaffected joy when I discovered I was still plump in the black. I called up Maud Hevers without waisting a minnit. You know she's on the budget sistem too, but she's been just as unfortunate as I am, and the end of each week we call each other up for mutual simpathy. Ony today, noturelly, I called her up for the luxury of crowing over her, but low and behold, what a coincidence met my listening ear. Maud was acutally in the black herself. She told me she had saved 50 cents, ma said.

Maybe the millenium is coming, maybe all's rite with the world for everybody, pop said, and ma said, You can imagine how we exchanged felicitations. In fact we rejoiced and both treat ourselfs to one, ma said.

It surely is, pop said, and ma said. Is what? and pop said, A wimmins world.

And he sot behind the, sporting page and stayed there.

No More Piles

Doctor's Prescription Does The Work

Few Pile sufferers know that the cause of Piles is internal—and circulation of blood in the lower bowel.

This is the scientific reason why Piles—the real reason why salves and suppositories so often may not give lasting relief and why cutting sometimes removes the trouble but leaves existing cause which may create a recurrence.

Your Hemorrhoids, bleeding or protruding Piles will only go when you scientifically remove the cause. For this an internal medicine should be used MIKROMOL, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, sold by good druggists everywhere, succeeds because it establishes big circulation, and sets to relieve congestion.

Don't let burning, when salves fail and before considering operation, try this internal remedy when Dr. McKeown invites every Pile sufferer to try MIKROMOL on his money-back if not joyfully satisfied with the help one bottle gives.

Her love of literature and learning has been a great consolation during the years she has been confined to the hospital and today is regarded as one of the brightest intellects in the city. Her father was at one time a prominent lawyer of Chatham.

Authors Give King Books, Barrie Sends His Plays

London, May 10—(CP Cable)—Sir James Barrie, who celebrated his 75th birthday yesterday, has suggested to fellow authors and composers they present a jubilee present to the King of one of their own works for the library of Windsor Castle.

The selection thus far affords another proof in author's estimate of his own work is often at variance with popular opinion. Barrie himself, with Scottish shrewdness offers his "Collected Plays," and Bernard Shaw is sending "St. Joan."

J. B. Priestly however rejects his "Good Companions" and will later "English Journey."

Rudyard Kipling, John Masefield, sends his "Collipoli" and Stanley Baldwin "On England".

YOUTH CORPS PLAN CALLED BY C.C.F. STEP TO FASCISM

Suggested Organization of Youth Bitterly Attacked

OUTRAGEOUS PROPOSAL

C.C.F. Executive Dislikes Mr. Burton's Plan of Paternalism

Toronto, May 10 (CP)—A special executive meeting of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, Ontario section, today recorded its opposition to a plan of C. L. Burton, Toronto merchandising executive, for a "Youths' Re-establishment Corps," organized along military lines for those from 17 to 22 years old.

The C.C.F. "unanimously resolved to organize Province-wide protests against the outrageous proposal," which it described as "a further step towards Fascism in Canada."

"The Canadian people will not tolerate any further encroachments upon their democratic privileges," said the C.C.F. statement. "It is evil enough to have national defence camps wherein the men there resident are subject to military discipline and deprived for all practical purposes of their franchise and right of political action but it would be a further disastrous blow to the principles of British liberty to confine youth in concentration camps."

"The statement said Mr. Burton, who announced the plan in Montreal last night "apparently believes that the paternal solicitude of Benjamin Mayers would be an improvement upon the loving care of Canadian fathers and mothers."

PROVINCIAL LEVY FOR INCOME TAX

Premier's Announcement Meets With Varied Response

Toronto, May 10 (CP)—The proposal of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn to abolish the existing income tax levy in favor of municipalities to make up the difference that a Provincial income tax may will varied response in different sections of Ontario.

At Hamilton, Mayor Herbert Wilton said he was entirely in favor with the idea of collecting Provincial income tax and subsidizing the municipalities.

"It is exactly what I have advocated for some years and only recently I wrote to have the matter included in the agenda for a mayor's conference," he said.

Alderman Norman Eanson, only member of the Toronto City Council who could be reached for comment last night, questioned the possibility that the Ontario Government could impose an income tax to replace the present municipal income tax, he believed, was a matter that rested between Federal and municipal authorities.

F. D. Tolchard, secretary of the Toronto Board of Trade, declared he had heard a great deal of favorable comment from business men in the proposals. Personally, he said, he favored the Premier's suggestion, provided some provision was made for municipalities now collecting income tax.

Controller Ralph Day, of Toronto, made it plain that he was thoroughly in favor of any action by the Government whereby recipients of taxable income, now exempt by virtue of place of residence, might be taxed for relief purposes.

He however, also said, "the Province takes over the question of income tax levy, there certainly should be some arrangement whereby a city such as Toronto would not lose the City revenue."

Alderman Nathan Phillips of Toronto, said that if Premier Hepburn follows his proposal up with legislation "it will be tantamount to highway robbery, unless the Province reimburses the municipalities for what they levy this tax with a sum equal to the amount taken away, or relieve such municipalities of some of their obligations."

LURE OF SOUTH FAILS EXPLORER

Ellsworth Just Wants to Finish Job by Flight

New York, May 10—(CP)— The thrill of the Antarctic—the lure of the South Pole—has failed to hold Lincoln Ellsworth but he has some unfinished business there.

Ellsworth said tonight "I have a job to finish," the aviator-explorer said today, "and I have to get there any more."

The job is his projected 2800-mile plane flight across the south pole.

Last year he waited on Snow Hill Island in the Weddell Sea four and one-half months for proper weather conditions for the flight. They never materialized.

Ellsworth wants to determine if Antarctica is a single land mass or if the continent is a combination of islands and waterways as the coast of Victoria Land on the Ross Sea side of the pole.

"Antarctica is the last big piece of exploration," said Ellsworth, adding—"on this earth."

He was a bit reluctant to discuss possible future explorations but commented upon the manner in which science is bringing the moon and Mars closer to the earth.

"Nothing is impossible in exploration," he said.

Duke of Manchester Guilty Sentenced to Serve 9 Months

Convicted of Obtaining Money Under False Pretences

London, May 10—(AP)—The Duke of Manchester today was found guilty in the Old Bailey of obtaining money under false pretences and sentenced to nine months imprisonment.

The 59-year-old peer, who earlier testified his financial road had been rocky during recent years, showed no emotion as sentence was pronounced.

His attorney indicated an appeal would be filed immediately.

The specific charge was that the Duke, whose lineage goes back to his conquered, received from his wife approximately $2,250 on jewelry belonging to the estate of his late mother but allowed him for use by his wife. He had represented the jewels to be his own property, the prosecution charged.

He nodded to the judge at the pronouncement of sentence, walked slowly across the room, picked up his overcoat and proceeded downstairs to a cell to await the outcome of further steps.

Bankrupt Twice

Testifying in his own defence the Duke said "I have been bankrupt twice." A total of $1,000,000 had been fyied against him, he said, while the number of creditors' petitions totalled nine in three fingers." There are no judgment summonses in the articles, added he said.

The Duke, seriously ill last month, said he was feeling much better and declined the court's offer to let him sit down while testifying.

He denied any intent to defraud, when he pawned the jewelry belonging to the estate of his late mother. He declared he had paid interest on the pledged gems and kept insurance in force with the purpose of redeeming the articles, adding he had the money in his pocket to do so.

The Duke's attorney explained to the court the Duke received $5,583 from a bankbook but because I have a job to finish," the aviator-explorer said today, "and I have to get there any more."

The job is his projected 2800-mile plane flight across the south pole.

Last year he waited on Snow Hill Island in the Weddell Sea four and one-half months for proper weather conditions for the flight. They never materialized.

Ellsworth wants to determine if Antarctica is a single land mass or if the continent is a combination of islands and waterways as the coast of Victoria Land on the Ross Sea side of the pole.

"Antarctica is the last big piece of exploration," said Ellsworth, adding—"on this earth."

He was a bit reluctant to discuss possible future explorations but commented upon the manner in which science is bringing the moon and Mars closer to the earth.

"Nothing is impossible in exploration," he said.

BAILIFF SEIZES COUNCIL SEATS

Peterboro Official Chairs Seized After $75 Judgment

Peterboro, Ont., May 10—(CP)—Bailiff R. F. Pearson today invaded city council chambers and placed under seizure the Mayor's chair and the aldermanic chairs pending payment by the city of $113. The sum includes a $75 judgment, and costs, awarded by the Division Court in Mrs. Jean Cowan's action against the city.

Mrs. Cowan fell on a Peterboro street in December, Mr. Pearson said he was acting for Mrs. Cowan under instruction from G. N. Gordon, K.C., the woman's solicitor.

"There was no necessity for Mr. Gordon going to that extreme," was the city solicitor's statement. "I said he wrote the insurance company early in the week and they authorized payment this morning." They said the cheque was placed in the mail last night," he declared.

It is exactly what I have advocated for some years and only recently I wrote to have the matter included in the agenda for a mayor's conference," he said.

Alderman Norman Eanson, only member of the Toronto City Council who could be reached for comment last night, questioned the possibility that the Ontario Government could impose an income tax to replace the present municipal income tax, he believed, was a matter that rested between Federal and municipal authorities.

F. D. Tolchard, secretary of the Toronto Board of Trade, declared he had heard a great deal of favorable comment from business men in the proposals. Personally, he said, he favored the Premier's suggestion, provided some provision was made for municipalities now collecting income tax.

Controller Ralph Day, of Toronto, made it plain that he was thoroughly in favor of any action by the Government whereby recipients of taxable income, now exempt by virtue of place of residence, might be taxed for relief purposes.

He however, also said, "the Province takes over the question of income tax levy, there certainly should be some arrangement whereby a city such as Toronto would not lose the City revenue."

Alderman Nathan Phillips of Toronto, said that if Premier Hepburn follows his proposal up with legislation "it will be tantamount to highway robbery, unless the Province reimburses the municipalities for what they levy this tax with a sum equal to the amount taken away, or relieve such municipalities of some of their obligations."

CROWLAND STRIKE AGAIN CONTINUES

Unemployed Refuse The Terms Decided on by Premier

Welland, Ont., May 10.—(CP)—Dissatisfied with the 10 per cent. increase in food allowance and the "open voucher" offered them by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, unemployed of Crowland Township went on strike again today and turned out to picket the Beatrice Street sewer relief job.

The 200 unemployed of the municipality, for three hours last night discussed the terms offered them by Premier Hepburn and decided to reject their strike.

Ten days ago the men went back to work on the relief job after the Premier and two of his Cabinet ministers had conferred with their representatives. The Government was understood to have considered their requests.

Prior to that the unemployed had been embroiled in a four-weeks strife with authorities during which there were riots. Police made recourse to tear gas bombs and truncheons, and four of the workers were arrested.

Following the Premier's first visit, the men returned to work while the Government considered their demands for a 25 per cent increase in food allowance; abolition of task work in excess of value of food vouchers; open voucher for clothing; relief for single unemployed over 18; withdrawal of rioting charges against the four arrested; $1 a week per rent and a $2.50 voucher for clothing. An open voucher is one negotiable at any store in the municipality rather than a special store with which the Council has an agreement. Some unemployed had complained, that they have to walk miles to cash their vouchers.

All But One Rejected

The Premier came back to Welland last night and rejected all demands except the one for "open voucher", and compromised with a 10 per cent increase in food allowance, which he said was 15 per cent more than the relief distributed in the "honeymoon" days of Toronto.

The unemployed held a meeting and decided to go on strike again.

Premier Hepburn told them that if they chose to listen to outside agitators, who were behind the strike he had no sympathy for them. If they refused his terms and went back on strike, he said last night, it would be the "last time" they did.

Informed of the decision of the men, Mr. Hepburn said the twenty extra police at Welland would maintain law and order.

Charges of breaking, entering and theft against a seven year boy residing in Sidney Township were heard in Juvenile Court held before Magistrate R. J. Butler K. C., today. Following the submission of the evidence the youth was reprimanded severely and given over to the custody of his parents.

The matter was investigated some time ago by the Provincial Police following complaints regarding the breaking, entering and theft of a vacant house situated on the Marshall Road. Other nearby residences were also burglarized. One of the articles stolen was a large look, from which the mechanism was taken and used by the youthful burglars to provide locomotion for a toy motor boat built by them. The miniature vessel was an exact replica of a larger craft and when supplied with the mechanism of the clock it is reported that she proved a capable craft in the water. The boat was confiscated by the authorities, while other articles stolen were also recovered.

SILVER DOLLAR IN HEAVY DEMAND

Demand for silver dollars issued by the Mint at Ottawa has been so great in Belleville that officials of the Belleville and Aberdeen Club a few were brought here on the supposition that there would not be any unusual demand, but very few of the gift had been issued to persons who want them for mementoes or keepsakes of the King's Jubilee and of the Jubilee silver dollar. A banker told the Ontario Intelligencer reporter on Thursday afternoon that he was minded as that the persons who want them will have their demand satisfied."

GUIDES, SCOUTS GO TO JAMBOOREE

Will Meet Lord Baden-Powell, Chief Scout and His Family

Over sixty Girl Guides, Rangers and Boy Scouts of Belleville will next week answer the great rally cry and journey to Toronto to take part in the monster celebration at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds to be held in honour of Lord Baden-Powell, Chief Scout of the World, who having started at Victoria B. C., is touring across Canada in the interest of scout conventions.

The Girl Guides and Rangers are to be in charge of Mrs. (Dr.) Bensenmeier. Only a few Rangers are going. Those known to be going at the present are Mary Mouill, Alice Gilroy, Audrey Lloome, Margaret Scott, Thelma Hubbard, Marjorie Sharpe. The Boy Scouts are to be in charge of scout master Leo Lewis, James Varley and Bob Brown.

Now some time now scout troops in the city have been raising funds for this great event, so that the less fortunate brother scouts who could not raise the fare would be able to go on the Dominion rates on the railways are being endorsed. The price of a single fare will be charged for the round trip. Many of the contingent are travelling by automobile.

The celebration is due to start at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning (Saturday) and will be continued to-day (daylight saving time). It is thought that approximately 15,000 will be present to assemble at the grounds tomorrow. Representatives from troops all over Ontario will congregate there. Ceremonies have been arranged for the mornings and afternoons.

As Lord Baden-Powell is now 78 years of age it is thought this will be h. last extensive trip across Canada. It is hoped the splendid rally tomorrow will be the greatest ever held in Ontario.

POLICE COURT

Forty-eight hours after he had completed a 90 day "stretch" Vincent Nelson Watson, Frankford, again found himself in the clutches of the law last week, being arraigned on a charge of drunk in charge of a motor car. McMahon was taken into custody by the local police as he drove westerly on Moira Street. The accused man appeared in court on Tuesday although he did not actually plead guilty, he admitted the outstanding three days of beer and was found guilty. Upon his own request pleading to the charge of drunkenness his sentence was enlarged for two weeks.

After pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication, laid on June 22nd, 1934, married Stanley Harold Prince, Edward County youth nonchalantly took his seat in the prisoner's box and smoked a cigarette during the continuance of police court held before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C. today. No person took notice of the accused's lunch and he continued to enjoy "a few drags," apparently much to his satisfaction. Subsequently the young man's newly acquired father-in-law came to his rescue and paid the fine and costs, amounting to $13.80.

George Vanner, of this city, faced a charge of reckless driving. The accused was implicated in a minor accident near the corner of Everett and Bridge Street, last, during which the car collided with a parked truck, causing damages to a city hydrant. "I believe it was a more serious charge than reckless driving should be laid in this case as serious injuries and property damage resulted," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. in the absence of the accused's counsel, a solicitor, the matter was further enlarged, it being pointed out he would lose his employment under normal conditions.

A couple of drunks and one charge of non-support were also presented and enlarged.

Rotary Inter-City Ladies' Night is Held at Cobourg

Splendid Entertainment is Supplied by Visiting Clubs

J. BONE, CHAIRMAN

On Thursday evening a party of Belleville Rotarians with their wives and guests journeyed to Cobourg to attend the third annual Rotary Inter-City Ladies' Night held at the St. Peter's Parish Hall. There was a splendid turn out of nearly three hundred guests present and the capacity of the hall that is admirably suited for the purpose of handling such a large crowd without confusion.

An excellent supper was served by the ladies of the Women's Service League of St. Peter's followed immediately by an evening of entertainment provided by the members of the visiting eight clubs attending and presided over by Mr. Jamieson Bone, president of the Belleville Club. The Chairman read the program as along in his own inimitable style, allowing no dull moments to intrude with the result that the various numbers on the lengthy program were all finished well before ten o'clock. Following this, dancing was enjoyed, to the gramaphonic tunes provided by an Oshawa orchestra. Several lovely door prizes were won by lucky couples who did not have to rely upon their skill as dancers to win them. Among the unofficial fancies of the artistic master-of-ceremonies, Malcolm Ross, Dr. F. Lloyd of Cobourg.

The first part of the program consisted of three minute speeches by the presidents of the visiting clubs. Charlie Dolan enlivened the proceedings with the recital of the mishaps and tribulations attending his trip to Bradford, Penn., as a guest speaker of the Rotary Club there. Others who spoke were Fred Oryderman, Bowmanville; W. H. Dundas, Cobourg; Hank R. Rosevear, Port Hope; Dr. C. MacDougall, Whitby; W. J. Langmaid, Oshawa; Ed Simmons, Trenton and Art McColl, Campbellford.

The second half of the program took place in the concert hall with Fred Oryderman as chairman. This part was provided by five of the clubs attending. Mr. Harold Barrett sang two fine solos with Mrs. Barrett accompanying. Mrs. MacLean Hair, of this city, was particularly fine in two solos that she has given previously on the hour of Variety and Romance on the Canadian Radio Commission program, heard on the radio over CKGB. Sergt.-Major Wibberly of the Trenton Airport entertained the audience with his Village Pump" in the comedy song and Mrs. Percy Locke, Campbellford, contributed two readings. A short skit was given by the Port Hope Club and a one-act play by members of the Cobourg Dramatic Club was greatly enjoyed.

The return trip to Belleville was made unpleasant by the heavy blanket of fog that overlaid the entire district but fortunately no accidents marred the enjoyable evening for any of those attending from this city.

Police News

Stepping from behind a parked car on the north side of Bridge on afternoon William Carrigan, Tyendinaga, was knocked to the pavement, when he walked directly in front of an oncoming motor car. The driver of the vehicle was Mr. Scrimshaw of this city, had no opportunity to swerve striking the pedestrian, as he stepped from between two parked cars and was almost in the path of the car of the motor vehicle. It was raining at the time. The injured man was removed to the surgery of Dr. J. J Robertson, where it was discovered he was suffering from a deep scalp laceration. Police were in attendance but stated no blame in the accident upon the driver of the automobile.

Belleville pleasantists crowded into the call book of the police station on Thursday night when they were early sleeping quarters, in out of the rain, all had a good night.

While going over his beat early last night P. C. Taylor observed a young man and two lads loitering around Campbell St. Upon further investigation the officer was told the lad take a girl's bicycle and attempt to ride away, the "bike" having a flat tire apparently caused. The officer became slightly suspicious and took charge of the youth and the cycle. Later the crowd of boys dispersed, and left before the constable had held one lad for questioning. The lad with the bicycle admitted taking the "bike" for a joy ride and eventually found himself in the custody of the police in the station. Both boys were allowed to return to their respective homes pending further investigations will follow, it was promised.

TAXES ON INCOME $10,500 IN 1934

Opinion Withheld on Suggested Plan of Government

Reaction in Belleville to the suggested imposition of a provincial income tax by the Provincial Government, to supplement the municipal income tax which it is claimed by Premier Hepburn is enforced in some municipalities strictly, in others half heartedly and in yet others not at all, does not very clear.

It will mean next year if the municipal tax is replaced by a provincial tax that something like $15,500 which is annually being paid in by Belleville income taxpayers to the city treasury will go with more to Queen's Park. Last year approximately $10,500 was collected from income taxes of Belleville residents. In 1933 the total income tax collection was $10,286.82.

Should the municipal tax be removed by the provincial levy, it will mean an additional mill appropriation for the city tax rate but the Premier has indicated that the government intends to work out some scheme whereby municipalities will be compensated.

In a statement to the press, Mr. Hepburn said it had been suggested that the provincial income should take the form of assumption by the province of additional shares of relief, highways and other costs, but "everything is still under advisement. We might meet the situation by paying cash subsidies."

In the twenty million dollars extra revenue which such a plan of provincial income tax it is suggested would provide the city could see that if the basis used is the federal basis of assessment, then the share that Belleville income taxpayers will pay, will be considerably higher than what they pay the city. It is pointed out. For instance the municipal exemptions are $1,800 and $3,000 while for the federal purposes of taxation they are $1,000 and $2,000 This would mean an additional $500 for the unmarried and $1,000 more annually in the income of a married person. It would also mean that many now escaping the tax would be called upon to pay provincial tax just as some who escape the municipal tax today pay federal taxes on incomes, it was pointed out.

Under municipal law tax on income is at the local tax rate, which today is 24 mills, or two and a half per cent. tax in Belleville last year. The federal tax for those who fall under are the federal dollars above the exemption figure is three per cent. This is figured that the unmarried person with a $2,000 salary paid in the city last year 4.7 per cent on $800, (for the exemption was $1600), or a total of $32.80, while the federal tax he will pay on the same income three per cent on $2,000 or $30. So a provincial income tax if on the federal basis would mean more than $10,000 from Belleville income taxpayers, it was explained to a reporter.

W.M.S. LAYS PLAN TO CELEBRATE 10TH ANNIVERSARY

Pageant is Prepared For Use of Branches at Anniversary

A service of worship on "Long suffering, gentleness and goodness" opened the Wednesday afternoon meeting of the Bay of Quinte conference W.M.S. convention at the Bridge Street United Church. The service was taken by Mrs. J. Calder, Beaverton, and Mrs. M. McKenzie, Uxperry, of Lindsay Presbyterial, Mrs. W. L. Smith, president, who was in the chair called the attention of the delegates to the fact that one-of their number, Miss Hattie Chown had been the recipient of a Silver Jubilee medal from His Majesty. Miss Chown received the congratulations of her associates.

Anniversary Plans

Mrs. A. H. Burns, Toronto, a member of the Dominion Board, was guest speaker at the meeting and gave a helpful address on the Tenth Anniversary." Taking the letters of the word 1-0-a-n-b, Mrs. Burns impressed on her hearers significant aspects of the anniversary celebration.

It should be celebrated "triumphantly" for it was a great achievement — denominations forgotten, difficulties and problems solved, because all have worked together.

Enthusiasm should mark the celebrations, and the entire purposes of the work revolves around the idea of world Citizenship. To live with Him in mind will cause members to celebrate enthusiastically during Lent and in His name.

The speaker stressed the necessity of choosing "now" as the word represented by the third letter of "tenth," and urged her hearers to begin now plans for celebrating the W.M.S. anniversary. Each of the anniversary should be observed with joy and happy thanks for the joy that should come in expectation. About all, with an earnest desire of accomplishing the impossible.

Mrs. Burns gave an outline of the Pageant which is being prepared and copies of which will be available for anniversary programs.

Following Mrs. Burns' talk, the Presbyterial Directors addressed the meeting on arrangements for observing the anniversary and how it is planned to promote the school for leaders.

Mrs. J. L. Callan, Smith's Falls, said that Renfrew Presbyterial planned to send one delegate whose expenses to the school for leaders would be paid. From the offerings at sectional rallies it was hoped to partially pay the expenses of others. Regarding anniversary plans a survey of the Presbyterial was made and a map compiled showing which centres lacked auxiliaries.

To Send Delegates

Peterborough Presbyterial, the president, Mrs. C. M. Boost, Peterborough, reported, planned a history of missionary activities of the W.M.S. One official decision had been named to attend the school for leadership and it was expected, that each church would send a delegate. The "family party" idea for societies affiliated with the W.M.S. was highly commended.

Mrs. Lawlor of Stirling told of a systematic plan for raising money then used effectively at her church. A list of women members of the church was obtained. Each was visited and given a copy of the Missionary Monthly. Then a tea was held and the response was wonderful.

In Oshawa Presbyterial, Mrs. Norman Allin, of Myrtle Station, reported that an effort was being made to stress the strengthening of spiritual life by means of study groups.

Mrs. McCrimmon, Beaverton, in her interesting remarks, said that the Missionary Monthly was being emphasized in their Presbyterial endeavours and announced that pageants, plans for the anniversary would be included in the anniversary celebration. Regarding the school for leaders each auxiliary was being asked to contribute one dollar to augment the fund for delegates.

Mrs. R. M. Seymour, Cataraqui, president of Kingston Presbyterial, deplored the indifference even among membership, which was a great detriment to missionary advancement.

Solo Given

A vocal solo by Miss Sylvia Tutt, accompanied by Mrs. Roger Thompson was greatly enjoyed by the delegates at this point.

Mrs. S. L. Terrill, Napanee, president of Cobourg Presbyterial and Mrs. W. C. Haggerty, of Trenton Valley, president of Belleville Presbyterial, reported plans in their presbyterials the former stressing the unity of organizations and the latter the power of personal prayer.

Mrs. Burns who took an active part in the discussions at the afternoon warmly complimented the branch on the capability of the Presbyterial presiding officers.

An open forum discussion on the findings of department conferences was an interesting part of the program and of great value to the delegates.

Tithing Discussed

Mrs. H. T. Thompson, Whitby, Secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance, advocated the use of tithing which was discussed by the members and met with the approval of a number. Mrs. Halliday gave the report of the recent leadership conference and Mrs. J. C. Gills, Foxboro, of the corresponding secretaries. Mrs. J. E. Mabee, Odessa, gave the suggestions of literature secretaries conference. Mrs. Herrington, of Thomasburg, the periodicals, and Mrs. Hooper, the press secretaries. Mrs. Hooper said tribute to the wise and efficient leadership in this department of Mrs. W. J. Garland.

Miss L. Chandler, Napanee, conducted a beautiful and impressive memorial service in remembrance of the members of the various Presbyterials who had passed away. Mrs. Ellis sang as a solo "The King of Love, My Shepherd Is," Mrs. Ray Sparling acting as accompanist.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was then conducted by Dr. James Endicott, Rev. L. R. Wight, Kingston and Rev. E. W. Rowland, of Stirling. Mr. V. P. Hunt presided at the organ.

MAY BAR HORSES IN FOREST HILL

Toronto, May 8.—(CP)—A by-law which would make it a criminal offence to drive a horse on the street of Forest Hill village, wealthy suburb of Toronto, after 10 p. m. or before 8 a. m., will be submitted to municipal electors for discussion on suggestion of Arthur Leitch.

Leitch said practically everyone in the village has an electric refrigerator that will keep milk fresh for two days if necessary and there are dozens of people in the village being treated for nervous ailments because they can't get sleep at night.

Strike Situation

New York, May 9 (CP)—Labor trouble raised its head in many parts of the United States today as several current strikes showed no signs of abatement and new walkouts were threatened.

The Pacific Coast shipwreat reported 18,000 loggers, sawmill hands and longshoremen striking with much of the region's huge lumber industry at a standstill; Ohio automobile workers appeared more determined than ever in their strike as Federal conciliators were injected into the situation; Missouri saw its first general strike in the history of the tri-state lead and zinc field; Illinois electrical workers moved to secure their gains made during a successful "protest" holiday and threats of a new Maritime strike involving the entire Pacific Coast were raised in support of 12,000 striking oil tanker men.

Softball Opens May 20

The Trenton Softball Association held an open meeting in the Town Hall on Tuesday night with Norman Kidd in the chair. The plan adopted last meeting of drawing all players from a pool did not work successfully as only about seventy-five registered. Representatives from eight teams were present and decided that all entries must be in the hands of the secretary not later than May 14 with a $2.00 entry fee. After that date a schedule will be drawn and the league will open on May 20.

Pitchers are on the decline in Trenton and to get them interested in signing all the best, it was decided to allow each team to use only two of the pitchers that played last season. Eight teams have given their intention of playing and include Benedict-Proctor, R.C.A.F., Project No. 32, Victoria Park, Dempsters, Downs-Coulter; Glen Miller and Carrying Place.

Trenton, May 10 (Special)—The inquest to enquire into the death of Frank Semple Jr., worker at the airport, who was instantly killed when struck by a motor car on May 3 on No. 2 highway, driven by Blake Foster of Toronto, was concluded in the Town Hall on Monday night before Coroner Dr. Walter Crowe. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnell of Belleville questioned the witnesses. George Campbell of Airport identified the victim. Jos. E. Vance, also of the airport, told of his being on the sidewalk parallel to and incident on the road. It was raining he stated, and the car was not travelling fast as it stopped in a short distance after the impact. Dr. John Bell of Trenton gave the cause of death due to a broken neck with other injuries, including a broken leg. H. LaFleur of Trenton was driving east at the time and was opposite Foster when the car struck the victim. This witness testified the driver had exercised good judgment and was in no way to blame. Robt. Ryan, superintendent of LaFleur corroborated the evidence of LaFleur. Foster the driver was not even called. He stated that he was travelling at a moderate rate due to the pavement and low visibility. After the glare of the headlights of the approaching car passed he saw an object in front of his car but was unable to avoid striking. Clarke Dickens, his passenger did not see the victim at all. He felt the car veers before he had any idea what was happening. Chief Baby of Trenton and Traffic Officer Byles of Belleville both stated that it was raining at the time and no marks were visible on the highway. The jury retired and after ten minutes returned with an accidental death verdict. The jury comprised Wm. Goodwin, foreman, H. Grainger, Charles York, Fred Smith, F. E. Winters, C. A. Mutton, Charles Allen and Thomas Taylor.

GIFTS PRESENTED TO YOUNG PEOPLE

West Huntingdon—The young or belated winter that visited us on Friday, brought blessings untold. The wise old prophets say a good storm such as the one on Friday is of great benefit to the land and now it is hoped spring weather will come again.

Some seventy-five neighbors and friends gathered on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bray of Mill St. and tendered to Mr. and Mrs. James Bray, a hearty welcome and congratulations on their recent marriage. At 9 o'clock Mr. Wm. Wilson (who was master of ceremonies) called the gathering to order and briefly explained to Mr. and Mrs. Bray the nature of meeting and then called upon Mr. Judson McGowan (a very close friend of the groom) to read the following address:

To Mr. and Mrs. James Bray:—
Dear Friends—

The papers declare it, the neighbors have said

That a young man and maiden have lately been wed

The young couple joined are before us tonight

Jim with label the pride of his life

On a former occasion we made you a call

Our presence announced by bells, guns and what all

Sixteen stalwart lads, with good muscle and brawn

Did make a big noise, with saw, fiddle and horn

The charivari party have all gathered here

Each with a lassie to wish you good cheer

We trust that your future will always be bright

Your pathway be joyous your troubles be light

Now if shadows should come, just be cheerful and sing

It will make the clouds vanish and smooth bitterness bring

Mabel, be to your husband a kind, trusting wife

And then he will love you the rest of his life

Jim, be a good sport, don't be cranky or pout

Then your wife will be happy to have you about

To our hearts and our homes a welcome we bring

Your way to our hearthstone, may you joyously sing

We brought you these gifts, may they serve to remind

You of friends and companions who hope to prove kind

Now I've given my sermon, but not yet my text

Jim, Elmer or Carl, which one will be next.

Signed on behalf of the charivari party, neighbors and friends.

Judson McGowan, Elmer Wilson, Charles Wright.

THE JUBILEE MEDALS

While the ten thousand medals commemorative of the jubilee did not give one for every worthy citizen, yet the generosity of His Majesty was so munificent that many worthy folk were honored. Philanthropic and other service was acknowledged with the medal.

Those who did not receive medals congratulate those who did and take pleasure in the honour which has been shown them. Not to do so in all sincerity would prove the envious heart.

It is a pleasure to find the honour so well bestowed. In Belleville a number of citizens received the medal and there is not a citizen who would say they have not been merited by unselfish devotion to those causes which tend to make Canada what she is today. The award of medals to those in certain judicial and municipal positions is a representative award and yet an award of individual merit, so do the public life and the private life merge. And much the same may be said of the other awards—those who received them have been filling representative posts of service to their fellow-citizens.

STAINLESS ALL-STEEL PIANO?

An all-steel piano of rust-proof metal may soon be offered to the musical world, thanks to the triple activities of steel and typewriter manufacturers.

And stainless steel pianos are promised at that! All yet remains upon the success of the experimentation conducted by the Steinway and Sons of New York, the American Steel and Wire Company of Cleveland and L. C. Smith and Corona Typewriters Limited, who have it is reported, combined their interests to manufacturer and sell stainless steel instruments.

It is understood that final plans and specifications have been completed and that the first stainless steel piano will be built on these plans within a month. So far the manufacturers claim that this is but the experimental stage.

When representatives and executives of the three collaborating companies were asked for confirmation of the report, they declined to amplify it.

Theodore E. Steinway, president of Steinway and Sons, admitted that his company had been experimenting with an all-steel piano, but he said the experiments went back twenty years. He was unwilling to say that any instrument of the kind had been so far perfected that his or other companies were prepared to go into production.

It is understood that the American Steel and Wire Company is providing the materials for strings, case and all-metal sounding board, and that L. C. Smith and Corona Typewriters, Inc., is contributing certain mechanical parts, but officials of these two companies would add nothing to details that had become known.

One company official declined to discuss the matter on the ground that the all-steel piano was still in the experimental stage and that it would be at least a month before the collaborating companies were ready to announce the final results of their tests.

It is understood the all-steel piano will weigh about 400 pounds without strings and key action, as against 575 pounds for present-type pianos. The exterior steel casing, it is understood, will be similar to that of a harp and the seventeen-ton stress borne by a tuned piano will be supported by a new brace beam constructed beneath the welded frame. There has been no indication of the price of the new instrument.

MASEFIELD'S INSPIRATION

The British poet laureate, John Masefield, who is one of the great writers in verse and prose of these days in English, served the King and the people faithfully with his jubilee poetry, his ode, and his prayer. While such poetry is usually difficult to a laureate, in this present instance Masefield had the finest inspiration to put into song and prayer, the motive of loyalty of nearly five hundred millions of subjects of the British ruler, a man and a king, who has struck the world's heart by his devotion to duty, his love of his people, his sane outlook on life, and his wisdom.

Other laureates, like the famous bard of antiquity, Horace who sang the praises of the great Roman Emperor Augustus, have sung worthily, but not one has had a more worthy subject than the King and the people's love for him. One at this time recalls the noble poetic tribute of a former poet laureate, Alfred Lord Tennyson, to Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The lines Tennyson wrote on that day will no doubt live to the end of recorded time. And close as we are to the work of Masefield which came to light but in the past week, it may be that we are right in predicting the place it will hold in the real poetry of the people of the English speaking race. He is a happy king who has inherited with a gift of bay and laurel the composer of word-harmonies and the arranger of thoughts who interprets this present age in the poet's art.

MOTHER'S DAY BEING SUNDAY perhaps a word for Dad will not come amiss, and this could not be expressed better than in an excerpt from an article by Dr. Frank Crane, as follows:

Dear Dad—I am writing this to you though you have been dead thirty years.

It is only now, when my own hair is gray, that I understand how you felt. I must have been a bitter trial to you. I was such an ass. I believed my own petty wisdom, and I know how ridiculous it was, compared to that calm, ripe, wholesome wisdom of yours. Most of all I want to confess my worst sin against you. It was the feeling I had that you "did not understand,"

You understood me better than I did myself. Your wisdom flowed around mine like the ocean around an island. And how patient you were with me!

How full of long-suffering and kindness! And how pathetic, now that I come home to me, were your efforts to get close to me, to win my confidence, to be my pal!

I wish you were here now, across the table from me, just for an hour, so I could tell you how there's no wall any more; I understand you now, Dad, and God! how I love you, and wish I could go back and be your boy again.

Well, it won't be long, Dad, till I am over, and I believe you'll be the first one to take my hand and help me up the further slope.

I know that the richest, most priceless thing on earth, and the thing least understood, is that mighty love and tenderness and craving to help which a father feels toward his boy.

For I have a boy of my own.

And it is he that wants me to go back to you, and get down on my knees to you, there somewhere in the Silence, hear me, Dad, and believe me.

SIDELIGHT FAN SENDS in this one as the best joke he has read for the week: The doctor of a country village had two children who were acknowledged by the inhabitants as being the prettiest little girls in the district. While the little children were out walking one day they happened to pass quite near two small boys; one lived in the village and the other was a visitor. "I say," said the latter to his friend, "who are those little girls?" "They are the doctor's children," replied the village boy. "He always keeps the best for himself."

PEONIES HAVE A FINE -PEDIGREE and are a large family with many branches. The Belleville lady who said that she had all varieties of peonies, red, blue and yellow, would be astonished to learn that there are over two thousand known and named varieties of peonies. All of which shows that there is more in horticulture than meets the eye.

NOW THE NEXT HOLIDAY is the Queen's Birthday, 24th of May. "Mid all the pomp and splendor, the shouting and the tumult of loyal expression to our beloved sovereign memory still goes back to love and loyalty to good Queen Victoria, an affection that will never die and will always be remembered in the observance of the Queen's Birthday. Could any tribute be greater to the British throne, past and present?

Letters to the Editor

CADET TRAINING

Belleville, May 7, 1935.

The Editor,
Belleville Ontario Intelligencer:

In your edition of May 4th appeared a letter signed by a student of the B.C.I.V.S., who is also a cadet.

I shall strive herewith to answer the dramatic outline as submitted by this student.

As you state, "B.C.I.V.S. Cadet" this country is an entirely free one, and shall be. I hope, in all time to come. I, too, am a student at the Collegiate, but I am not a cadet, and do not intend to be one as long as Canada remains a free country.

This subject is surely a debatable one, and, I, also, express my thoughts on the matter.

Don't think for one minute that there isn't a difference between what so many term as the "drilled" and "undrilled" boys. Now, honestly, do you call that discipline? I will leave it to the readers of this paper to form their own opinion of what they would classify as discipline. If so called "discipline" was employed into the physical exercises the same method of issuing orders was used, I don't believe there would be any difference between the two groups at the end of the term. I will say—it is a tribute to those responsible for the physical training that no such methods as used by the "drilled" are practised in the physical exercises.

As far as the cadet training making any person refrain from entering professions, etc., I contend if a person makes up his mind to enter a profession, all the cadet training in the world, even if he has been in the cadet units for twenty years, would not affect his decision. What is going to enter at any rate, just like some rugby players who have been warned by their coach to be in bed by ten, and the good old clock has struck twelve before they finally wend their way homeward. Personally, I have yet to see the interior of a poolroom, have never been on a dance floor, do not smoke and will not even taste alcoholic beverages.

I smiled, "B.C.I.V.S. Cadet," when I read your fifth paragraph, where you state "When boys, or to quote the letter 'undrilled' are taught a few simple movements and to wear khaki, this by no means makes soldiers of them, and any man will realize that marching in step with a drum and cannon and machine gun will not win a battle." I note, my friend, you do admit it is a real gun the instructor carries; a real gun, that, no doubt, once fired into the air, kills no real people. When you next carry YOUR rifle, just for one moment concentrate on where it is aimed and actually what it went through! I agree with Jno. in his letter, that when a youth of from eleven to sixteen years of age, the period when his adult understanding is just starting to mature (a trying time, indeed, when he is liable to attempt almost anything offered to him), wears a military uniform, performs all the military drills handed to him, takes orders from real military officers, who hear real military traditions and names, and marches along to the MILITARY drum, he naturally assumes a military character and, if he is an officer, he also supposes he has some superiority over his fellow students, a very dire inspiration, truly, to start life's battle with, and one which is apt to remain with him always.

So far as the khaki representing the uniform of the King, my dear friend, I think you are a little confused in your outline. What does King George, after all, doesn't only consider those people who wear the khaki uniform in this vast Commonwealth of Nations, the British Empire. His Jubilee Day message to all the world proves this point. In fact, he himself often wears a red uniform with gold trimmings. I am sure you will agree he has as much admiration for all his subjects scattered over the world as for those who don khaki. After all, a pair of overalls may represent the uniform of a common layman, and which may be just as acceptable as a military uniform of khaki. As regards loyalty among the people who do not wear the uniform, do you mean to question all civil servants and the general public? I myself consider the King as one of the most majestic and fitting monarchs our Empire has ever seen and will see for a long period to come.

You must realize there are numerous ways of serving His Imperial Majesty besides wearing the military uniform and instilling a military training into the youth of our nation—one of which, I think, I am sure meets his hearty approval is by being a worthy and pacific citizen.

As you state, each person in this free country is entitled to his own opinion, and I leave the foregoing paragraphs, which represent the opinions of not one, but many people, for the perusal and conclusions of the readers.

I am a
B.C.I.V.S. STUDENT.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 Years Ago

MAY 10th., 1915.

The inspection of the school cadets recently has aroused interest in their work. Great credit is due Major Barragar for the splendid way he has undertaken here. The Queen Mary School cadets, corps No. 8, formerly the Ontario Street School cadets, was organized on Feb. 18th., 1908, with Milton Vandervoort as Captain and Arthur Bishop and Russell Woodley as lieutenants. Bishop left the rank and file. This corps has never been beaten in any local competition in which it has taken part. In 1912 one of the teams chosen to represent the 3rd. Division at the Toronto Exhibition was chosen from Corps No. 8. The competition was open to the entire British Empire, and teams from England, Ireland, Scotland, Australia, New Zealand and the various provinces of the Dominion were present. Capt. Woodley commanded the team and officer and men were highly praised by the authorities in charge of the competition for their conduct and efficient work. In 1913 and 1914 the prizes offered by the "Strathcona Trust Fund" for company drill and rifle shooting were won by the corps. A beautiful silk flag was offered as a prize by the Argyll Chapter of the I. O. D. E. in 1914 for competition between the corps of the city. It was presented to the Octavia Street School cadets by H. Wm. Ponton, K.C., on the occasion of his visit to the city. A silver cup presented for competition in the city by Lieut. W. S. Robb was won by the same team. Rifle shooting is an important part of the training in which a keen interest is taken. The staff is as follows: Lieut. Hon. R. Tannahill, John Elliott, H. Smith, R. F. Lazier and the Rev. A. L. Geen for prizes donated to the corps by the Belleville Board of Trade. The officers of the corps is largely due to the energy and management of the Captain and his subordinate officers and the good work done in the rank and file. 8,000 PACK HALL MARKING JUBILEE

Duke of Kent Addresses World's Evangelical Alliance Meeting

London, May 9—(CP Cable)—Enthusiasm of the crowds was unabated today as the impressive functions of the royal Jubilee continued. Eight thousand persons packed the Albert Hall last evening for the Thanksgiving service organized by the World's Evangelical Alliance, while multitudes still besieged Buckingham Palace.

The Duke of Kent represented His Majesty at the Albert Hall service, over which Lord Hanworth, Master of the Rolls, presided. The aim of the meeting, as Lord Hanworth put it, was "to render thanks to God for 25 years reign of a great and good man a great and good King."

1000 in Choir

The huge and hearty singing was led by the silver jubilee choir of a thousand voices in which the women's shrill voices formed imposing white-clad bloc.

The Duke of Kent was cheered wildly when he rose to speak and was unable to start for several minutes. Then, calm restored, he gave unable to gain admission to the hall.

A passage in the Act of Homage, which was read from the pulpit, was singled out by His Royal Highness, who said, "it is everything for our country that the head should be the King and Queen, showing forth in their own family life the ideals which come within the range of high and low, rich and poor."

"It must be a joy to thousands having ties in different parts of the empire to know that prayers are also being offered by their dear ones in the form of worship of the word," added the Duke, who has just returned with his bride from the British West Indies.

He read a telegram from His Majesty thanking the meeting for its congratulations and good wishes.

The King as Personal Link

Lord Bledisloe, who retired as Governor-General of New Zealand, said the King was "the only personal link of the empire. Three things the Royal Family had done more than he himself could have done in New Zealand, Lord Bledisloe added—the sound of His Majesty's voice in Christmas broadcast; the hearing of the voices as in the Duke and Duchess of Kent were married; and the solemn moments when the Duke of York represented with the Bledisloe family in Christmas communion.

A letter was read to the meeting from the Prince of Wales, conveying thanks for the thank-offering to the Royal Jubilee Fund.

The Empire Thanksgiving

"An empire call 'to thanksgiving and prayer" was read by the Bishop of Norwich and the Hallelujah chorus and the National Anthem concluded the ceremony.

While this meeting was being held crowds estimated at 50,000 filled the Palace and the streets remained densely packed, in the rain to get away from the palace precincts after the King and Queen had made their appearance on the balcony in response to repeated salvos of cheers, many women fainted and the ambulance workers were kept busy. Many mothers who carried babies were almost overcome in the dense mass and cries of 'make way for the children" resounded through the throng.

Men formed voluntary cordons of protection while exhausted mothers fought their way to clear spaces with relentless elf-urging who didn't want to leave. It took five to 10 minutes to move 100 yards.

PLANE NOSE-DIVES OCCUPANTS SAFE

Crashes in Ploughed Field And Considerably Damaged

Downsview, May 8—Death groped in the clouds above this York County hamlet this afternoon and hurled a biplane 1,000 feet to the ground but the two aviators in the machine slipped through his fingers—uninjured.

Like a bird stricken in mid-flight, the aeroplane dropped into a plowed field, a shattered mass of wreckage. But when farmers reached the occupants, John Willard Jenkins, aged 25, and his brother Fred, 21, of 106 Winona Drive, they were shaken up, bruised and shocked, but otherwise unhurt.

Two Men Hurt

The plane had buried its nose in the soft soil; the propeller was in fragments, the undercarriage shattered and the wings almost severed. But Fred Jenkins was found, unharmed, jammed in the rear cockpit, while his older brother, who had been at the controls was lying near by, where he had been hurled from his seat by the impact. Gasoline leaking from the burst tank had fortunately not ignited.

Both youths were taken in Ward's ambulance to the Toronto Western Hospital, where the absence of any serious injury was confirmed. Only a few superficial cuts were found, and all gave their both patients very resting quietly.

The machine, a two-seater open fleet biplane, was rented by the two men at the Barker Airport around 2.30, both being licensed pilots. The elder brother took the stick, while Fred sat behind in the rear cockpit. Half an hour later, when over the Hooke farm, the plane, now flying at 1,000 feet, the motor suddenly stalled the motor.

Realizing that at a loss to figure why the plowed field was chosen for landing, when a slight glide to it there was far more suitable ground available.

KNOTS CAME IN HER FINGERS

A Result of Deposits of Uric Acid

CLEARED HER SYSTEM WITH KRUSCHEN

A striking example of the efficacy of Kruschen Salts in the removal of uric acid deposits has just come to our notice. A woman writes as follows:—

"Small knots began to come in both my fingers and on the small bones of my feet, both causing discomfort and sickness following, and I started to get rheumatic pains. My doctor was busy giving signs of some deposit. So he sent a medical man's advice, I was advised to rest and diet a while, and to assist me he recommended Kruschen Salts. Kruschen Salts, to be taken as directed, to remove the uric acid deposits in my system.

"This was eighteen months ago—when I was at a breakdown stage. I am honestly doing as he advised. I started my daily dose of Kruschen right then, and have kept it up since with a new vigour. I still take my little measure of Kruschen daily. I weigh 12st 2lbs., and stand 5 ft. 3 inches in height. No surplus conditions, no miserable to appearance, to fight for a kingdom, and be sure I tell my friends the secret of my present health."—(Mrs.) W. R. M.

Such splendid conditions are the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients of these salts assist Nature to expel these dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 4ds. and 7½c. per bottle.
